A 20th Century Portrait of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State University

Above: President Gerald Ford (to the left) visits the Iowa State University College of Veterinary Medicine at the dedication of the new building in 1976.

Above: When this photo was taken in 1962, the caption read, "Wives of future veterinarians learn more about their husbands' occupations, operating on a cat." Today a similar photo would probably read "Husbands of future veterinarians learn more about their wives' occupations." Among veterinary students, women currently outnumber men more than 2 to 1 at ISU.

Top Center: Dr. H.D. Bergman in the physiology laboratory in 1918.

Center: Known as the Veterinary Quadrangle for the greater part of this century, it was erected in 1910's. It was home of the College of Veterinary Medicine until 1976, when the new building off-campus was constructed. The above building is currently on central campus and is known as Lagomarcino Hall.

Left: Veterinary Students C.R. Deming, C.D. Hinkle, D.K. Thorpe, and H.W. Kunkle in the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory, class of 1952.
