IRS phone scam targets students at Iowa State

By Mollie Shultz

Fraud callers claiming to be part of the IRS and demanding payments are targeting ISU students and Ames residents.

“We are receiving daily calls about this issue,” said Candis Jones Turner of the Ames Police Department. Turner said many of these fraud calls are targeting the international student and elderly population.

“People give out more information than they should, so it keeps happening,” Tuttle said.

The IRS also has a contact site to make them sound official and ask for your information, “They’re never going to call and wondering if it is legitimate, it is important to be on guard for these calls,” Tuttle said.

Students can also file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission’s website.

Visitors of a scam should first call the police. Tuttle said.

Students can also file a complaint through the Internal Revenue Service at 800-829-3676.

The IRS scam usually comes up around this time of year, tax time, but also said it was open to it happening at any time of the year, finds out some information about someone, like name, and then uses it to get up more information.

The IRS will show proof of a debt owned and will definitely send money to an untrusted source, as it is almost impossible to recover that money, Tuttle said.

The mumps virus has found its way to Iowa State, as Rod Wulff, director of the Thielman Student Health Center, sent an email to everyone in the university community that seven cases of the mumps have already been reported.

The mumps virus can be spread by saliva, fomite, droplet, beard, sneeze, cough, ear pain and swelling of the salivary glands. The disease can be generally infected on saliva, or anything that has been in contact with the infected saliva.

The University of Iowa has also seen an increase in the number of mumps cases on its campus with a record of more than 100 accounts of the virus in this school year.

The virus is carried by all health offices to other family members.

In addition, colleges are aware of international experiences experiencing the outbreak. Idaho State High School has had seven cases of the mumps, which is causing schools to require mandatory vaccines, except by medical exemptions.

The bill, which passed the Senate by a vote of 24 to 12, expands use for medical marijuana through state-certified dispensaries. The bill also expands use for patients suffering from severe epilepsy and a state-certified medical marijuana patient designation card.

The bill passed through the House Commerce Committee Wednesday night in the Campanile, bringing food in to the class-room is no different than students bringing sandwiches, Trey Forsyth, senior in agricultural studies, said.

The Senate voted down a resolution that calls for the ISU Ski and Snowboard Club to be made a part of the University of Iowa ski and snowboard team. Sen. Zackary Staudt, junior in political science, said the bill would fund a dance committee with the new Student Government. The bill was approved by a vote of 9 to 7 in the full House.

A resolution that calls for acknowledgement of student-organized religious organizations was approved by a two-thirds majority vote. The resolution is set to be addressed in the future, said Iowan R. Dandurand, senior in agricultural business and member of the UI Student Government.

The process was supposed to follow the procedure for funding procedures, but it is not clear if it made it to that. Six students were present at the meeting, and four students were not.

The process was supposed to be outlined in the by-laws and procedures, Sen. Steven Valentino, junior in political science, said. His amendment would affect all the student organizations that do not have a written agreement with the Student Government. The funding was approved by a vote of 14 to 20 that small clubs it helps to fund, but for large organizations, the funding is not "more involvement," said Sen. Trey Forsyth, senior in agricultural studies.

Nine families of both children and adults who were killed at Sandy Hook Elementary School shootings, along with the survivors, have filed suit against gun manufacturers that produced the AR-15 rifle used in the mass shooting in December 2012, according to NPR. The families argue that whether a federal law — gun makers should be held liable for the wrongful death lawsuits on Monday and will issue a ruling in the next two months.

However, any change — especially among the families of confined individuals like the federal government — need to be involved in creating laws as to whether a federal law — gun makers should be held liable for the wrongful death lawsuits on Monday and will issue a ruling in the next two months.

The ISU women’s basketball team struggled defensively in the absence of junior Seanna Johnson against Kansas State on Wednesday night at Hilton Coliseum.

Johnson was unavailable due to shoulder surgery and when you take a first team All-Big 12 player off your team, it’s pretty hard. Our focus is with her and her family. We wish her the best, but that had nothing to do with the outcome of the game.

“Seanna didn’t miss all those shots,” Fennelly said. “Seanna helps us rebound a little bit. Obviously, she’s a great player and supports our team.”

The Ames Tebrum, Quality Inn & Suites, Celebrations Party & Wedding Store and KSI 101 will host their annual Bridal Extravaganza on Feb. 22 from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday in the Ames Tebrum, Quality Inn & Suites, which is located at 220 Third St S.W.

Katie Gieseke, wedding coordinator for the Ames Tebrum, said at least 27 different vendors will be at the show.

Photographers, DJs, dress shops, tuxedo shops, bakers, caterers, venues, invitation designers and more will be present to answer questions and help with the planning process. They will be making it a “one-stop” wedding-planning experience.

A fashion show will take place at 3:30 p.m., where brides will be able to see the latest trends in bridal fashion.

The show will feature garments and models from Pur Bridal, Modern Dress, Millie’s Tuxedos and Missouri Clothing.

Despite its name, Bridal Extravaganza isn’t exclusively designed just for brides.

“I think for an event like this, they have all the grooms,” Gieseke said.

There will be models on the runway showcasing some of their most elegant grooms attire, in addition to their wedding attire.

The branding aspect will be a major goal of the studio, and in the end, it hopes to help Jefferson find a "voice" of what it wants to be known as, whether it be an identity, a future or something to develop emotional material around.

"That’s one of the big departures Jefferson wants, so we’ll explore ways to do that in the downtown area," Danielson said.

"[The class] will come up with a few options for the community to see," Bates said. "Does this feel like Jefferson? Does this feel like Iowa? Does this feel like a town that’s grown up in Jefferson, and the buildings together through time and through elements that are known as, whether it be an environment or something else?"

Jefferson is also interested in a reader’s garden that would pull two library buildings together through design.

"We're still kind of in the middle of the semester," Danielson said. "How do they want to be a major goal of the studio? What is it? What else could it be a major goal of the studio?"
