This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Iowa State University Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Ames Forester by an authorized editor of Iowa State University Digital Repository. For more information, please contact digirep@iastate.edu.
EDITOR'S NOTE: We still have not established contact with all of our graduates since the war. For this reason you will probably note errors and omissions in the following directory. An asterisk preceding the name indicates that we have no record of the person's present address. Both the Forestry Department and the Ames Forester would greatly appreciate it if you would send us the correct address of any of the alumni of whom you have knowledge unless their correct address appears below. Names not appearing in this list are those who, insofar as we know, are deceased.

This generation of informed loggers developed the arch-winch-tractor teams to snake out selectively cut trees from sustained yield forests.

CARCO Arches, among the first in the woods, were designed as tools of conservation. They are also tools which have stepped up production. Load-balance, maneuverability, and a wide range of adjustments permit adaptation of CARCO logging equipment to diverse logging problems.

The quality of LEADERSHIP is essential to success!

Hundreds of leading logging engineers, sawmill engineers, operating heads and engineers in the forest products industry formed the habit—while still in their university and college days—to depend month after month upon every issue of THE TIMBERMAN to bring them information and ideas on new methods, new practices and new procedures developed in all major departments of the industry.

THE TIMBERMAN editorial staff travels thousands of miles each month to bring you the latest in pictures and text directly from on-the-job observations and reports.

You will benefit greatly in your career by making every number of THE TIMBERMAN a “must” in your reading and studying. To be well informed is a requisite of leadership—make it your habit.
