Student Government funded a nearly $3,990 New York Times digital subscription Wednesday night, which will allow every student in the university community online access to the publication.

Senators extended debate on the bill seven times during their discussion, where senators weighed back and forth on whether students will utilize it.

“The biggest thing is we’ve got to do against Gonzaga,” Prohm said. “We’ve got to make sure we’re rebounding. We’ve got to just make sure we’rephysical up front.”

For one, senior forward De’Ante Burton has been impressive of late. Against Gonzaga on Sunday, Burton tallied a double-double, posting up 29 points and 13 rebounds.

Prohm said before the season began that he expects a double-double for the Cyclones in the near future. Burning string performance has given Prohm confidence that he can see that player.

“The 29 points were great. That may not happen every night,” Prohm said. “But the thing that we did tonight, which was impressive, was rebounding. We need that produc-

Kriska Bhagavan danna, a traveling monk from the Kriska Consciousness movement, spoke at the Iowa State Daily on Friday to spread the teachings of his beliefs with Iowa State students.

Bhagavan danna, whose legal name is Chris Ale man, was born in Freso, California, in 1964.

At the age of 22, he began traveling to college campuses across the United States to teach people about the main components of the Kriska movement. One of the main components of the Kriska movement is the idea of Kriska consciousness, which is meant to help people find true happiness in their lives and to be present in all things.

Although he lives the devotional life of a Krishna monk, Aleman’s life before he stepped up the monastic duties was just like any other man’s, complicated by an unhappy marriage.

“After my marriage ended, I was devastated. I felt from these activities — sex, drugs and rock & roll — that millions of dis	content young Americans are meant to help a person find real peace in his life. For true practitioners of yoga, however, the practice goes beyond just a physical workout, involving the following values of yoga philosophy:

Live Yoga, Love Green, a local club dedicated to this lifestyle has every Wednesday meeting.

The group does a variety of activities at its meetings. At one of its recent events, the group hosted a vegetarian cooking class and hosted a session of musical meditation.

These highlights are from the group’s Nov. 16 meeting.

At the meeting, Ankur Sharma, director of the club, explained that all yoga poses and bodily exercises are a part of living the principles of yoga, there is much more involved than just stretching.

 Weaver's proposals, which have been endorsed by prominent figures, could provide a solution to the current crisis. By implementing a plan that prioritizes reinvestment in the most impoverished areas of the city, we can help alleviate the systemic issues that lead to poverty and marginalization. The Weaver campaign's emphasis on community engagement and collaboration is particularly promising, as it recognizes the importance of empowering local residents to drive change.

However, it is crucial to address the root causes of inequality and poverty. This involves tackling systemic issues such as inadequate education, lack of access to healthcare, and inadequate economic opportunities. By addressing these structural issues, we can create lasting solutions to poverty and improve the lives of all residents, regardless of their background or socioeconomic status.

In conclusion, Weaver's proposals offer a compelling alternative to the status quo. By prioritizing reinvestment and community engagement, we can work towards a more equitable and just society. However, it is essential to continue the dialogue and consider additional strategies, such as comprehensive education reform and equitable economic policies, to address the broader challenges facing our city.

The Mayor's Office is in the process of reviewing Weaver's proposals, and we look forward to discussing them in more detail in the coming weeks. Meanwhile, we urge all residents to stay informed and engaged in the ongoing conversation about how we can best invest in our city's future.
Iowa State Prep for NCAAs

Iowa State volleyball is in familiar territory. The Cyclones are in their 11th straight NCAA Tournament, and while Iowa State’s opponent, the No. 10 Purdue Boilermakers, lost in the Big Ten Tournament semifinals, the teams are well-acquainted.

“I think our whole team is great physically, hot hitters,” Lazard said. “It’s no different than any other Big 12 game. If we follow the game plan, it’s just going to work out for us.”

The physicality and the styles of the Big 12 and the Big Ten are pretty similar,” coach Christy Mohler said. “I think just going and getting a good, physical hitter, ‘Hey, I’m going to block this ball,’ I think it’s more of a men’s mentality of, ‘Hey, I’m going to block this ball.’ I think it’s more of a men’s mentality than anything we haven’t seen before. I think it’s going to be an even match.”

Since Iowa State switched to the 6-2 system it has set up an impenetrable block against its opponents. Lazard did most of the damage as the net, recording a team-high 93 blocks on the season.

“Morgan Kuhrt can place the ball well as anyone in the Big 12 and well as anyone in the Big Ten, Conaway said. “This pick is a great matchup anywhere on the court. We’ve played all of these really good physical hitters. It’s really important to put a good block on her so we can slow her down a little bit,” Conaway said. Lazard and Samara West both have fast arms and are able to hit a quick shot, Conaway runs the slide as well as anyone in the Big 12 and Morgan Kuhrt can place the ball anywhere on the court. ‘This pick is a great matchup for us,” Lazard said. “Everyone is really excited, it’s like the burst of energy that everyone needed for the last three weeks of the season.”

Hockey tries to recapture early-season spark

The next weekend to sweep of the season in a split series against Robert Morris. Derek Moser shows his abilities in the net for the Cyclones.

The workload will be substantial in the next two weeks. The players that are available at this point will also need to pay the price to outwork their opponents to achieve what they want.

It's like a mini-season. We obviously need to focus on school but only have as many practices to focus on before winter break, so we know we need to play good hockey.

Returning from winter break, the Cyclones will face Ohio, ranked No. 8, at Ohio's Cowan Fieldhouse.

The bone-chilling cold is its own way, and we all know what comes along with that: ice.\r
\r
Having a thick sheet of ice over your windshield is not an ideal way to start any morning. Removing ice can be time-consuming, but there are a few ways to do it and prevent having to bang it in the cold temperatures whilst clipping away one piece at a time.\r
\r
Preventing the ice from forming is a whole lot easier than scraping and waiting for it to break the next morning. College kids are notorious for sleeping in and running late, so these tips can help you win a little more time on the rush to class in the morning. Jared Fulk, junior in mechanical engineering, said it would be a good idea to park in a garage or under any type of covering. “If you do this, it will be the easiest way to prevent ice from forming on a windshield.”\r
\r
“I PARKING in a garage is not an option, park is close to a building as possible,” Fulk said. “The building can act as a shield depending on what direction the wind is blowing.”\r
\r
As college kids are notorious for sleeping in and running late, tips to buy a little more time in the morning are always appreciated. Preventing the ice formation ahead of time is a little easier than scraping and waiting for it to thaw later the next morning.\r

Roderick Wade of Freeport, senior in marketing at Northern Illinois University, said he used to enjoy reading books on long car rides. “I really enjoyed the book, I could not stop reading it,” Surburg said. “I read three books on the way to and from the Grand Canyon. Some people can’t stand to be in the car. Jenny Ngo, junior in health management at Northern Illinois University, said, “I can’t read because I get motion sickness.”\r
\r
Ngo said she looks through her phone constantly when she is a passenger in the car because it is going on in the car. Browse through Face book, Instagram, Twitter or SnapChat to see if your friends are up to sithile. Flash the website to your phone. Look at the new free apps to see what’s trending.Something for game, Suds or Heads Up. These games are found to keep you busy and entertained other people in the car.\r
\r
Jenna Tomerlin, junior in mechanical engineering at Bradley University, said he used to play board games in the car. “We used to play the alphabet game where you would try and find words on billboards or street signs that started with each letter of the alphabet,” he said. “It would stink if you got the letters ‘Q’ or ‘Z’.” Sometimes car rides are long hours of driving. It is a great time to bond with the people you are close to. Use this time to get to know the people in the car, or simply just to help the driver get through the long hours of driving.\r

"My best memory at AJ's recently was dancing like there was no tomorrow. "

By Caitlin Trom

AJ's was one of the bars students weighed in on. Students were asked to choose their favorite restaurants and bars in the Ames area.

"You have to have the best value on the menu," junior George May said.

Some students said they like Es Tas and its popularity for its drinks.

"Es Tas is my go-to place for tacos," said Jacob Turner, junior in environmental science. "They have the best value on tacos."
The Iowa State Daily’s annual Student Choice is an opportunity to cast your vote for the best places around campus and the city of Ames in a variety of categories.
