From the Heartland, to the World...

For one weekend in March, Ames became the vet student capital of the world as nearly 1400 vet students from every vet school in the country converged on the city. After more than a year of planning, fundraising, and organizing, the veterinary students of Iowa State University welcomed their colleagues from around the country for a weekend of education, competition, and of course, socialization. Iowa's warm, welcoming spirit overpowered its cold, blustery March weather to ensure that everyone had a wonderful time. In every respect, SAVMA Symposium 2001 was an outstanding success. Here are some of the highlights...
