BSA meeting discusses posters

ISU administrators, police talk possible solutions with students

By Whitney Mason

Iowastatedaily.com

Stewart and Harmon both discussed the idea of capturing thought regarding posters found on campus over the past several weeks. Stewart explained that posters would be removed if they were found weeks ago around campus, which arose put up in the overnight and early morning.

The objectives of the posters are to scare and change your routine, he said.

“Let’s what they want,” Stewart said referring to the individuals hanging up the posters. Stewart and Harmon also addressed a recent meeting, in which President Steven Leath decided not to comment on every poster hanging, why the university and the local police did in removing whether videotaping or reporting it to ISU Police.

Harmon then explained that non-students committing the harassing crimes would be handled by the police but students would be handled under the university’s Code of Conduct.

The students then proceeded to come up with ideas on how on to keep one another safe while discussing the idea of students taking a proactive approach and existing networks with one another were two arguably agreeable courses of actions to take by the students.

When discussing the topic on changing the campus climate, Peter Deveaux-Isaacs, junior in political science, called it an “ambitious issue.”

“It’s important to understand that this isn’t going to happen overnight,” Deveaux-Isaacs said. “What you can do is be an ambassador to your culture.”

Politics are not the only multicultural students received.

Stewart and Harmon both discussed the idea of cameras and increasing more on campus.

“We want to have enough cameras to identify when the posters were hung,” Stewart said about the latest poster hangings.

But both explained that many students wouldn’t want an increase of cameras and being all over the campus.

Administrators also mentioned that students would want an increase in cameras and being all over the campus.

Harmon agreed with Stewart. Both he and Stewart said they understand the outcomes from the students because they could recall being in the same positions in their younger years.

“Where you’re experiencing, we understand,” Harmon said.

“We’re stressed, too,” Stewart said.

But both also showed the appreciation for the conversation Thursday night and the ones before.

“Thank you all for having the desires to be open to change,” he said.

Preparing for gameday

Part of the preparation for a game week at Jack Trice Stadium is repainting the end zone lettering. According to Van Loo, typically white colors are painted on Wednesdays and using about 150 gallons of paint each week. ISU Turf and Grounds director Bob Tupper said that a typical game week consists of “mowing three to four times per week in the early season, less often when it colder; painting happens every game week and uses about 150 gallons of paint each week.” Tupper also estimated that it takes about 30 to 35 hours to do the field each week to get it ready for a game.

EDITORIAL

A dangerous precedent

President-elect Donald J. Trump has not been a stranger to controversy.

I was among many who expected that he would face serious opposition, given his campaign promises of drastic changes to the government. However, the reality of his presidency has been quite different. Trump has been successful in pushing through policies that he promised during the campaign.

Trump's most notable achievement has been the repeal of the Affordable Care Act. This was a key promise of his campaign, and he has been successful in getting it done. However, the Affordable Care Act was a popular law, and its repeal has been met with opposition from many people.

Another policy that Trump has pushed through is the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. This law has been controversial, with many people arguing that it benefits the wealthy at the expense of the middle class. However, Trump has been successful in getting it passed.

Trump has also been successful in getting his nominees for the Supreme Court confirmed. This has been a key priority of his administration, and he has been able to appoint several conservative justices to the Court.

In conclusion, Trump has been successful in getting many of his policies passed, despite opposition from the other party. His success has been helped by the fact that he has been able to control Congress and the Senate.

It remains to be seen what the future holds for Trump and his administration. However, it is clear that he has been successful in getting many of his policies passed, and that he has a strong base of supporters.

Mitchell Harger scores first career touchdown

Mitchell Harger has been around the Iowa State football program a long time. The Altoona, Iowa, native walked on to the team back in 2012, but redshirted his initial season. From there, he slowly worked his way up the ladder. Slowly is an understatement. In 2015, Harger didn’t see any action on the field. In 2014, he played in four games on special teams, and passed two tackles. It wasn’t until 2013 that Harger saw consistent action on the field, but even that was limited. He played in all 12 games on special teams and played run- ning back into that season. This season, Harger returned to the team after graduating last spring. His role, hasn’t been much different. He plays on special teams, and gets limited time at running back.

That’s essentially the extent of his football career. He hasn’t racked up a ton of yards. It’s just been on the team for the sake of depth. That said, he has been incred- ibly hard.

“I talked about that with my parents,” Harger said. “I believe the (Chanse) game’s tough going through their and a half years being grounded down and being just degraded and all this stuff is not really have any output from that, and output.

“It just makes you double check it sometimes, thinking what you could have been doing, what you could be doing now. Because I mean I graduated, I could have been out there. I could have been working for my engineering com- pany that I just past turning the two years.

But on Saturday, that validation finally came.

As of now, Harger has his first career touchdown, a 2-room, capping an 80-yard scoring drive to put the Cyclones ahead of Kansas and push Iowa State to its first Big 12 Confer- ence win of the season.

“But to have that moment with the touchdown, with my family, the Iowa State football program a long time.

The last time the Cy- Clones won back-to-back games in a season — the end of the 2013 season — Grant Brim’s
One of the last home games of the season is upon us, and as such it will be to suit tailgaging season end with a bang. This could possibly be the best way to catch a promising band and a good game. However, Texas Tech is coming to Ames this Saturday morning, and they are two games away from becoming bowl eligible.

The Red Raiders are a powerful and fourth team. They have over 4,700 yards through the air, and about 1,600 on the ground. When Texas Tech played Oklahoma on Oct. 22, redshirt freshman Mahomes passed for 734 yards and 10 touchdowns. The cold and windy day on Saturday will make for very tough passing conditions, even for Mahomes. Iowa State’s defense will still need to show up, but they’ll be aided by the wind.

The Texas Tech offense is as dominant as ever. Their defense on the other hand has “only” allowed 4,516 total yards and 2,334 of those have been on the ground. Iowa State’s defense can stop him, then they have an opportunity to continue a two-game winning streak. Campbell needs to use the quarterback system efficiently with Jacob Park and Joel Lanning at quarterback this weekend.

Both teams are trying to finish out their seasons on a good note, with Iowa State needing to win out the rest of the season to get to a bowl game. It might be enough to keep this game close and competitive. And even if the Cyclones find success against Texas Tech, it’s going to be tough to keep that cold and wind.

On the other side of the field, Iowa State needs to be on their game with an eye towards force the Cyclones to pass. But, with Texas Tech’s offense, it’s going to be tough to keep them down.

However, if it is a close game and Iowa State find themselves in that situation, Mahomes II is one of the best three quarterbacks in the nation. The Red Raiders are a two-quarterback system with Patrick Mahomes II. He is the main threat on the offense, and he needs to be used in both the passing and rushing game. If he gets on a roll, it could be a long game for Iowa State.

The Iowa State defense will need to focus all of its attention on Texas Tech quarterback, Patrick Mahomes II. It is the main threat on the offense, and if the Cyclone defense can stop him, then they have an opportunity to continue a seven-game winning streak.

Cook-Miller Campbell will need to work on the dual quarterback system efficiently with Jacob Park and Joel Lanning. Lanning has won and even in the Kansas game last weekend, but can’t exactly say he’s ready to run plays. Texas Tech will expect the same.

In passing situations, even for Mahomes, Iowa State needs to be on their game with an eye towards force the Cyclones to pass. But, with Texas Tech’s offense, it’s going to be tough to keep them down.

With all that being said, the Baylor game should still be a dominant performance by the Cyclones. And even if the Cyclones lose, this will be a great game to watch.

THE PICK
Iowa State vs Texas Tech
LUKE MANDERFIELD
Sports Editor

- I don’t think there is any doubt that this game will become a shootout quickly. Texas Tech quarterback Patrick Mahomes II can sling the football better than anyone in the nation, according to passing yards per game, where he leads the country.
- The Iowa State defense has been incapable of slowing down faster-than-normal offenses — take Baylor, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State for examples. The Red Raiders own the best offense in college football, and I find it hard to believe that Iowa
State’s defense can reverse its trend.
- Texas Tech will take this one.

THE PICK
Texas Tech vs Iowa State
RYAN YOUNG
Assistant Sports Editor

- Texas Tech is better than its record shows — much better.
- But yeah, Iowa State has been hanging up all season, regardless of its record.
- But still, the Cyclones have more questions than answers right now.
- Texas Tech will fly home to Lubbock, Texas, with a win on Saturday night.

THE PICK
Iowa State vs Texas Tech
BRIAN MOOZ
Assistant Sports Editor

- Iowa State has some confidence coming into the game from the win against Kansas last weekend, but that confidence will not mean much in a game where Texas Tech has continued to score.
- There will be a touchdown with less than a minute in the football game to give Texas Tech the victory.

THE PICK
Iowa State vs Texas Tech
TYLER LEWIS
Assistant Digital Content Editor

- Iowa State, fresh off of a win from Kansas, is going to be on the look out for a small winning streak to energize to it and fans for the rest of the season.
- This week has been full of confidence from the Kansas game and pat the Cyclones over Texas Tech. It is a close, back-and-forth game that I have been excited out from the first play to the last.

- Iowa State, fresh off of a win from Kansas, is going to be on the look out for a small winning streak to energize to it and fans for the rest of the season.
- This week has been full of confidence from the Kansas game and pat the Cyclones over Texas Tech. It is a close, back-and-forth game that I have been excited out from the first play to the last.
Mahomes II presents dual-threat challenge

By Brian Money

The Iowa State defense played against a redshirt freshman last week in the win against Kansas. The Cyclones played against a redshirt freshman quarterback who has more experience and has produced more offensive statistics in Patrick Mahomes II.

Mahomes II is the offense for Texas Tech, and coach Matt Campbell has made it loud and clear to the Iowa State defense that this Red Raider quarterback is not to be stopped for the Cyclones' sake.

“I was a D-III player on the gridiron,” Iowa State redshirt senior Mitchell Harger takes a knee at media day on Aug. 9 at Jack Trice Stadium. “I was a D-III player on the gridiron.”

The Iowa State defense has had some practice with dual-threat quarterbacks such as Northern Illinois’ Aaron Bailey, Baylor’s Seth Russell and Oklahoma’s Baker Mayfield. The Cyclones defense should know how to stop these types of quarterbacks with the amount of practice it gets.

“I think coach Campbell has always done a great job of instilling those guys the exact same as anyone else,” Manning said. “He may not have played that I didn’t really realize they weren’t on scholarship. Manning said. “I think that’s a really good sign and I think we have to continue to develop that within our program here because I think it’s such a beneficial thing to obviously the university but also for the player and everything. I think it’s a huge deal.”

Wide receiver Allen Lartigue has recently lost his job to a new coaching staff, was incoming, and was the walk-on who didn’t have a need to stay. He could have moved on with his life. He could have moved on with his life. He may not.

Iowa State targets upset at NCAAs

Finaishing inside the top 25 at the NCAA Cross Country Championships is something the Cyclones can be proud of this season, considering more than 250 teams from across the nation were entered. With two seniors on the team, the Cyclones, last year’s 24th-place finish was nice, but this year they want to try to figure out a way to make nationals.

“I don’t think there’s any team we would want to have a good time with,” Iowa State head coach Andrea Grove-McDonald said early this week. “It’s a national team that’s coming into our region. So we’re going to do anything we can do to win the region."

Men’s cross-country makes long-awaited return to big stage

The stage doesn’t get any bigger or any better than making a national title team. By leaving the chance to bring home a national championship, the Cyclones could be the team that everyone looks at and says, “Iowa State went to nationals and they did such a great job.” But for years, the Cyclones had to deal with the failure of not being able to make the nationals.

The Cyclones have also gained confidence in the team and have gotten to the point where they can be a national team. The big factor for Bethanie Brown has more move comfortable than Rocky Ballard. Now, she’s back competing again, after being out for nearly a year due to health-related issues. She was knocked down, whether it’s been from health issues, injuries or fatigue, she’s always found a way to bounce back in one of the most difficult moments.

Now she’s back competing again, after being out for nearly a year due to health-related issues. She was knocked down, whether it’s been from health issues, injuries or fatigue, she’s always found a way to bounce back in one of the most difficult moments. It’s a matter of time before she’s back at it, and she’s got a lot of confidence in that.

The Cyclone men ended up fifth at the Roy Griak Invitational and the NCAA Regional meet. The final test for Iowa State will be the NCAA Cross Country Championships, which will be broadcast from Terre Haute, Indiana.

In the past, Grove-McDonald has been quick to state that nothing is written in stone. She wants to try to figure out a way to get to nationals before regionals.

“Anytime you can beat any team that might be an auto for nationals is very important,” Sudbury said after the meet. “It’s not like we’re going to nationals and we’re not going to do anything.”

The Cyclones will be ready to go come race day, and they should be ready to go come race day, and they should be ready to go come race day.

Cyclone Hockey will take on the American Collegiate Hockey Association's National Championship tour of Top Rank events held in Minot, North Dakota.

The Cyclones, formerly ranked No. 1 this season, have a chance to reclaim the American Collegiate Hockey Association Challenge, the three-day invitational this year. Giving fresh competition to the Cyclones.

With the team still feeling the relief of last weekend's Ohio win over Ohio University, this match against Minnesota State will be important for Cyclone Hockey.
