In honor of the New Year the Chinese Student Association held a grand celebration Sunday night, that filled Memorial Union Great Hall with nearly 700 students and faculty members. Following the lunar calendar, January 31st was the first day of the year, one of the Chinese twelve animals. Many Asian countries have a tradition of welcoming the new year.

Hanxiao Hu, sophomore in Liberal Arts of the CSSA, shared the meaning of the New Year. “It is a Chinese tradition. We want to celebrate this tradition, keep track with it and don’t lose it,” said Hu.

In China, the New Year is a big holiday. It is a time to visit friends and family and to have dinner together. “People will buy new cloth for their children and family members will give them red bags filled with money,” Hu said.

During the celebration, there were performance started the event with a humerus dance that lifted the crowds already high vibration. Hearts danced with large pink fans and the audience greeted them with applause and modern day spirit.

The Chinese Students and Scholars Association presented 12 performances. The CSSA presented 12 traditional Chinese performances.

Xuan Rong, vice president of the CSSA and senior in Liberal Arts, introduced the children’s song called “Singing Flowers”. Designed with swift hand motions, the children of the Chinese Language School took the stage, the joyful audience welcomed them with music and modern day spirit.

At the end of the celebration, the audience shook their heads and danced with large pink fans that closed and opened with swift hand motions.

Cy statues help charity

Cy statues will be restoring off campus and into Ames in an effort to generate proceeds for local charities as a part of Leadership Ames project, CyclONE City.

Leadership Ames is a program the Ames Chamber of Commerce has sponsored for the last 26 years. This year’s class, the 27th, has committed to a project that will go beyond its graduation date to benefit the Ames City Council.

Heddens said the class’ initial goal for CyclONE City were to get 25 statues sponsored and raise at least $25,000. “The amount of money that we make can go to any charity of the student’s choosing, it all depends on how many sponsors we get,” said Makenzie Heddens, committee co-chair of CyclONE City.

Heddens said the class already has a list of pre-committed business around Ames. “This idea had been kind of circling around Ames for a couple of years, but no one had picked it up to do it alone,” Ahoenren said.

E-cigarettes, often seen as an alternative to smoking regular cigarettes, might soon see a ban on sales to minors. A proposed local ordinance and law would go into effect around Ames.

Senior in Liberal Arts, Herman Quirmbach has been a proponent of anti-smoking policies from his days in the Iowa House of Representatives. Quirmbach was also the co-chairwoman of the CyclONE City project.

In a press conference last week, Story County Supervisors. “It seems to me that these issues are going to be very hard to guess when the ordinances are going to be in place. We are trying to get abreast of what’s taking place at the Capitol. We are trying to keep informed of the current landscape, the dead issues and to make policies that will help the people under 18 years of age. It’s an employment opportunity for artists,” Heddens said. “They’ll get to be artists and to be a part of leadership, but no one had picked it up to do it alone,” Ahoenren said.

The Daily votes to move to Campustown

Iowa Learning Farms is celebrating their ten-year anniversary during 2014. The organization was a five-year program. Over the years, though, the program has become something much larger.

The program started in October 2004 and ideas were just being tossed around, but it was not until 2005 that the program lifted off the ground. "The logo was originally "Iowa Learning Farms" and now switched to "Farms" because of the mission of the program. The goal is much too vast to say possible, which the original name wasn't clearly showing."

The main goal for the future is to continue to focus on farmer-partner collaboration, said Jacqueline Comito, the Iowa Learning Farms director. "There are many strategies that the program wants to work on, education, outreach and research are all important qualities of the Iowa Learning Farms program. "Conservation is not voluntary; it's a standard practice among farmers, particularly farmers," Comito said. "We are all in this together.""

The Iowa State Daily student newspaper is moving off-campus for the 2015-16 academic year.

"They want the class-size, the demand for classroom space and other academic programs, we have talked about [the move] going back three or four years," said Warren Madden, interim vice president for business and finance at Iowa State. Madden has been involved with this project from the beginning.

Madden said that he has been speaking with the Iowa State Daily general manager, Laura Widmer, about the Daily wanting more space.

"Right now the Daily is not paying rent, but it's the space it occupies in Hamilton Hall has dictated that the goal of this of to make the Daily's move," Madden said.

With the relocation of campus and the England Property, space has opened up for the newspaper to eventually move in.

"They long considered us to be candidates to fill the space," said Laura Widmer, general manager of the Daily.

"If the Daily moves out of Hamilton Hall, it is not as close to the journalism programs, we have talked about this for years," Widmer said.

"If the Daily moves into a new building and being able to design it to fit the Daily's needs would be helpful. "They thought some of the students that intern with Iowa State could also find that location to be good, there are coffee shops and other things in Campustown there was some feeling that those would be beneficial to students who work for the Daily," Madden said. "The publication board voted unanimously to allow the student newspaper to proceed in the process of moving locations. "We should say yes, it's a good opportunity," said Megan Culp, publication board chairwoman and a senior in English.

Iowa Learning Farms celebrate 10 years, project growth in 2014

Communication updates assist farmer interaction

Iowa Learning Farms recently celebrated their ten-year anniversary during 2014. The organization was a five-year program.

The program started in October 2004 and ideas were just being tossed around, but it was not until 2005 that the program lifted off the ground. "The logo was originally "Iowa Learning Farms" and now switched to "Farms" because of the mission of the program. The goal is much too vast to say possible, which the original name wasn't clearly showing."

"If visibility and accessibility was a standard practice among Iowans, it is by using online resources. Their website allows farmers in the state to take initiative, but 30,422 farmers used Iowa Learning Farms YouTube videos, as well."

"Ten-thousand field day workshops were held in 2013, and 2,100 people participated. For all of the specific events, Iowa Learning Farms changes the content to affect certain viewers. For example, when the program holds seminars for children, Iowa Learning Farms brings in dogs to help keep them occupied."

"Since 2008, 85 percent of farmers who attended the program in 2014 have used drop-in workshops, listening sessions and day programs."

"Thirty-two field day workshops were held in 2013, and 2,100 people participated. For all of the specific events, Iowa Learning Farms changes the content to affect certain viewers."

"There are a lot of new ideas and innovations that the program is going to try and promote in 2014. One of the more successful ideas that the program issued in 2013 was cover crops. Cover crops are used to promote soil health on farmers' fields."

"Iowa Learning Farms is trying to promote their program by engaging in online resources. Their website has been used by the community to collect fact sheets, to watch videos and to share articles on conservation practices."

"The program also uses a blog to keep in touch with farmers. Iowa Learning Farms has had around 40,000 views on their blog in 2013."

E-CIGARETTE technology is in fact a safer alternative. As electronic cigarettes grow to become a popular replacement to tobacco products, speculation arises whether the usage of the new product will cause similar harm to the health of those who use them. The usage of e-cigarettes is growing, and it has been reported that there is a regular cigarette smoker who uses a nicotine device every day and buys an e-cigarette when they subsequently wind up smoking,” Quimbach said. “Once the dangers of e-cigarettes,” according to the ISU Public Policy Library, the Smokefree Air Act applicable from 2008 and prohibits smoking tobacco and e-cigarettes in public places. According to the ISU Policy Library, the Smokefree Air Act applicable from 2008 and prohibits smoking tobacco and e-cigarettes in public places.

The State Attorney General Tom Miller has been very active in anti-tobacco efforts at the national level for a couple of decades. He has communicated with the Center for Disease Control for their scientific assessment of e-cigarettes and their dangers. Quimbach said, “Once the CDC provides scientific back-up, then that will provide a basis for considering these products in the Clean Air Act.”

When these e-cigarettes are found on the store, it’s very clear what they are all about. It’s a way to get people hooked on nicotine, so that they subsequently wind up smoking. Quimbach said, “You could have a nine-year-old walk into a convenience store and buy an e-cigarette... when they are too young to buy an actual cigarette.”

E-cigarettes do not contain tar and other chemicals like in a regular cigarette. Thus, they are less harmful to the health of the smokers. However, they are kind of separated, or kept on another work-place smoking area. According to the ISU Public Policy Library, the Smokefree Air Act applicable from 2008 and prohibits smoking tobacco and e-cigarettes in public places.

Blaslowsky starts second game of career, ISU beats KSU

By Maddy Arnold
@iowastatedaily.com

It had been a while since Niace "Madd" Blaslowsky hadn't scored more than one 3-pointer in a game.

The sophomore guard had not done it since the first time Iowa State played Kansas State on Jan. 18. She made four during the loss. Blaslowsky — the Cyclone's leading 3-point scorer — matched that number against the Wildcats the second time around Saturday night.

Blaslowsky and the No. 23 Women's Basketball Team (16-5, 7-5 Big 12) defeated Kansas State (9-12, 7-7 Big 12) on Saturday afternoon in a historic 84-80 victory.

"We came very hungry," coach Fred Hoiberg said. "We wanted to get over that hump and take the Cyclones to the next level."

Junior guard Nikki Moody dribbles around her defender, looking to pass. Moody proved to be a key element in Iowa State's offense. Moody had seven of her 18 points in the next minute and a half.

The Cyclones would never lead by fewer than 14 points.

The energy just kind of spreads around the court," Moody said. "Everything picks up on defense and offense. It just starts with somebody hitting. The energy just kind of spreads around the court," Moody said. "Everything picks up on defense and offense. It just starts with somebody hitting.

The ISU tennis team is still undefeated this season. As of now, they have played 8 matches, winning all of them. The team is off to a great start and has a lot of momentum moving forward. The coach, Armando Espinosa, is pleased with the team's performance so far.

Tennis Team Update

The ISU tennis team has been performing exceptionally well, with all matches played each week are being won by the team. The coach, Armando Espinosa, is pleased with the team's performance so far. He said, "I'm definitely hoping that we keep this up. It's just fun to be competing against some tough teams." The team is off to a great start and has a lot of momentum moving forward.

The team's success can be attributed to the hard work and dedication of the players. They are training hard and putting in the effort to improve their game. The coach is proud of the team and is excited to see how they continue to grow.

The team's next match is scheduled for next week, and the coach is looking forward to seeing how the team performs. He said, "I'm really looking forward to seeing how they do in the next match.
