HARRINGTON LEAVES IOWA STATE WRESTLING

BY DEVYN.LEESEON
and EMILY.BERCH
@iowastatedaily.com

Iowa State Community members completed 7,326 surveys for an overall response rate of 17 percent. While this is not a high enough percentage to make generalization, conductors of the survey are still confident in the validity of their results.

>> CLIMATE pg4

WRESTLING SCHEDULE

BY TREVOR.HOLBROOK
@iowastatedaily.com

In 2017-18, Harrington stuck at heavyweight for the entire season. Harrington posted a 22-13 record, including an 11-5 dual record.

Harrington finished his season at the Big 12 Championship Series. On Sunday, Iowa State needed to win both games to earn a spot in Saturday’s NCAA Tournament.

>> FIRE pg4

CAMPUS CLIMATE

BY THE NUMBERS

19% of respondents indicated they had been harassed.

11% of those who had experienced unwanted sexual contact did not report the incident.

90% of employee respondents indicated they had observed hiring practices they perceived to be unjust.

>> FIRE pg4

WORLD SERIES BOUND

BY CONNOR.FERGUSON
@iowastatedaily.com

The Iowa State club baseball team is on its way to the National Club Baseball Association (NCBA) World Series.

Iowa State defeated Missouri twice on Sunday, 10-9 and 6-5, to win the NCBA Mid-American Regional and earn its first bid to the NCBA World Series since 2015.

After losing its first game to Missouri, the Cyclones won four straight.

The Cyclones beat Nebraska and top-ten ranked Colorado State on Saturday. Once they got to Sunday, Iowa State needed to win both games to earn a spot in the national tournament.

After going down 4-0 in the first game, the Cyclones plated eight unanswered runs to go up 8-4.

Missouri would come back to tie the game at nine, but Nick Barclay earned a go-ahead hit in the ninth inning to give Iowa State a victory.

In game two, the Cyclones went down 5-3, but Anthony Suffolk plated two runs with a triple to tie things up.

Roehrick hit a go-ahead home run in the eighth, giving the Cyclones the lead.

Iowa State will participate in the NCBA World Series from May 25 to May 31 in Holly Springs, N.C.
WEATHER

MON
- Mostly cloudy, showers and thunderstorms likely
- Chance of showers and thunderstorms

TUES
- Mostly Sunny

WED
- Mostly Sunny

THURS
- Mostly Sunny

FRI
- Partly Sunny

---

IOWA STATE DAILY BUSINESS DIRECTORY

Jackson Cleaning Service
Call us at 231-3649
- Residential Cleaning
- Getting Your Home Ready for the Market
- Deep Cleaning
- Floors
- Bathrooms
- Kitchens
- Offices
- Exterior
- Refurbishing
- Deep Cleaning
- RENTALS: Guaranteed Your Rental Deposit Back!
- Service & Fraternity
- References • Insured & Bonded • 27 Years Experience • Gift Cards Available
- 3 & 4 bedroom houses for rent. Clean, good condition, appliances, new kitchens, hardwood floors in kitchens and dining areas. Good locations, both walking distance to downtown.

4 Bedroom available immediately. 2 bedroom available Aug. 1.

Call Joyce 515-460-2488 or Tim 515-450-2125

---

CALANDER

Tuesday, May 15, 7 p.m., "StoryUp! Ames/ISU Storytellers (Live Storytelling) at DG's Taphouse (Free Admission, 21+)

Wednesday, May 16, Noon to 1 p.m., "Art Walk - Art in Movement" at Jackie Honors Building, Iowa State. (Free Admission)

Wednesday, May 16, 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., North Grand Farmers’ Market, North Grand Mall, 2100 Grand Avenue, JC Penney’s parking lot

Wednesday, May 16, 8 p.m., Fred Love (Folk/Country/Americana) at London Underground (Free Admission, 21+)

Thursday, May 17, 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., Special Olympics Summer Games Opening Ceremonies, Hilton Coliseum

Thursday, May 17, 4 p.m., "Raise Your Glass and Paint It: Potty Mouth Pottery" at M-Shop, Memorial Union ($4 for students, $5 for public, 21+)

Thursday, May 17, 6 p.m., Textiles and Cloth-Making Museum Council, Mary Alive Gallery, 1015 Morrill Hall (Free Admission)

Friday, May 18, 10 a.m., Special Olympics Athletics Competitions, Lied Recreation Center

Friday, May 18, 5 p.m. "Barbecue and Beer with Matt Woods" (Blues) at Alluvial Brewing Company, 3715 W. 190th St. (21+)

Saturday, May 19, 8 a.m., North Grand Farmers’ Market, North Grand Mall, 2100 Grand Ave, JC Penney’s parking lot

Saturday, May 19, 8:30 a.m., Special Olympics Athletics Competitions, Lied Recreation Center

Wednesday, May 23-26, Odyssey of the Mind World Finals, Iowa State University

Friday, May 25, 9 a.m., Special Olympics: Iowa Summer Games, Iowa State Campus

---

CORRECTIONS

The Iowa State Daily welcomes comments and suggestions or complaints about errors that warrant correction. To submit a correction, please contact our editor at 515-294-5688 or via email at editor@iowastatedaily.com.

---

PUBLICATION BOARD: Professional members

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>College of Human Sciences</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Zhaojun Su</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>College of Liberal Arts and Sciences</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jill O'Brien</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Andrea Dahl</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>K. Rambos</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>J. Ruley</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

POSTMASTER:

50014
Lincoln Way, Suite 205, Ames, Iowa, 50014

---

FRONT PAGE WEATHER COURTESY OF AMERICAN METEOROLOGY SOCIETY
Community and City Council members clashed over a proposed capping of rental properties at last Tuesday’s City Council meeting.

The ordinance would apply to certain neighborhoods surrounding the university, and allow no more than 25 percent of properties therein to be rented out.

More than 60 Ames community members filled the city council chambers for the weekly city council meeting on May 8.

The stated goals of the ordinance are to stabilize local housing markets and preserve a high quality of life in the community. Those who oppose the rental cap believe these goals might not be accomplished, and instead the cap would bring about adverse effects upon minorities.

Mayor John Halla opened the floor for the public to express their support or opposition to the rental capping ordinance.

“We don’t feel this proposal will succeed at its goals,” said Jim Nelson, Ward Four representative. “It’s hard for me to support this when we don’t understand the full scope of this decision.”

The council opened itself to internal debate before the chamber decision.

The next City Council meeting will be held Tuesday, May 22.
This fire caused around $50,000 in park damages and the restrooms will have to be temporarily replaced with portable ones. The second fire happened May 9 inside a detached garage at 12:15 a.m. According to the press release from the City of Ames, fire crews arrived at the scene shortly after a neighbor heard “popping” noises and looked outside their window to see a fire. The press release outlined the amount of damages created by the fire: “The garage sustained significant interior damage to 50 percent of the structure and contents inside the garage. A house located east of the garage sustained heat damage from the fire. A car parked near the garage was also damaged by the heat of the fire. Damages are estimated at $50,000. There were no injuries reported.” Deputy Fire Chief Paul Sandoval said there was no new information on the fire, as it was still under investigation as of 1 p.m. on May 10. “These things happen in sports,” Sandoval said about the frequency of these fires. “It isn’t strange to have two fires in a week, but it is definitely something that will put us on notice.”

Here is the breakdown of the numbers.

Harassment

Nineteen percent or 1,375 respondents indicated they had personally experienced harassment defined as exclusionary, intimidating, offensive and/or hostile conduct that had interfered with their ability to work, learn or live at Iowa State University within the past year. Thirty percent said it was due to their gender or gender identity, 21 percent or 283 respondents said it was based on their position or status. Twenty-nine percent, or 2,107 survey respondents, noted it was based on nepotism, intimidating, offensive and/or hostile conduct that had personally experienced harassment defined as exclusionary, intimidating, offensive and/or hostile conduct that had interfered with their ability to work, learn or live at Iowa State University within the past year.

Unwanted Sexual Encounters

Eleven percent or 770 survey respondents indicated on the survey they had experienced unwanted sexual contact/ conduct. Seventy-three percent or 241 respondents said it was based on their ethnicity and 20 percent, 274 respondents, said it was based on their position or status. Twenty-one percent, or 689 employee respondents, indicated they had observed discriminatory hiring at Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Of those who had experienced unwanted sexual contact, 90 percent, 193 respondents, did not report the incidents. The main reasons respondents gave for not reporting unwanted sexual contact were “fear of consequences,” “blamed themselves,” saying it was “no big deal” and they “expected no response.”

Barriers for Marginalized Students

With regard to campus facilities, 28 percent, or 44 trans- gender/genderqueer/non-binary respondents experienced barriers in restrooms and 22 percent, approximately 35 respondents, experienced barriers in housing and signage within the past year. With regard to campus facilities, 15 percent, or 124 students with disabilities perceived barriers in housing and signage within the past year. Of those who had experienced unwanted sexual contact, 22 percent, or 872 undergraduate student respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University. Of those who had experienced unwanted sexual contact, 22 percent, or 872 undergraduate student respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Of those who had experienced unwanted sexual contact, 90 percent, 193 respondents, did not report the incidents.

Staff Perceptions of Campus Climate

Twenty-one percent, or 689 employee respondents, indicated they had observed hiring practices at Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considered leaving Iowa State University they perceived to be unjust. Twenty-seven percent or 198 of faculty respondents, and 50 percent, or 411 faculty respondents, had seriously considere
Be thankful for your mother(s)

BY MEGAN PETZOLD
@iowastatedaily.com

As Mother’s Day wraps up, I am left to think about how much I appreciate mine and those I’ve come across. Unfortunately, there are some mothers who go unappreciated; after all the scary, painful and exhausting experiences mothers may undergo for their children, I don’t understand how any mother can go unrecognized.

This holiday began with the ancient Greeks and Romans, who held festivals to honor the mother goddesses, and there have been many variations of this celebration of mothers in history, such as the Catholic festival known as “Mothering Sunday.”

Mother’s Day is about celebrating the person who has cared for you since before you could care for yourself and showing appreciation for all the late nights and the amount of effort it takes to raise a child. And if that person for you didn’t undergo pregnancy or raise you from the very beginning, they still have put their boots on the ground to make sure that you were raised in a healthy environment.

Having a child doesn’t just change the life of these women for the following 18 years; it has a profound impact on the rest of their lives. Mothers do so much for their children and families that they deserve more than just one day of praise — but Mother’s Day is a great start to show our mothers just how much we appreciate them.

There are numerous things we can do to show how much we appreciate our mothers, but buying them flowers and chocolates shouldn’t be the only way we demonstrate our love. Just doing something with them — or making them something simple, like a card — would mean the world to any mother.

It’s almost like when we were children, bringing home a piece of paper with a mess of colors on it, without any discernible shape or pattern. Even if it looked as though we accidentally dropped a bunch of paint on a piece of paper, our mothers thought it was the best thing ever — simply because it was made by their child.

With everything our mothers do for us, taking one day out of every year to appreciate their tireless efforts to make our lives something we can be proud of shouldn’t be something we shy away from. Anything would make your mother feel happy and appreciated — whether it’s as small as making a card for them, or as big as spending your entire day with them.

It doesn’t matter what you do — just do something to make sure your mother feels appreciated and loved.

COURTESY OF MEGAN PETZOLD/ IOWA STATE DAILY

Columnist Petzold reminds us to appreciate our mothers.

Congressmen shouldn’t have term limits

BY ZACHARY MASS,
zmass@iastate.edu

Few things have excited frustrated voters in recent times more than the idea of term limits for our elected representatives in Congress. At first glance, it certainly seems like a good idea. After all, we limit our President to two terms in office, why not those who serve us in Congress?

First of all, we need a strong Congress that can stand up to question and outlast presidents, government officials and lobbyists. Within our federal government, Congress has almost infinite power to decide how much money should be spent where, to make changes in the institutional and procedural knowledge they have built up over their years in service. Without their more experienced colleagues in the executive branch.

New legislators will quickly find that there is a steep learning curve in understanding the ins and outs of efficient congressional maneuvering - that’s why, whether you agree with their politics or not, long serving members of Congress like Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa Chuck Schumer, D-New York and John McCain, R-Arizona are beneficial to the inner workings of Capitol Hill. They are effective at carrying out their agendas, they understand and love the game of congressional politics and their expertise in their specific areas of policy - areas they have been immersed in for years - is unmatched.

In contrast, new members of Congress take a significant amount of time to fully understand the inner machinations of our vast government; with a monstrous federal budget of $3.8 trillion, countless laws, regulations and resolutions and about three million people working within the government, it’s no wonder that Congress can be daunting for a newcomer.

Instituting term limits would keep many of these veteran legislators from continuing to serve, thus losing the institutional and procedural knowledge they have built up over their years in service. Without their more senior colleagues to lean on for such knowledge, who will the larger number of younger, less experienced congressmen turn to for such information?

While many argue that term limits will decrease the power of special interests in government, the opposite is true. In 2010, a study by researchers at Wayne State University revealed that after term limits came into effect in Michigan, the influence of lobbyists actually increased, state legislators were relying on them more for information about topics of bills with which they were less familiar. We want politicians who can stand up to lobbyists, not ones who look to them when they don’t know what’s going on.

Further, introducing term limits also makes our elected officials less likely to compromise. Younger Congressmen don’t know their brethren from across the aisle as well as seasoned veterans do, resulting in less personal pull and friendships; these are the roots of bipartisan compromises and deals that our country sorely needs.

For example, Republican President Ronald Reagan and Democrat Speaker of the House Tip O’Neill were drinking buddies and worked together to pass bipartisan solutions; these relationships are far less likely to happen when legislators will only just have befriended each other before their time in office is cut short by term limits.

Ultimately, our representatives are re-elected for a reason, and that’s because a majority of their constituents think they are the best person to represent them in our government. Taking long-serving public servants off the ballot decreases the amount of choice that we as voters have and, if the best person for the job is the one currently serving, voters should be able to re-elect them.

While term limits can initially seem like a sure-fire solution to rid us of the lobbyist influence and incompetent legislators that plague Congress today, the result can very likely be the opposite, leading us to an even worse place than we are now. States like Idaho and Utah have recognized this, doing away with their term limits statute after instituting them. Term limits are not the solution to the problems of our government; rather, the solution is responsible citizens, who choose not to reelect bad politicians and reward good representatives with reelection.
Iowa State tennis declines to renew coach Espinosa

BY NOAH ROHLFING
@iowastatedaily.com

After 11 seasons with the Iowa State women’s tennis team, the Cyclones won’t renew Armando Espinosa’s contract. The announcement was made on Tuesday by Senior Associate Athletics Director Dr. Calli Sanders. The Cyclones finished 9-17 this season and finished with no conference dual wins. During Espinosa’s tenure as head coach, Iowa State compiled a 96-144 record with a 12-84 Big 12 record.

“Armando has been a loyal member of our athletics program for many years, and we are grateful for his efforts as head coach this last decade,” Sanders said in a release. “Unfortunately, we just haven’t seen the competitive progress in our tennis program that we expected and that our student-athletes deserve. We recently opened a brand new practice center dedicated to our program and really felt that would inject some new life into the program, but that hasn’t materialized.”

Cyclones end softball season with a loss to Oklahoma State

BY NOAH ROHLFING
@iowastatedaily.com

Iowa State women’s softball season came to a close with a 5-1 loss to Oklahoma State on Saturday in the fifth-place game of the Big 12 Tournament. The game started off brightly for the Cyclones as sophomore Sami Williams hit a lead-off home run (her 12th of the year) to give the Cyclones a 1-0 lead.

Iowa State held off the Cowgirls until the bottom of the third inning, when Oklahoma State took advantage of a Cyclone error to score a run.

That’s an accomplishment the team has only had once in program history, when they qualified for the 2015 NCBA World Series in Paducah, Ky.

“I know what this team can do,” said Iowa State baseball president Cole Henry. “I know what this team is capable of. Moving forward, I think we are capable of beating many teams.”

Mi isn’t just a regular student-athlete at Iowa State.

The Kobe, Japan, native moved to Ames two years ago to live with his aunt. Mi fell in love with the school and eventually enrolled. “This a nice place to study and a great environment,” Mi said. “She just introduced me to this college and I came here.”

The move hasn’t come without challenges for Mi, however.

Mi has only been studying English for two years, and he still has trouble speaking it. “They’re very kind guys and I’m not good at English, but they’re such nice guys,” Mi said.

His unique name has led to his teammates giving him a nickname. “We just call him ‘J,’” Henry said. “That’s a lot of times you look for in a pitcher and command over off-speed [pitches] is what we look for especially. There has been a number of times this year just for instance where you look at J and the way he throws.”

At the plate, Mi has been consistent, hitting .236 with 12 doubles and 27 runs batted in. He hit .375 in last weekend in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

“This a nice place to study and a great environment,” Mi said. “She just introduced me to this college and I came here.”

The move hasn’t come without challenges for Mi, however.

Mi has only been studying English for two years, and he still has trouble speaking it. “They’re very kind guys and I’m not good at English, but they’re such nice guys,” Mi said.

His unique name has led to his teammates giving him a nickname. “We just call him ‘J,’” Henry said. “That’s a lot of times you look for in a pitcher and command over off-speed [pitches] is what we look for especially. There has been a number of times this year just for instance where you look at J and the way he throws.”

Mi is currently second on the team in earned run average (ERA) amongst starting pitchers, allowing 1.44 earned runs per start. For comparison, the top ERA in the MLB’s National League belongs to St. Louis’ Carlos Martinez at 1.62. “It’ll be a 3-0 count and he feels confident throwing a change-up to a batter,” Henry said. “That speaks a lot to the amount of control that he has.”

However, Mi doesn’t think anything of it, he’s just doing what he knows how to do. “I just want to try to do my best and be part of the team,” Mi said simply.

Iowa State will be looking on Mi’s success later this month.
HIKING HIGHLIGHT
A visit to Ames’ own Ada Hayden Heritage Park

BY JILL O’BRIEN
@iowastatedaily.com

What was once a rock quarry in northwest Ames is now a park with hiking trails and two lakes, spanning across 430 acres. Located at 5205 Grand Ave., Ada Hayden Heritage Park opened in July 2004 and is home to three miles of hard surface paths, two miles of crushed rock paths, a parking lot, two lakes, restrooms and a pedestrian bridge, according to the City of Ames. The park was named for botanist Ada Hayden, the first woman to receive a doctorate from Iowa State. Part of the park was owned by Hayden’s parents during her childhood, as well as an outdoor lab for her courses in ecology and botany while attending the university, according to unitestateshistory.com.

The park’s two lakes can also be used for boating and fishing, and the park is home to multiple species of birds such as loons, bald eagles, sand hill cranes and white pelicans.

Planning a visit to the park?
Here are the dos, don’ts and need-to-know’s about Ada Hayden Heritage Park:

Hours: 6 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.
Handicap accessible: Yes
Restrooms: Yes
Boating: electric motors only. No boats fueled by gasoline allowed.
Fishing: Only allowed from bridge
Dumping live bait prohibited
Fish cleaning prohibited on-site
Alcohol: prohibited
Pets: Dogs and cats allowed on leash
Camping: prohibited
Swimming: prohibited

Plan on hiking the trails at Ada Hayden?
Here’s a quick guide to the length of Ada Hayden’s five trails, so you know just what you’re getting into:

Crushed Rock Upland Trail: 1.2 miles
Outside Loop Hard Surface Trail: 2.8 miles
North Loop Trail: 1.4 miles
South Loop Trail: 1.8 miles
Figure 8 Trail: 3.2 miles

JILL O’BRIEN/IOWA STATE DAILY
Ada Hayden Heritage Park is located in northwest Ames and spans 430 acres.
“We Treat You Like Family”

Dr. Niegsch & Dr. Garman

- We work with all insurance companies
- Affordable payment plans
- If no dental insurance, member club value program
- Free parking & bike rack out front
- CyRide #6 Brown route

#1
6 Years in a Row!
2013-2018

DentistryAtSomerset.com
515-446-3713