your hair's in the HEADLINES!

Vogue says, "The chignon is chic." Mademoiselle advocates, "Trim it to a poodle cut." Glamour advises, "Gather it up into a ponytail." But the Homemaker says, "Fit your personality and it will fit you." In other words your hair is in the headlines this year. But before you get lost in the mass production of poodle cuts and ponytails, take a brief analysis of your personality.

Donna Schuster

Evelyn Hoopes

Martha LeBuhn

If you decide you look best in pastels, and men are inclined to protect you, Donna Schuster might have the answer to your hair personality problems with a poodle cut. Evelyn Hoopes' favorite dresses are also pastels, but she finds she can manage a car door without a gentleman's assistance if necessary. If you are this petite, self-sufficient type, maybe Evvie's style will give you an idea.

For those of you who play a par game of golf, you might take a hint from Martha LeBuhn. She wears her hair in a short, casual manner that doesn't lose its appeal on the fairway. Ramona Sime's ponytail will take her anyplace in style . . . the ski slope, the bowling alley, or to classes. Add a velvet ribbon, and she's ready for any formal dance.

More often than not, Jo Hollingsworth finds herself in a smart suit, so she wears her hair to match it . . . in a straight-cut bob. We suggest you try Jo's easy-to-care-for style, providing your face is oval, your hair is glossy, and you have no patience with pin curls. On the other hand, Virginia Kurtz would rather wear a chic black cocktail dress than anything else in her closet. If you fit in this category, why not follow Ginny's example with a long page-boy?

Take another look at your personality, and then a look in the mirror. If the two types are alike, you're in style. But, if not, try taking a suggestion from the personalities on this page. You, too, can have your hair in the headlines.
