Who's There and Where

By JEANETTE BEYER

FROM Kentucky to Michigan on the east and to the Pacific coast on the west lies the territory of Mabel V. Campbell, '05, who has recently been appointed by the Federal Board of Vocational Education, as supervising agent of home economics work in co-operating schools in 22 states.

Miss Campbell enters her important position with a varied and successful career behind her. Besides instructing at her Alma Mater, she has headed home economics work at Illinois Wesleyan university and Rhode Island State College. She was also home demonstration agent in Denver Colorado, and state supervisor of home economics in Colorado.

After a year in charge of teacher training in home economics in the University of Kentucky and a summer session of teaching at the Buffalo State Normal, she attended Columbia University last summer, completing her work for a master's degree.

Miss Campbell, whose home is in Ames, is a sister of Claude V. Campbell, publisher of the Jewell Record.

A BOOSTER FOR AMES

That her Alma Mater remains warm in the heart of Mina Morris, a graduate in Home Economics and Agriculture, is evidenced by the fact that over a dozen of her pupils are now attending Iowa State College.

Miss Morris has charge of the agriculture and normal training departments in the Algona High school, and is such a popular teacher that on her visit to Ames during Homecoming she was kept occupied delivering messages from home and listening to the freshmen experiences of her many proteges.

SARAH BARROWS PUBLISHES BULLETIN

"Teaching English to Foreigners" is the subject of a recently published bulletin, written by Sarah Barrows, '91, who has been doing most successful work in foreign languages.

Miss Barrows, daughter of Prof. Barrows, formerly head of the history department at Iowa State College, was at the time of the war a teacher of German at the University of Ohio. During the war she went into Americanization work, which, together with her former travels and studies in Germany, fitted her especially to simplify the study of English for foreigners.

After the war she was asked by the state normal at San Francisco to do this type of work in that institution, where she holds classes in primary grades, giving her an opportunity to study languages by direct contact with foreign children.

ASSISTANT EDITOR OF "COUNTRY GENTLEMAN"

A recent visitor on the Ames campus was Josephine Wylie, '20, who is household editor of the Country Gentleman. Miss Wylie's position with the Curtiss Publishing Co. is but a growth of her many journalistic activities here at Iowa State College. She was a member of Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalistic fraternity, having served as business manager of the 1920 Bomb, editor of the Emerald Goose, and circulation manager of the Iowa State Student. Miss Wylie was recently bereaved in the death of her mother at the family home near Boone.

"SADIE" ELLIS, MISSIONARY TO PICTURE BRIDES

Seeing that the "knot" is tied tight, and caring for the interests of the many "picture brides" which arrive in San Francisco, is the work which is now occupying Miss Sarah Ellis, '98, a Japanese missionary of the Quaker church.

For ten or fifteen years Miss Ellis taught Domestic Science in a Japanese school in Tokyo. While in Japan she had the interesting experience of becoming personally acquainted with the woman who wrote "The Lady of the Decoration."

"Sadie" Ellis paid her own way through school by assisting in the Home Economics department, and was a popular woman in college, partaking in all college activities. She also taught Home Economics at Iowa State, acting as head of the department during the severe illness of Mrs. Jessup, nee Gertrude Coburn, who was head of the department at that time.

AMES WOMAN POLITICAL LEADER

An Ames woman active in state affairs is Sadie Hook Passig, who was born on an Iowa farm, was a graduate of Iowa State College in '98, and is a citizen of Humboldt, Iowa.

During the promotion of equal suffrage she helped to organize suffrage clubs, served on important interstate committees, and talked over the state endeavoring to interest women in political affairs and civic improvements. Before the last presidential election she was chosen as one of the delegates to the Republican convention which met at Chicago.

Not only is Mrs. Passig interested in politics, but she is an active member of many clubs, such as the P. E. O., Eastern Star, and similar organizations.

For several years after her graduation, Mrs. Passig taught in the public speaking department under Professor Adrian M. Newens.

DOROTHY BOWDISH IN GOVERNMENT HOSPITAL

The position of junior bacteriologist in a United States Marine Hospital is held by Dorothy Bowdish, '20, who recently returned to her home in Ames on a leave of absence.

The hospital, which is located in New Orleans, is not only a service station for U. S. ships, but of foreign ships as well, and men of all nationalities are brought in from the sea for treatment.

On December 1 Miss Bowdish will be transferred from New Orleans to a tuberculosis hospital at Fort Stanton, N. M. She says that she enjoys working for "Uncle Sammy".

EX-PRESIDENT OF WOMAN'S GUILD MAKES GOOD

It doesn't take Iowa State girls long to make good, for here is Louise Wiese, a graduate of but last year, now manager of the cafeteria at Killian's department store in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where meals are served to more than three hundred daily.

Miss Wiese made a splendid record on the campus and was one of the outstanding girls of her class. A girl who was a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, a member of Mortar Board, and president of Woman's Guild, not to mention other activities, is not soon forgotten.

Harriet Smith, '22, is a teacher of home economics at Sac City.

Margaret Murphy, a graduate of last year, is teaching at Calmar, Iowa.

Miss Emma Dodson is in Fairfield, Cal., teaching home economics in the Army Union High school.

Mable Catlin was recently married to Henry Beckman, also an alumni of Iowa State, at Vinton, Iowa. They will make their home at Muscatine, Iowa.

Helen Petersen, who was married this summer to John R. Holland, '21, of Milton, Iowa, is teaching domestic science and history in the Milton High school.

Irma Rowe, '24, was married in September to Stanley Graham. They are living at Huntsville, Texas, where Mr. Graham is teaching Agricultural Engineering and coaching in the Sam Houston State Normal College.

Mrs. Jean Fortenbacher, who was an instructor and graduate student in the Household Science department last year, is now head of the Home Economics department in Frances Shimer College for Women at Mt. Carroll, Illinois.
