Miss Jones Goes Into Commercial Work

Miss Beulah Jones, who has been assistant dietitian at the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago, has recently taken a position as director of the Edison Electric Appliance Company industrial cafeteria. The cafeteria is in the factory. It is beautifully equipped with all the electrical appliances and stoves and is used as a show room, as well as a practical cafeteria. In addition there is also a small kitchen, thoroughly equipped, where dinners and luncheons for buyers are prepared. Miss Jones has charge of the buying, managing, planning and administration. In her letter she says that October 1 is the day planned for the Ames picnic in Chicago.

Miss Jones is also candidate for the presidency of the Chicago Dietitians Association. She was graduated from the Home Economics Division in 1923 and had her major in Institutional Administration.

At Michael Reese

Beth Johnson, '24, is now supervisor of the main kitchen at Michael Reese hospital in Chicago.

Florence Housten, H. Ec. '25, writes from Vandalia, Mo., where she is teaching Smith-Hughes home economics, that she is especially anxious for the "Homemaker" to arrive as they are editing a high school home economics paper. Florence says, "It is to be called 'Sauce Pan Secrets' and no doubt will reform housekeeping habits all over Missouri."

Mrs. C. P. Taylor Leaves the University of Arkansas

Carrie Plunkett Taylor, '22, who was acting head of the Home Economics Department at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, has resigned her position and is with her husband at the University of Illinois, where he is studying for an advanced degree. Helen Goodspeed of California is the new head of the Home Economics work at Fayetteville.

Entertained Faculty at Farm Home

Anna Gertrude Riggs Vernon, who graduated in 1921 and was a teaching fellow while working for her M. A. in '23, entertained six of the present foods faculty members at her farm home near Muscatine, Iowa, during the week-end of Oct. 24. Those who attended the party were: Dr. Mabel Nelson, Florence Busse, Viola Bell, Ida Shilling, Belle Lowe and Alma Riemenschneider.

Miss Martha Heiner is teaching at W Cover, Neb., and is doing Smith-Hughes work.

A Homemaker Enthusiast

Gwendolyn Watts

Another "Homemaker" enthusiast sends us greetings from Madison, S. D., this month and responds very delightfully to the call for a kaleidoscopic view of her career at Ames and the four years since that time.

Concerning her college life she writes of good times, carrying twenty hour schedules to overcome the handicap of entering college in the middle of the year and pestering the editors of campus publications until she finally became feature editor of the Student, society editor of the Bomb and editor of the Home Economics department of the Iowa Agricultural College, at the same time contributing salable new articles to the Des Moines Register and Tribune. She has now the keenest driving power, and I hope to realize them eventually.

"As for hobbies, I write, having always a longing to try things I'm going to do, written the idea for a novel holding a prominent place. I'm so naive at the love making phase of it, that so far I've only got so far with the book."

I think I've a little talent for article writing, and so keep on, sending some away to magazines and forgetting to have them returned. However, I think the best equipped in the world to have now the keenest driving power, and I hope to realize them eventually.

"My ambitions are like the sands of the sea: To be a most excellent cook; to have charge of the Foods section of some magazine; to get a type of service to Iowa; to establish a tea room somewhere, some time; to have a perfectly chosen wardrobe; to own a bookcase full of my favorite volumes—these are only a few of them. However, I think the best equipped in the world to have now the keenest driving power, and I hope to realize them eventually."

My other hobbies are playing bridge and reading omnivorously. And then, I make it a point never to miss getting new experiences, so all in all, life's pretty much just what I like and I like it."

Mabel Rood Chief Dietitian at Potter Metabolic Hospital

Mabel Rood, '25 who finished her student training at Potter Metabolic Clinic at Santa Barbara, Calif., spent a vacation period at Seaside Hotel, Lang Beach, Calif., in July. September 1 she went on as assistant and December 1 she is to be made chief dietitian. This is the usual progress of our Ames girls.

Miss Elizabeth D. Fogg Dietitian in Los Angeles

Excerpts from a letter from Elizabeth D. Fogg:

"At present I am dietitian at a private boarding school for boys called 'The Webb School of California,' but I shall be here only a few more weeks. After Dec. 10, I shall be located in the California Lutheran Hospital in Los Angeles. I filled a vacancy there for almost two weeks this summer and I am very happy to return as they are building a beautiful new home and hospital, which will be very modern and one of the best equipped in the west."
