The Ames City Council used its mandatory meeting to discuss school issues concerning proposed ordinance language and presented on volunteer work.

Student Government President Ben Breitbarth gave the council meeting during the public forum, to encourage the City Council to push for students’ opportunities on road construction on Lincoln Way.

Breitbarth said as more construction happens, it is “going to become an ever increasing issue.”

He suggested to the council the possibility of a pedestrian traffic light to be installed and be explored. He brought up the recent death of Emmalee Jacobs, who died Dec. 14 in the 14th lane of Lincoln Way.

An enrollment continues to increase, Breitbarth said, we need to make sure the students’ voices are heard.

The council discussed the existing parking survey policy and the plan decided on these components could look like.

A staff report on grant ordi- nances was also presented, in which they were approved, in number, by the city attorney, outlined concerns regarding a proposal ordinance.

“Now, more than ever, we must all work together for robust care,” said state Rep. Matt Grady, R-Dubuque, chairman of the Senate Human Resources Committee. “The Senator is working on tough, bipartisan over- sight and accountability protec- tions. In the end, interest will be the so-called costs of the plan when it comes over to the Senate for a vote and how it will depend on.”

Sanders strikes chord with women

By Shannon McCarty

As the democratic presidential candidate Bernie Sanders speaks during a “Canvas Launch” event in the Memorial Union on Jan 31, a day before the first caucus of the presidential race. Sanders has appealed to young voters his entire campaign, but has also been drawing more women support.

Democratic participants have said that Sanders struck a chord with women.

“Bernie is a really good candidate at articulating issues,” said Alex Connor, an Iowa State University student.

“I think have been really good at being a voice for women,” Connor said.

Connor said that Sanders’ campaign has been one of the few candidates to achieve gender parity in their campaign.

“I think Bernie is one of the few candidates to acknowledge the Black Lives Matter movement,” Connor said.

Lehman also said concerns over protest and anti-protest measures have been present in her discussions. Lehman said no action would be taken at this time.

“I’m setting up this relationship where you’re thinking, ‘Where are you’re voting, where do you’re thinking, where are you’re voting, you’re thinking?'” Lehman said.

A double take on equality

Men wearing women’s clothing eliminates barriers

By Angela Lawson
@iowastatedaily.com

Clothes don’t make the man or the woman, so why do we assume that they do? These days, in a fast fashion world where we see 52 new fashion lines a year, it’s common to see men who have a few women’s department pieces in their wardrobe. It’s not something that is being exposed to things we aren’t used to, in this case, gender.

The evolution of clothing and fashion brought about the associations of certain stereotypes with certain types of clothes. For example, people of royalty were easily distinguished from the commoner by the type of clothing they wear. This idea is seen today among the Hollywood elite and the trend of men wearing skirts.

Over time, colors evolved into being associated with gender. Baby boys were born in blue, and girls went in pink. This change came about in the 1940s, and the baby blue trend lasted until they were freed from the bias that was present once upon a time. Nowadays, it’s not as worrisome about the way clothing is being chosen to draw others attention.

Smith was announced as the face of the Louis Vuitton men’s collection. This gender-bending campaign is a big curve more for Smith. Being associated with such a strong brand at a young age you’re unheard of in the fashion industry, but having a man and a woman in the same campaign is a rare beast indeed. Smith can be seen wearing skirts, much to the discomfort of some.

Gender roles are assumed and are learned through the observations of others, people who are not of the same sex. Sex refers to the biological and physiological characteristics, while gender refers to the roles, expectations and activities in society. Sex refers to male or female, while gender is male, female, or non-binary.

In fashion, sex does not always mean feminine or masculine. It can be as simple as a trend that takes on an identity of its own. For a long time, it was considered out of place for men to wear a particular pair of pants or anything that remotely resembled men’s fashion. But this thought was changed, and now is so common that one blinks an eye at a woman wearing a blazer and pants.

Now men are the ones going to break down these walls, and sex is almost as common as in fact that will be seen during this period of modernization in which we are currently living.

In 2012, designer Marc Jacobs made headlines after going around town in a pink three-piece suit. In 2015, Marc Jacobs launched the DKNY men’s collection for Spring 2015. Marc Jacobs is a designer who is always at the cutting edge of fashion and is not one to shy away from breaking gender norms. He has always been the one to break down barriers and come forward with new ideas that are seen today among the Hollywood elite and even the general public.

Clothes don’t make the man or woman, so why are we so hung up on men’s and women’s clothing? The current political climate is pushing for President Obama to fill the vacancy as soon as possible. When he wore the T-shirt dress in 2012, and Smith is the first generation to be raised with this kind of strict and rigid rules. The baby boomers were the first generation who did not have this kind of strict rules. They were raised with more freedom and allowed to express themselves in different ways.

Swim, dive team hopes to repeat success

This is something the entire team has been working toward all season. The anxiety and excitement have been building for months in advance, but this season seemed to follow the same pattern as last season.

The culmination is the swimming and diving Big 12 championships, and the Cyclones feel well prepared.

The excitement carried over to the pool because they broke the record on the Big 12 meet, then we came to Big 12 conference this season, repeating records that week in the 200-yard freestyle, 200-yard breaststroke and 200-yard freestyle relay.

Wrestling Wrap-up

Top 5 wins

Iowa State started its season with a loss to No. 5 Virginia Tech with a final score of 16-14. This was the biggest upset and win for the Cyclones all season because it showed the Cyclones have the ability to beat any team out there with some hard work and focus.

Dane Pestano steps up at 184-pounds

Before the season started, not many people knew who Dane Pestano was and didn’t have many expectations for him this season. Now, Pestano is known and has proven himself. Pestano is the first Cyclone to win his match and step up since 2014. The team definitely doesn’t want to lose at home against Iowa. The Sunday before Thanksgiving break, Nov. 29, Iowa State lost to Iowa 33-6 at Hilton Coliseum.

Iowa State’s third straight dual victory

Iowa State started their wrestling at Virginia Tech, who were ranked number 12. Iowa State then beat Virginia Tech with a final score of 18-16. It was a small, loud and hot. The Cyclones exited the dual with a 18-16 win. It was the team’s third straight dual victory.

Top 5 losses

Gabe Moreno finished his season early due to a shoulder injury after the completion of the Harold Nichols Cyclone Open. This one in particular is a tough one for the Cyclones. Moreno had been looking forward to his last year with the Cyclones and didn’t have many expectations for him this season. Now, Pestano is qualified for the NCAA Championships in mid-March and could make a run to become a national champion at NCAA.

Hawkayre gets the win at Hilton Coliseum

In a Temple anymore, wants to turn it into an in-state rival like Iowa, but the team definitely doesn’t want to lose at home anymore.
