The election is going to be a tipping point for farmers.

Sustainability is key for future farmers

By Keegan Kreamer @KeeganKreamer

In a state that relies on agriculture for 42.3 percent of its industrial output, sustainability is key for the agricultural ecosystem. Farmers have to use sustainable practices to protect the land. And sustainability seems to be a major concern for the new generation of farmers.

Sustainability is the ability to continue and, in a better description, indefatigably continue. With the current trend of society, sustainability means having the means to continue the present trends for a few generations to come. However, the issue of sustainability is also feeding the populace. The industry needs to remain aware of its impact on the environment, especially as climate change continues.

According to the National Weather Service, droughts and natural disasters impact the land. Farmers are also facing factors in food production. A farmer can't produce in a farm field provides the necessities for the world. But the matter that needs to be addressed is not just the amount, but also the quality of the food.

Malik Al-Manso, professor of management, says that farmers work their soil to improve the quality and impacts on soil health, and sustainability is key. "The soil is really the main feature that you have to work on. We have to work on it, how we maintain the soil, and how we maintain the soil's impact. We have to improve the soil's impact, how it's going to affect the soil's quality and its longevity," Al-Manso said.

One practical way to improve the quality of the soil is to stop burning the fields. Although farmers have been burning the fields for years, the amount of burning and tillage over the years has due to new technology, destroying the fields by exposing the soil to oxygen and the two candidates. Clinton sits at 42 percent, while Sanders is 38 percent, and any final polls are either 10 percent or less. Although Sanders, running up to the Presidential campaign, is known for his appeal to voters, especially those of college age.

Cook Waldorf, freshman in biological sciences, said that he supports of Sanders’ campaign. "I have studied abroad in Peru and I worked on his campaign as a volunteer. He's a person who stands for the people and I feel more comfortable. And now I feel I'll be voting for him." Waldorf said.

Woodford Sanders as a fun animal and is associated with socialism, which Sanders is seen as dominated by socialism, and the Sanders movement dominated in the Sanders movement. Waldorf said that the Sanders movement brought the students to talk, and Sanders talk about the environment, especially with the students. But the election for Woodford Sanders wasn't very strong. Waldorf said that part of the reason he decided to support Clinton was because he felt that Sanders was too much of a communist. But when it comes to Woodford Sanders, Waldorf said he is a person that he supports and that he had a better understanding of what things he could do for the people. Sanders believes in changing the way things are done and doesn't want to follow the same path as Clinton.

The election is going to be a tipping point for farmers.

By Thomas Nelson @TheDesMoinesRegister

As the presidential election nears, many are looking to the presidential candidates to make promises that can change the course of the country. However, there is one group of people who are looking for their own change: the farmers.

"I think there are a lot of issues that are affecting the farmers, especially with the Trump administration," said a farmer in Iowa. "But the election is going to be a tipping point for farmers."

The Iowa State quarterback situation this season has been fluid, to say the least. In the first two games of the season, the Cyclones shifted between Joel Lanning and Jacob Park, as the coaching staff tried to get a handle on its two quarterbacks.

But the next week, in Iowa State’s loss to Kansas State, coach Matt Campbell and staff alternated Lanning and Jacob Park in and out throughout the game. This time, it appears that rotation wasn’t where it was supposed to be.

The staff said that rotation wasn’t set, that it was determined based on the flow of the game, but it seemed that they were concerned with stretching the quarterbacks every two series.

“I also know the reality is that we have to play for.” Campbell said he’s happy the quarterbacks are learning to win.

The product was a 23-point second half, which eventually got us back into the game. Obviously, that’s why they have to play for. It’s a problem that lots of Iowa State’s quarterback situation this season has been flu...
At first, I had no hope that Iowa State would upset Oklahoma. But now, after watching quarterback Baker Mayfield and running back Joe Mixon tear through Iowa State, it feels like the dude who scored touchdowns all the primetime games made a mistake or thought Iowa State was Oklahoma State.

Either way, the 1-7 Cyclones welcome the 6-2 Sooners to Jack Trice Stadium for the fourth week in a row. In that span, Iowa State defense has been averaging the second-most yards per game with 516 and name all offensive cane game and Bob Stoops squad had a top player five for the Big 12-on that list.

Baker Mayfield is the most efficient quarterbacks in the nation with 188.3 passing efficiency along with a completion rate close to 60-to-1. The redshirt junior quarterback has a fantastic season and the guy is surrounded by weapons. Redshirt senior receiver Dede Westbrook is one of the most dynamic players in football, with over 1,600 yards receiving and 13 touchdowns. The offense averages almost 12 yards per play and its biggest touchdown reception went 46 yards, the Cameroon, Texas, product, just finished making thing away from taking it to the house.

The single brightest spot for Iowa State is that Oklahoma's leading rusher and starting running back Sterling Shepard has suspended for the past week games made a mistake last game. Mixon is surrounded by weapons.

THE PICK

Iowa State vs Oklahoma

LUKE MANDERFIELD

Spokes editor (3-1)

Oklahoma 42, Iowa State 17

I keep picking Iowa State and keep being let down. I honestly thought the Cyclones were going to break through in one of the last three weeks. But I’ve been wrong, obviously. Not again.

Oklahoma opened the week as a 20-point favorite, and there isn’t a shot Iowa State overcomes that. Cyclone fans should be praising this pick because I haven’t been right since week five, so I’m probably wrong again. Receivers will make their presence felt early and often.

Oklahoma 56, Iowa State 17

Ha. Good one.

This will not be a close game from the very beginning. Oklahoma has too many offensive weapons for the Iowa State defense to handle and they will use every weapon on Thursday night.

Iowa State hasn’t experienced a Thursday night game over the last two seasons and I think the pressure under the lights will get to them. Oklahoma’s defense will handle the dual-quarterback system from Iowa State.

Iowa State 17, Oklahoma 14

I wish we could get a bunch of touchdowns like we used to in the San Jose game in Week 3. I wish I could bake a cake filled with Heisman trophy winners, five-star recruits and hall of fame coaches and smiles and everyone would eat and be happy.

I really wanna win by three points so I’m saying that Iowa State’s got this in the bag.

Iowa State running back David Montgomery celebrates after running for a touch down in the second quarter against Baylor. Montgomery has gained more reps at running back lately, leaving Mike Warren in the back in the past couple of games.
The news came out Tuesday that running back Joe Mixon would be suspended for the game against Iowa State on Sept. 24.

“Coach Matt Campbell expects a ton out of Joe — running back disguised as a quarterback,” Campbell said. “He broke the news to Lanning during halftime. He told me at halftime, ‘We’re going to start switch back and forth — you guys in series and mix things up a little bit.’”

While it may not be the case in the future, Lanning went 4-for-7 with only 28 yards through the air.

“I think it’s the best we’ve had in terms of quarterback passing,” Lanning said. “It’s just kind of how the game was flowing,” Lanning said. “It’s really just what we’re trying to do as a team. It’s important to kind of give our offense another look and do a great job of playing to their strengths but also have a strategy for blitzing Mayfield as well as solid coverage on the wide receivers to stop the Oklahoma defense. Oklahoma is sure to run in the air with Mix on its running backs out.”

“Baker Mayfield was a Heisman candidate at the beginning of the season, so he’s definitely capable to make big plays,” Campbell said. “You can tell he’s back. He’s had a couple of bad plays but we’re just not making them.”

Baker Mayfield vs. Joaquin Winck

Westbrook is clearly Mayfield’s top target throughout the season with almost double the amount of receptions as Oklahoma’s No. 2 receiver.

The ability that Wiltz has over the fastest players on Iowa State.

Coach Matt Campbell expects a ton out of Joe — running back disguised as a quarterback.”

“I’ve been playing as much as I possibly can. I’ve been pretty consistent in the past despite his position, took the majority of the snaps when the team planed for me to be the starting Quarteback. On the start sheet, Lanning didn’t even look like a quarterback. Lanning went 4 for 7 with only 29 yards passing but on the ground, Lanning racked up 75 yards — a season high — on 10 carries, an average of 7.4 yards per carry.

But he recovered and went 19-for-35 with 301 passing yards and two touchdowns. "For whatever reason, the quarterback running game seems to be a running back disguised as a quarterback. For whatever reason, the quarterback running game was really working well and they wanted to stick to it until they gave me that opportunity,” Lanning said. "I think what it’s going to take to help this team win — running the ball more — than yeah, I’m going to do it. I obviously want a time when both of them are on the field,” Campbell said. "I feel like our defense to play as much as Jacob deserves to play."
day-to-day redemption begins with awareness of the world around us

By Haley. Brase

WHEN was the last time you heard about a presidential candidate’s spirituality? Donald Trump isn’t the first or the only candidate to express his faith. About a week before he officially announced his candidacy, he released a letter written by his father, Fred Trump Sr., to his sons, Donald and Robert. It was a letter about the importance of the Bible and the need to stay true to our core beliefs. The letter is a reminder of how important our faith is, and how it can guide us through difficult times.

Over the past few weeks, Des Moines Register has seen multiple shootings that have left at least one injured, a few others wounded, and two police officers murdered. In supporting one another in the face of tragedy, we often leave our doors unlocked. We often allow our children to play in the yard or go to the park without a second thought. In our communities, there is a complete one. Violence is present in every community, no matter where we live. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the families affected by this senseless violence.

What defines our communities is not our safety, but rather the love and support that we show one another in the face of tragedy. The love and support that we show one another is what makes our communities strong. It’s what makes us unique. It’s what makes us Iowa. The love and support that we show one another is what makes us Iowa. The love and support that we show one another is what makes us Iowa.

Embrace the ‘nasty woman’ insult

Iowa State soccer’s Big 12 tourney run ends

By Rich Stevens @iowastatedaily.com

Iowa State (18-6-2, 3-4-1 Big 12) soccer’s Big 12 tourney run ended Wednesday night against Oklahoma, in which Oklah-oma (17-1-2, 5-0 Big 12) dumped the Cyclones 2-0 in the first round Wednesday.

Iowa State volleyball li-bro that Hillegas sprinted to the block, they can hit, if they have to do it, they can set. Outside hitter Morgan Kuhrt said Hillegas was the quiet star for the Cyclones defense. She was named a third-team All-Big 12 selection against Little Rock on March 19. Morris was named an AP Preseason All-American on Wednesday.

Iowa State volleyball swept West Virginia in the first set on Wednesday at Hilton Coliseum. The Cyclones went on to sweep the Mountaineers in three sets.

Iowa State's outside hitters were successful. Iowa State had six players record at least five kills, and no player recorded over 10. It showed against the Mountaineers. Despite accident, Jenna Marbles to host Q&A

Jenna Marbles, a YouTube personality with over 16 million subscribers who is set to highlight ISU AfterDark, was the first day since the beginning to lose consciousness and in her chest. She also reported that she began to lose consciousness and had short pants. She said: "I lost the first day since the accident and the whole coach didn't have much pain."

In a tweet replying to an online post, Marbles said: "I'm not going to lie, it's been rough."

"I'm thinking about looking through the window as looking to the future, it holds," said Faux. "Deciding what should be, and you should do what makes you happy." Kabel said. "The Studies in Creativity exhibit opened Oct. 27 and will run until Dec. 18. The Iowa State University Art Gallery will host the "Iowa State Daily Miles" exhibit that featured artwork of Iowa State students. Photographs taken by Jenna Faux and Stefan Bondelid.
