The last several months has seen new arrivals in Iowa State University's Special Collections and University Archives (ISU-SCUA). Chris Anderson joined the department in August as the descriptive records project archivist. He earned his MLIS from UCLA where he focused on informatics, especially music informatics. Brad Kuennen was named the university archivist in November. He has been a staff member of SCUA at ISU for over 12 years and recently received his MLIS from the University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee. Amy Bishop is the new rare books and manuscripts archivist. She started in this position in October, but has been at SCUA for over years years as a project archivist. She earned her MSLIS in 2013 from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. Rachel Seale, the outreach archivist, received her MSLIS from Simmons College in 2006 and arrived in January from the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Visit isuspecialcollections.wordpress.com for more information.

Walter P. Reuther Library reference archivist Kristen Chinery received the Historical Society of Michigan's (HSM) Distinguished Professional Service Award in recognition of her work promoting the preservation of Michigan's history through her work with the Michigan Archival Association and her HSM-sponsored, half-day archival skills workshops designed for small organizations in Michigan that struggle with how to preserve and organize historical materials.

Dana Gerber-Margie began a new position at the Wisconsin Historical Society in December of 2015. Gerber-Margie has been on staff at the Wisconsin Historical Society since 2013 as an audio archivist assistant. She will now serve as project manager for the Wisconsin Sound Archive Project, an endeavor to digitize Wisconsin-related audio content and make it easily accessible to the public.

Heather Fox has been appointed archivist for manuscript collections/codirector of the Oral History Center at the University of Louisville Archives and Special Collections. For the previous three years, Fox worked as archivist for metadata and scholarly communications in the Digital Initiatives unit of the same library.
