Help for Laboring Teachers . . .

By Cora B. Miller

Head Home Economics Education

HOW well do I remember how much it meant to me when I was a young teacher to find a book on methods of teaching some subject over which I was laboring.

Miss Mabel Russell

Just recently such a book appeared in the field of art education entitled "Art Training Through Home Problems." No one realizes better than teachers of home economics how much art there is to be taught to the homemaker. This book, which was written by two of our own faculty members—Miss Mabel Russell of the applied art staff and Mrs. Elsie Wilson Gwynne, recently of the home economics education staff—gives teachers much help in methods of handling this interesting subject which every home economics teacher realizes she must include in her course.

The book contains valuable chapters on clothing selection and its various aspects of personal clothing, fitness and suitability, harmonious colors, and also a chapter on home furnishing.

ONE state supervisor of home economics has said, "It will be a great help to teachers in the field. We have needed this type of material a long time." Another supervisor writes: "I like especially the use of illustrations of good things, the chapter on illustrative material and, best of all, the common sense presentation of subject matter, free from confusing terminology." Another has said: "The book is beautifully done and we are finding it valuable in our state. It fills a very definite need." A young teacher, teaching related art for the first time to a high school class in home economics, says: "What should I do without it?"

Any teacher of Home Economics who desires specific help in the teaching of the art phases of her subject will be delighted with a copy of "Art Training Through Home Problems," which is so definite in its suggestions and which is so beautifully illustrated.
