Governments react to protests in Middle East

By Katherine Marcheski

Since Tunisia began promoting their government in December, several other Middle Eastern countries have had protests of their rights for the people that have been suppressed by their presidents. Protests in Yemen, Libya, Syria, Egypt, Bahrain, Iran, Saudi Arabia and Turkey are the same countries that have been attempting to win freedom for their people. If people want to bring about change, they must keep it up and not let up until they get what they want. If the United States and Canada, governments, and private businesses keep donating money to these countries, we are not sending the right message to these countries. If we want freedom, we need to start at home first and then the world will follow. If people want to be free, they need to keep it up and not give up until they get what they want.

Widespread unrest continues throughout the Arab world

1. Morocco

Moroccans continue protests in an effort to call for the government to make the public justice system more effective. Protesters have been able to stand collectively and express their desires for the betterment of their country. The government has been able to make a change in the justice system and promote peace and stability.

2. Algeria

Protests in Algeria have once again led to a change of government, but the protesters have been unable to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

3. Tunisia

The country of Tunisia has been able to make a change in their government, but the protesters have not been able to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

4. Libya

Despite the protests, the government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

5. Egypt

Egypt was able to make a change in their government, but the protesters have not been able to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

6. Syria

Despite the protests, the government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

7. Jordan

Protests in Jordan have sparked unrest in the country, but the government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

8. Saudi Arabia

Saudi Arabia has been able to make a change in their government, but the protesters have not been able to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

9. Yemen

The country of Yemen has been able to make a change in their government, but the protesters have not been able to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

10. Bahrain

The country of Bahrain has been able to make a change in their government, but the protesters have not been able to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

11. Iran

The country of Iran has been able to make a change in their government, but the protesters have not been able to make a change in the current president. The government has been able to maintain their position and the protesters have not been able to make a change.

Although Egypt was successful in removing their dictator, President Mubarak, to step down, the country’s future remains uncertain. Although Egypt is strong, there are many other Middle Eastern countries that are struggling to make change and promote peace and stability. Each country has its own unique situation, and it is important to understand the challenges each country is facing. It is important to stay informed and support those who are working towards peace and stability in the Middle East.

“Right now our Caribou cafes such as Bookends, Courtyard, HUB, MU and Caribou strive to recycle,” said Angela Witt, manager of dining services for the Hub and Caribou. “They’re either going to have to deal with the staff once more or still reuse the cups that are already here.”

“We are generally in a struggle; Ames burns our trash,” Patel said. “We are always looking for new ways to be more sustainable.”

While Caribou Coffee incorporates Rainforest Alliance certified coffee, we serve coffee on campus in an environmentally friendly, sustainable way and the environment is protected. The coffee is certified and over 85 percent of the product in general, and their children have access to clean water, nice living environment is protected; they engaged with the program. “The church has a program to our facilities and pick up food and take it back to this program.”

In both experiments, participants would generally prefer to avoid the immediate consequences, regardless of the long-term ones. “We were focusing on one small problem, an exploration, recognizing that there are other problems and other areas that are in the same time,” Madon said.

Polyphasic sleeping technology... at your own risk

W hen the time is ripe to make a decision about the future of your daily sleep and refresh habits, you need to take a look at the state of the science on this front. Both the National Sleep Foundation and the American Academy of Sleep Medicine (AASM), for instance, have begun to consider the current evidence on the topic. The AASM, in particular, has released a position statement on polyphasic sleep, which is a form of sleep that involves breaking up sleep into multiple, short naps throughout the day.

The idea behind polyphasic sleep is that it can improve sleep efficiency by allowing for more frequent, shorter periods of sleep. This can be especially useful for people who experience sleep disturbances or who have to maintain their alertness throughout the day. However, there are also potential risks and drawbacks to this type of sleep schedule, which can vary greatly depending on the individual and their lifestyle.

In a recent study published in the journal Sleep, researchers found that polyphasic sleep can improve alertness and overall performance, but it can also lead to social isolation and fatigue. The study concluded that these findings should be considered when deciding whether to adopt polyphasic sleeping habits.

Polyphasic sleeping can be divided into three main types:

1. Uberman sleep: This involves breaking up sleep into short naps throughout the day. This type of sleep is commonly used by professional athletes and extreme endurance athletes, as it allows for quick recovery and maximum alertness.

2. Dymaxion sleep: This involves breaking up sleep into three equal parts, with each part lasting for about four hours. This type of sleep is commonly used by individuals who work night shifts or who have to maintain their alertness throughout the day.

3. Polyphasic sleep: This involves breaking up sleep into an even more varied schedule, with each nap lasting for about 20-30 minutes. This type of sleep is commonly used by individuals who want to maintain their alertness throughout the day but are also trying to save time and energy.

It's important to note that polyphasic sleeping is not for everyone. It can be especially challenging for people who experience sleep disturbances or who have to maintain their alertness throughout the day.

If you're considering adopting polyphasic sleeping habits, be sure to consult with a healthcare professional to ensure that it's safe and effective for your individual needs. Ultimately, the decision to adopt polyphasic sleeping habits should be made based on a thorough evaluation of the benefits and risks, as well as the potential impact on your overall health and well-being.

Gymnasts post high road score, UI wins

The No. 31 ISU gymnastics couldn't afford to put a hiccup in their performance to start the day, as they walked into Hilton Coliseum in Lincoln, Neb., against No. 9 Nebraska for their fifth consecutive 20-win season.

Despite the loss, the Cyclones (6-4) are still the highest team to tuck away from Hillsboro Coliseum that season. Even though the mid-score wasn't enough to match Iowa State's 10-2 Big 12 record, ISU coach Jay Ronayne was pleased with the outcome.

"This is our highest road score, and that helps us," Ronayne said. "That score is something that's very important to us. We are trying to do just that in the top 10 in the country for the season.

Leading the Cyclones was junior Michelle Browning, who won the match competition with a score of 9.875. Also performing strongly for Iowa State was senior Candace Savelle-Garner, winning the vault with her straddle, earning scores of 9.950 — tying career-high.

The Cyclones return to action on Thursday, March 10 at home to welcome the University of Nebraska-Omaha in the season's final exhibition.

Cyclones pull off win in overtime battle with Cornhuskers

By Chris Cuellar

The No. 31 Cyclones took on a very strong Iowa team Friday night in Lincoln, Neb., as the home team came out on top, beating Nebraska 84-82 in overtime.

In the back-and-forth battle, Iowa State (10-4, 3-2 in Big 12) won its first game since Jan. 15.

Nebraska (18-9, 1-5) junior Jordan Jeter hit big shots over the weekend to end the regular season. Iowa State (10-4, 3-2 in Big 12) has won its first game since Jan. 15.

"It was relief, we finally won one," said ISU senior forward Jamie Vanderbeken.

Junior forward Jamie Vanderbeken led ISU with 19 points over the weekend to end the regular season, and is currently second in the country in minutes per game with 38.4 minutes.

"I was very proud of our effort. We beat a very good team," said ISU coach Fred Hoiberg.

The Cyclones topped the Cornhuskers and ended a 10-game losing streak on Saturday. The team entered the game coming off a 13-game win against Kansas State.

Murdoch’s 1,000th win celebrated

By Dan Kasman

Players, coaches and news-apers celebrated coach Al Murdoch’s 1,000th win Saturday night at Legends Bar and Grill. Murdoch achieved the career milestone in 42 years with six years at Central Illinois State College.

“Doctor Hockey” finished his 40th year with the Cyclones, and the team was generous with its thanks for the evening Northern Iowa. Murdoch said, “I think very highly of him,” said John Boyt, professor of biochemistry who also serves as an assistant hockey staff. “He was a tough man,” he said. “He's a pretty＋timers opinion and has made a huge contribution to athletes.”

backwash institution to get
Top assists and a 6-of-6 effort from the free throw line by senior guard Diante Garrett led them with 17 points, nine each from junior guard Chris Allen, who also tallied nine assists to go along with his 17 points, and trepidation that builds up when a squad win in a tight game and fought off the murmurs of close games they've played and the job that he and his staff have done."

"All of them," Sadler said. "All the things that we built our program on defensively ... it didn't click to them. This stuff happens in games. It's not like you can't make them."

"Iowa State's losing streak was the longest in the Big 12 this season and while the team still has to navigate a tough road ahead, it has already won six of its last 10 games against top defenses in the country, and a lot of people kind of wrote them off," Sadler said.

"You can not say enough about the number of close games they've played and the job that Fred Hoiberg has done to be able to keep them competing like they have," Sadler said. "The biggest difference was on defense, and it's not just on defense, but the on offense as well."

"The team was 0-3 in 3-point field goal attempts since the Feb. 12 matchup with Colorado at Hilton Coliseum.

"If you look at the stat sheet, you'd think that they played really well against the second-half," said Sadler. "The fact of the matter is they made the plays when they needed to, made them step up in overtime and got out of the box on the right side of the road."

"When you look at the box score, there are so many little things that you have to do as a team to win the game, efforts they made." Sadler said.

Knockout game scheduled during VEISHEA

By McKenzia Voyt

This year the team is working hard to get their names across the campus. This year the main focus is on getting the word out about the upcoming game and making sure that everyone that can get there is there and will be ready to get there. The team is trying to make sure that everyone knows about the game and that it will affect their day. They are planning to get the word out by putting up posters, flyers, and making sure that everyone knows about the game and when it is scheduled to take place.
