A Dog’s Welcome

Whitney Olthoff∗

∗Iowa State University

Copyright ©2008 by the authors. Sketch is produced by The Berkeley Electronic Press (bepress).
http://lib.dr.iastate.edu/sketch
A Dog's Welcome
Whitney Olthoff

Black eyes sparkle, cold nose twitches, stump tail moves like a hummingbird's wing.
Small white, ebony speckled body wriggles and lunges from my mother's warm arms. Velvet floppy ears pressed back in excitement, jet black face tackles mine before I can brace myself.
Ivory teeth chew on my nose, soft pink tongue baptizes every inch of my face.

It's good to be home.

Whitney Olthoff is a junior in Psychology and is set to graduate in 2009. Her interests include reading, writing, art, music, animals, movies, food, sleep, and spending time with family and friends. She loves her crazy puppy and wrote this while thinking about her. Yes, this really is what her greetings home are like (and she's sure any dog-lover/owner can relate).