Gaynold Carroll discovers that Sally is devoted to man-tailored clothes in sport or dress. Pouncing upon comfortable college clothes with casual smartness, Sally gloats in the mannish simplicity of Fall, 1940. She suggests you watch for that "long look" which was introduced in spring jackets and is emphasized in this season's dresses with peplums, tucks, roomy book pockets or lowered waistlines.

Collegiate prayers are answered this season with the perfection of the pinafore. It's lush in corduroy of your favorite hue worn with a contrasting color or plaid wool shirt. Tuck one of the classic, long-sleeved shirts under the latest version of the "pimmic" in rust or bottle-green. Or you can tailor it right up to your throat in tweed or gabardine like your suit. Wear the shirt open-throated or otherwise, but a pinafore is a must-have.

Date technique begins with clothes charm. Dress up in a black wool piped with black velvet; a bright red crepe with unpressed pleats and jewelry studs; a cashmere jersey with drawstrings of gold leather at wrists and waistline; a fitted jacket of wool and a velveteen skirt; an embroidered lace guimpe under a soft velveteen frock; a tri-color combination in jersey with detachable hood; a full-skirted charmer in velveteen with lapels of white.

The "real McCoy" in headgear is an exact copy of Joe DiMaggio's baseball cap. Skull caps, jockey caps and small fitted velvet caps resting behind uppity pompadours are the latest triumphs. Set the campus buzzing with a bright pillbox, chin strap attached. Top off your faille jacket costume, or your sheer woolen frock with a sleek, sophisticated satin turban. It is smartest in black or black with the new potato-peak color called Huaca, a rich neutral brown.

Autumn colors planned, dyed and fashioned to wear with each other, are irresistible. Zip up your wardrobe with a dynamic combination of juniper green, autumn forest green, nightflight blue, dark autumn navy, Indian summer, ripe russet, huckleberry, frost-nipped purple, scarecrow grey, bark brown, or harvest brown. Newest team-mates are beige and red. Try a beige dress with a red dickey.

A jockey hat and mean pair of boxing-glove mittens make their appearance above worn with a tweed topcoat. The suave lady on the left is tailored in a smart velveteen long coat.

Long coiffures are still the thing. Well-brushed shiny hair has loosely curled ends. Curls are often worn over the forehead and are frequently seen brushed off the ears. A neat roll over a ribbon tied in a bow at front is the one uppity-hairdo for campus wear. Velvet and ribbon bows as well as real and artificial flowers are fashionable hair frivolities. will be better with neat, well-kept locks.

Achieve individuality by wearing a carbon blue (grayed blue with a purple tinge) coat trimmed with brown fur or a South American tangerine light woolen dress with voluminous pockets. Tangerine color is often slightly greyed. Neutral color woolen dresses with bright dicky's change last year's patriotism by wearing the flag on your pocket or coat lapel. Go a step beyond and invest in a new middy-top dress trimmed with white stars and braid. A white tie, an exact replica from West Point, gives the crowning touch.

Democrat or Republican you know that the most fashionable lapel or pocket gadget is the most patriotic. Sally salutes the American flag as it waves proudly on a sturdy pin with a safety clasp. Flaunt your true model. A blanket coat lined with bright broadcloth in a contrasting or harmonizing color will add a splurge of color interest for you.
