Who's Who

In Home Economics

by Marylen Green

Technical Journalism Senior

To you Home Economics students who wonder what you'll be doing several years after you graduate from Iowa State, Dr. Margaret Liston is a good example.

Having graduated from here in 1927, Dr. Liston returned three years ago to the campus and has recently accepted the position as head of the Department of Home Management. This isn't a new job to her, for she was head of the Department of Family Economics and Home Management at the University of Nebraska before coming to Iowa State.

Busy At Research

If you'd ever take time to peek in on Miss Liston you'd find her busy helping develop and further the research work as well as planning the undergraduate, graduate and extension programs in Home Management. Her current interest is her effort in trying to strengthen and expand a program for the graduate students.

Don't get the idea that this industrious woman spends all her time with her Home Management work, though, for she still finds time to enjoy her hobby of color photography.

Mrs. Irene Buchanan

Another change in rank came to Mrs. Irene Buchanan this quarter. She was recently selected to be associate professor in charge of the Department of Textiles and Clothing.

You've probably all met her either through her counseling work with junior college women and General Home Economics majors, as advisor of General

Home Ec. Club, or as a teacher in various Textiles and Clothing classes.

Her newest title will come in December, however, for she will become a grandmother for the first time!

Dr. Louise Peet

Dr. Glenn Hawkes

Back again this year as professor in charge of the Department of Household Equipment is Dr. Louise Peet. The job is nothing new for her because she was department head from 1930 to 1951.

Originally in the field of Food and Nutrition at Iowa State, she became interested in Household Equipment when auditing some courses and has headed in this direction ever since. Dr. Peet has trained more people for Home Economics positions in Household Equipment than any other person in the country. She is also co-author of the text book, "Household Equipment."

The appointment of associate professor in charge of the Department of Child Development went to a man who has gained about as much knowledge from his home life as he has through his studies. Dr. Glenn Hawkes is his name.

Hawkes Learns At Home

Dr. Hawkes has a lot of opportunity to put his teachings and knowledge to practical use since at present he's raising three children of his own.

It was Dr. Hawkes who was brought to Iowa State to start the Child Development 300 course concerning family relationships. At present he is still instructing a section of this course and also conducting a seminar in research methods.
