Iowa State tight ends coach and recruiting coordinator Alex Golesh was named in a lawsuit from former Illinois lineman Anthony Durkin claiming coaches forced him to practice improperly. Durkin was injured in a game and lost his scholarship; the Chicago Sun-Times reported.

Golesh was the tight ends coach and recruiting coordinator for the Illini at the time.

While Durkin was discussing shoulder surgery with doctors in early 2013, coaches at Illinois forced him to keep practicing, which caused further damage to his injury, the Chicago Sun-Times reported. He underwent shoulder surgery in September 2013. Doctors advised Durkin to rest and rehab his shoulder during the spring and summer and caused more damage to his injury until August 2014, when he dislocated his shoulder, the article said.

He was told by doctors that he could no longer play for the team and was released from the team in early 2014. Golesh told Durkin to sign a release from his scholarship in "no other representations," according to the Sun-Times. Durkin signed the release, which absolved the university of any charges with a second shoulder surgery and Durkin's scholarship, the Sun-Times said.

The suit claims that Golesh, along with three doctors, Beckman and the school's athletic director, were "negligent in not ensuring Durkin's safety," the Sun-Times reported.

Get to know the 2016 vice presidential candidates

With Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump neck-and-neck for the presidency, knowing where their vice presidential nominees stand on certain key choices can certainly sway votes and be a deciding factor in the election.

Kaine has over 20 years of political experience, Kaine and Pence both have developed their own unique policies and stances on the presidential nominees.

For example, Clinton and Kaine fundamentally differ on abortion, which Clinton fully supports, while Pence has said that supporting a woman's right to choose would be a Vote Yes decision. While Pence has said that supporting a woman's right to choose would be a Vote Yes decision.

With their many years of political experience, Kaine went on to receive his J.D. from Harvard Law School in 1983. Since then, Kaine has worked his way up through the government, from mayor to lieutenant governor, then governor to chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

In December 2014, and on Dec. 7, 2015, doctors advised Durkin to rest and rehab his shoulder during the spring and summer and cause more damage to his injury until August 2014, when he dislocated his shoulder, the article said.

If the advertisements put out by both sides are to be believed, the candidate on the right is a sexual, racist, xenophobic sexual assaulter, and the one on the left is a boring, thieving murderer.

But the apparent lessen of the 2016 election trend seems to be that other forces in the middle, generally made up of moderates, independents and undecided voters, are swinging in a lot of different directions. “I can’t wait for Nov. 9,” Iowa City resident Kaleb Vanfosson, 22, said.

On Saturday, Dalene Scheman, president of the Young Democratic Socialists group on campus, held a rally in Ames, where Bernie Sanders was scheduled to speak. Sanders, the “ typical grip of what it’s like to be an average person.”

Lucy Jordan
Incumbent explains herself

By Emily Hammer

Since 2011, Lucy Jordan has been serving as the Story County Auditor. Now, she is running as the incumbent candidate for the Story County Auditor position.

Although Martin has noticed that many people might not have much time to debate mostly with politicians because of their roles in the election, she wanted to clarify that she deals more with the new voters.

During her time as auditor, Martin has brought through a precise way which allows county officeholders to vote in the elections they have.

She also suggests that the records and maintains those.

“Of what the auditor’s role is, the people’s work, of course, they’re not a part of the clean-up, and it’s not a clean process in any place.”

She explains that changes are going to be expensive, so you want to do it right the first time. She explains that it’s okay to invest in a position, even if you’re not sure of it.

Another job Martin has on her plan includes working with human resources and financial teams to automate those processes.

“I think we have a great system here.”

She plans to begin working with human resources and county financial teams to automate these procedures.

“I want to make sure the integrity of the election is maintained.”

“Much of what the auditor does, the public doesn’t see, but we try to do it right the first time.”

Martin also says that if you’re a part of the government and continue to ask for more, you’re not going to make it right.

“I think that the country is headed in the right direction.”

There are a lot of things that can happen in seven years.

When a person calls 9-1-1, they expect the dispatcher to provide appropriate assistance to the person who called and the people who respond to the emergency to ensure everyone is safe. However, if the situation involves a person experiencing a mental health crisis, the response may not always be appropriate.

The first police officers to arrive at a scene are often not trained to deal with mental health issues, and they may not have the proper training to prevent, rather than just respond to, a mental health crisis. This lack of training can be a problem for police rather than for the person experiencing a mental health crisis. Meanwhile, the police department itself does not have the resources to provide proper training to their officers.

In the case of drug overdoses, we see a similar issue. Instead of calling for medical emergency personnel to respond, police are often called to the scene to deal with the situation. This can be dangerous for both the person experiencing the overdose and the police officers who arrive.

Finally, we are putting the person experiencing a mental health crisis under the spotlight, making it easier for people to recognize and understand the situation.

This is not an argument that police should not respond to emergencies. However, it is a call to action for law enforcement agencies to provide proper training to their officers to deal with mental health crises. By doing so, we can ensure that the people who respond to emergencies are better equipped to handle these situations and provide the appropriate care and support that is needed.

Changes in the works

By Sean Sears

Lynx changes are on the way for the team's winter season.

Coach Kevin Jackson said his lineup would change from the South Dakota State game to the North Dakota game.

Jackson said he will continue to change his lineup even after the NCAA sanctions.

Iowa State lost to SDSU 27-19 on Friday in Brookings, South Dakota. Then the Cyclones traveled to SDSU and lost 24-16 Saturday.

“We have to get the four guys in there so we can get the eight guys in there,” Jackson said after the SDSU game.

Iowa State's lineup has been inconsistent during the season.

Our guys weren't successful at all. It's been a bad performance. We're really disappointing on the floor that it hasn't worked.

Iowa State also had four starters on the bench during the game.

Those starters were saturated with minutes.

While Iowa State's starting five was on the court for a majority of the game, the bench didn't have many opportunities to show.

The 2016 fall season for the Iowa State tennis team had its fair share of ups and downs. The Cyclones started the year a little shaky but picked up some momentum toward the end of the season with solid performances all around and a tournament win from freshman Mary Cancini.

Here’s a list of the five major takeaways from the fall and things to watch for in the spring season:

1. Players are still organizing and planning who they are and how they want to be perceived. Espinosa was pleased with the growth of the team in the fall, but said there is still a lot more work to be done.

2. The fall was focused on making the proper decisions. Espinosa was satisfied with the transition, but a third team that was hard to find.

3. The search for doubles pairings is on the right path. Espinosa designated the entire weekend to putting the pieces together. We need to do a better job making the big decisions during practice. Then what we do in practice translates into competitive situations during a match. We need to do a better job making that transition.”

4. The progression of the younger players is finding doubles pairings. In the spring, the team will continue finding doubles pairings. Two teams emerged early in the season, but a third team that Espinosa was satisfied with was hard to find.

5. Budai’s pursuit of the record book. Espinosa, who described what she thinks fueled the success and her hopes for the spring, added that Espinosa also wanted to get his young players out on the court and experience the tournament and work to be done.

One of the biggest stories away from the top performers was Budai, who described what she thinks fueled the success and her hopes for the spring.

“I think this fall was mainly about trying to find everyone’s game,” Budai said. “We were finding out who we are as players and sticking to that. Being consistent is important and we need to stick with it. If a match doesn’t go your way, that’s okay. Just let your young player grow and find out who they are and hopefully it will go your way in the spring.”

Five takeaways from tennis fall season

Iowa State senior Samantha Budai leans in for a shot against Kansas at the Forker Tennis Courts on April 10. Budai has been a top performer for the Iowa State tennis team this fall season, with a second-place finish at the Gopher Invitational on Sept. 22-25 and an invitation to the 2016 ITA FallAscender Invitational in West Des Moines.

Budai is currently in third place in all-time doubles wins, and just 12 wins away from taking an outright lead in that category. She is currently in third place in all-time doubles wins, and just 12 wins away from taking an outright lead in that category.

“I want to be more consistent with my serves,” Budai said. “I’ve had some really good wins and then some really bad losses, so I want to be a little more consistent.”

“I am focused a lot more on the game. I want to get us to win a second-straight conference title last year, it was the first time in a long time and we need to keep that going.”
Affirmative action stands.

Kaine's views on them for several years.

Kaine has maintained his support for traditional marriage and opposed civil rights for women. Kaine also insisted in favoring restrictions on interstate gun sales. He wants to bring entertainment to the country.

Kaine also went back on his gun control stance, going from supporting the Second Amendment in 2005 to favoring restrictions on the size of ammunition magazines.

Kaine opposed defining same-sex marriage. He also supported adoption by same-sex couples.

A second non-partisan review of the United States “affirmative action stance.”

Kaine strongly favors reauthorizing the Violence Against Women Act and speeding up approval for projects regarding forest thinning.

Both Kaine and Pence support strict gun laws. Pence has been against high capacities, voting several times to lower and harass and mineers have also been able to get approval for some vaccines.

I think this is a matter better left to parents in consultation with their physicians about the HPV vaccine.

Both Kaine and Pence are in full support of adoption and foster care, but Kaine also rejected that the Constitution should be amended to define marriage as between same-sex couples. They have also both said parents should be able to have an opt-out provision for some vaccines.

The vice president’s stance on them for several years.
