Architecture students turn van into home

1989 Chevy G20 van sits parked at a North Platte, Nebraska gas station in the dead of winter. A biting cold wind howls through the desolate sides of the old van, carrying away memories that may have been inside. Two roommates sit staring at the sheer red cliffs that form the boundaries around the vast green valley of Zion National Park. They had bought the 1989 Chevy G20 van during their third year of architecture school and were now out seeing some of the most beautiful vistas the country has to offer.

The van itself was a steal — $1,250 to drive it off the George White Chevrolet Inc. After a few months of design and construction, the van became home.

It all started to prove a point. Tyler Wurr and Joey Bahnsen are fourth-year architecture students at Iowa State. They met each other first as freshmen but grew into friends during the following years. Wurr grew up in Manning, Iowa, a town of fewer than 2,000. Bahnsen grew up in Des Moines, the largest city in Iowa. Both developed a love for engineering and architecture during high school.

The idea originated from seeing online posts about simplistic and nomadic living — the two said. They had seen a project online that caught their interest. “Hank piqued their interest. “Hank and Silver will be available to those living in university apartments and dorms with kitchens. The two grew sick of their architecture studio class. The class, which all architecture majors take each semester during their four years in the program, involves creating designs for “practice” clients.

Tyler Wurr said that Gold will become a home. "This design process." Bahnsen said. "This setup," Bahnsen said. "This class is like a 'mock client' situation.

The city of Ames may be seeing major changes on and around downtown properties. In its entirety, the city has a population of nearly 56,000, with students and Ames community members living in and around Iowa State University...

Twenty years ago, the city of Ames began a partnership with the state of Iowa to create the Leopold Center at Iowa State University. The cuts to the Leopold Center – nearly $5 million a year to agricultural research – are just a portion of the $20 million in spending cuts for the upcoming fiscal year. According to staff, as reported by the Associated Press, the cuts to the Leopold Center “would mean a loss of roughly $1 million in spending cuts for the upcoming fiscal year. In order to create a more inclusive community within Ames, a creative LGBTQ organization plans to unveil a new diversity-themed mural, led by principal female artists. The unveiling ceremony will take place on April 13th, with prominent figure Anne Castle serving as the keynote speaker.

Castle, a well-known figure in the LGBTQ community, has dedicated her career to ensuring that everyone feels valued and respected. "I am thrilled to be able to support this important cause," Castle said. "It's crucial that we continue to foster a culture of acceptance and inclusion."

Art walks connect sculptures, poetry
By Melissa VanHorn

University Museum’s art walk on Wednesdays at 5:30 p.m. in the Carver Student Center's gallery from May through October invites campus and community members to view art created by diverse artists.

Derek Faux, interpretation specialist from University Museums, led the tour group. The particular poem that inspired the particular piece of artwork was "Ursula" a poem by William Aspenwall Bradley.

"This poem really illustrates the subtle progression of Iowa State," Faux said.

"The women that modeled for the fountain were from the Meskwaki settlement," Faux said. "They were involved with the Osage Native American history as well as the Osage Native American people." Faux said.

"The particular poem that interested the fountain was a prayer of thanksgiving, which captured the cyclical nature of agriculture, the seasons, and life."

"The women that modeled for the fountain came from the Meskwaki settlement." Iowastatedaily.com "I knew that Peterson had a very close relationship with those who modeled for the fountain because they were all related to each other," Faux said. "Some of them were from the Carver family, and some of them were from the Meskwaki settlement." Faux said. "It was a small town that I had never heard of."

INTIMACY p1

The word “onk” is often used on campus to refer to someone who is an onlooker. Popillion suggested a “yes, no, maybe” system for relationships: for what reasons do you become interested in someone, what is your reason, and what do you feel about the relationship?

“Why do you tell someone you love them in a blink when you’re in a one-night stand?”

“I think there’s a disconnect,” he said. “If you’re not comfortable with the other person, you could be with them.”

“Do you think the title of '100% single' is a statement of being single or a statement of feeling single?”

“Both,” said Kristi Patel, assistant director of the Gender and Sexuality Center.

“Because a lot of people are single, but they still have friends with benefits with someone they’re interested in.”

What kind of lubricants are good for toys and sexual activity?

Kirsch explained that silicone-based lubricants are best for toys and sexual activity because they are water-soluble, non-toxic, and heat-stable. They are also easy to clean up and do not leave residue. Oil-based lubricants can be messy and may cause skin irritation. Water-based lubricants are also a good option, but they may evaporate quickly and need to be reapplied regularly.

DINING p1

The new dining center will replace Subway in the student union. It will offer a variety of menu options, including vegan and gluten-free options, and will be open weekdays from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and weekends from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. The biggest problem, according to Hengesteg, is the location. The new dining center is located next to the student union, which is a prime location for students and visitors.

LINCOLN p3

Ames, in the past, has been known for its vibrant arts scene, but in recent years the city has focused more on attracting businesses and creating a more business-friendly environment. This shift has led to concerns among some residents about the city’s focus on economic development and the impact it may have on the local arts community.

TYLER WURR

Senior in architecture

When does sex turn into love-making?

“Sex can have many meanings, from a physical connection to a deep emotional bond. For some people, it can be a way to express their love and commitment to each other. For others, it can be a way to explore their own sexuality and pleasure.”

“Sex can be a way to connect with someone on a deeper level, to share your vulnerabilities and feelings with them.”

How do I bring up the subject of love with my partner?

“Try to choose a private and intimate setting where you can talk about your feelings without feeling awkward or rushed. It might be helpful to express your feelings in writing first and then discuss them face-to-face.”

“Ask your partner what they think about the idea of having a passionate evening out?”

The idea of a home that can be parked anywhere was inspired by Tyler Wur and his partner in pursuit of the idea of living in a van.
