The Ames Police Department has arrested a CyRide bus driver in the hit-and-run accident that killed an ISU student in December.

Emma Jacobs, a freshman in business, was struck by a CyRide bus near the crosswalk of Ash Avenue and Lincoln Way on Dec. 14. Benjamin D. Clague, 23 of Gilbert, Iowa, was arrested at his home Wednesday morning.

"It's very sad we have the driver of the vehicle that struck Emma," saiditur Kle.

Jacobs was struck at 7:04 a.m. Dec. 14 as she was walking from Buchanan Hall to campus for her final, police said. An ISU police officer found the 18-year-old lying in the road. She was taken to Mary Greeley Medical Center, where she died.

The bus number 576 was on the Gold Route, said Sherry Kena, director of CyRide. No one stopped the driver on the bus at the time Jacobs was hit.

At the next stop, Turtle Creek, the driver said she hit the brakes and did not see a vehicle coming. He continued on his route. It wasn't until his next stop that he realized she was hit.

"Due to the rain, the glare of the lights, the weather conditions definitely played a role," said "However, that doesn't excuse the fact that he didn't come forward."

Brad Jacobs, Emma's father, said even though they were somewhat relieved an arrest was made.

"In a situation like this, we have to wonder exactly about what happened," Brad Jacobs said.

Ames Police have made a report that Story County court records show texts sent out an email to explain the thinking behind her vote.

Sen. Matthew Teubert said he was happy to see Student Government relationship be decided at the next Senate meeting. The funding would add two new light poles, as well as replace all light bulbs in Carver with LED bulbs. StuGov also plans to allocate funding for improved lighting in the area between Carver and the library, and all light bulbs in Schilletter Village.

"I want this body to strengthen how the university sees us, how we see us," Breitbarth said.

Student Government relationship with the board. However, he said he was happy to see Student Government relationship be decided at the next Senate meeting.

"I think this body continues to prove that we are a real body," he said.

Benjamin D. Clague was charged with leaving the scene of an accident involving a death, a fault in communication of a traffic control device, a simple misdemeanor.

"Due to the rain, the glare of the lights, the weather conditions definitely played a role," Clague said.

"I was happy to see Student Government relationship be decided at the next Senate meeting. These funding bills will be decided at the next Senate meeting."

Iowa State to celebrate MLK through lecture

By Eric Wirth
@IOWAStateDaily

Thursday is event number three out of four in this year’s Martin Luther King, Jr. Legacy Conversation. The keynote speaker for this year’s event, Abida S. Gordon, will give her speech at 3:30 p.m. in the Sun Rooms of the Memorial Union.

Gordon is a teacher, writer and activist, and her work delves into how faith and culture meet in society. Gordon looks specifically at spirituality and popular culture. Her work delves into how faith and culture meet in society. She accredits her drive to her thirst for social justice.

In addition to Gordon’s lecture, the Ad Hoc Committee on One Community Awards will meet Thursday to discuss awards to the state’s three universities. One Community Awards will be given to universities that offer programs that offer students to learn about options and diversity.

Poll shows majority favors executive action

Thursday, Jan. 21, 2016

A poll found that 57 percent of Americans favored the executive order President Obama made to require background checks online and at gun shows, in addition to making it easier to trace the origin of fire arms if the gun is involved in a killing. Iowa State Daily

"We regulate all other aspects of the art of killing," said Dan MacDowell, justice and history and president of the ISU Hunting Club. "Why wouldn't we do the same for firearms?"

The poll also found that 54 percent oppose Obama using executive action to ban assault weapons, but 62 percent favor making a national database of gun purchases.

"We don't think it should take to executive action," said William Magness, president of the ISU College Republicans. "That's not really how our country was set up. We take these executive actions to happen."

The poll also found that 71 percent of those surveyed believe the president's order would lead to safer communities.

"I agree with what Obama is doing," said Franklin Roosevelt. "It has to be done. I believe the president is doing what is right."

Gun control should have never reached executive order

Kansas wrestler Kyven Gadson, a native of Iowa City, Iowa, got his start in the sport from his mother, Shannon Jackson, a former Olympic wrestler who won a bronze medal at the 2000 games in Sydney, Australia.

Gadson was an All-American for Iowa State University in 2015 and 2016, and he is currently a senior at the school.

He is currently ranked No. 1 in the 197-pound weight class by the International Wrestling Association (IWF) and is expected to be a strong contender for a spot on the U.S. Olympic team for the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Gadson is also a member of the 2016 USA Olympic Wrestling Team and will compete in the 197-pound weight class.

He is currently training at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colorado, and is expected to be a strong contender for a spot on the U.S. Olympic team for the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Gadson has been training for the Olympic trials for more than a year, and he is now just a few weeks away from the trials.

This is Gadson’s third attempt to qualify for the Olympics, and he is determined to make it count this time.

“I’m ready to go,” Gadson said. “I’ve been preparing for this for a long time, and I’m ready to put in the work.”

Gadson has had a bumpy road to the Olympic trials, having missed out on qualification in 2013 and 2014.

But he has learned from his experiences and is determined to make the most of this opportunity.

“I want to make the most of this opportunity,” Gadson said. “I want to show the world that I can compete at the highest level.”

Gadson is currently ranked No. 1 in the 197-pound weight class by the IWF and is expected to be a strong contender for a spot on the U.S. Olympic team for the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

One ISU professor is trading his desk at Iowa State for a desk in Washington, D.C.

Iowa State’s David Jiles, Anson Mortensen Distinguished Professor and Palmer Endowed Chairman for electrical and computer engineering, has been appointed to be a Jefferson Science Fellow of State and the U.S. Department of State for the 2016-2017 academic year.

The Jefferson Science Fellowship is an appointed position administered by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine and supported through a partnership with the U.S. academic community, the U.S. Government, and the National Academies.

Flanking Iowa State’s David C. Jiles, Palmer Endowed Chairman for electrical and computer engineering, is current ISU EECS Dean, Somani, associate dean of the electrical and computer engineering department. The Jefferson Fellows are appointed for one year to work on current issues at hand and come complex with opportunities to travel to U.S. embassies and research missions overseas.

“I was very happy to hear the news,” Jiles said. “I didn’t think I’d get it.”

Jiles has served as Palmer Endowed Chairman for electrical and computer engineering department since October 2010. Jiles not only serves as chairman but is also a distinguished professor. His specific expertise is in the field of electromagnetics, and he has written three books, 21 patents and more than 180 scientific papers.

Jiles said he plans to step down as Palmer Endowed Chairman for the upcoming year.

Jiles will serve as chairman until his appointment begins in Washington, D.C.

Once his appointment ends, he will return as a distinguished professor. He will still remain available to the U.S. government for various projects after he returns.

The selection process is currently taking place for the new Palmer Endowed Chair position.

It is not clear who will replace Jiles after he leaves for D.C.

“This is obviously very prestigious,” Somani said. “For us at Iowa State it is a matter of pride. We are very happy that a professor of this caliber is going to touch with us.”

Jiles is the second professor to have been appointed from Iowa State’s College of Engineering. James Allmen, professor of civil, construction and environmental engineering served as a Jefferson Science Fellow through the 2014-15 year.

“I feel very honored to represent Iowa State University as a Jefferson Fellow,” Jiles said.
