The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution
Two high schoolers battle principal, honored with award
By Frances Myers
fmyers@iowastate.edu

First Amendment rights aren’t something Judyinn Garcia and Lori Schiffer are used to having violated.

The two high school juniors from Colorado Springs are the 2011 recipients of the Champion of the First Amendment Award for ISU First Amendment Day.

Garcia and Schiffer, students at Overland High School in Aurora, Colo., struggled with violations of the First Amendment when applying for hospital-like facilities on the school grounds to support the senior class gift.

Last year, the senior class gift was chosen from a series of projects to benefit the school newspaper, The Scout. The newspaper published an article about social media types placed on black girls within the high school.

The guy who wrote it was talking about how some black girls are seen as loud and obnoxious, and why they are demeaned by this type,” said Garcia, opinion editor of The Scout.

“And he said in the article that he believed it was true because the girls haven’t grown into their true personalities yet and they put out to get attention,” said Ms. Lundie, student newspaper advisor. Garcia claimed that he had received a complaint saying that this was inappropriate and they were offended. The thing is, the kid who wrote it is African-American. It is legally proper clear under Colorado law that just because someone is not grown up yet and has something written, it doesn’t make it unprotected speech,” said Ms. Lundie.

Barista competition
Students battle with beverages
By John Lomalea
Jlomalea@iowastate.edu

A two-hour battle was held on Monday, April 4. Twelve cafe employees were selected for the competition but only 11 would be competing. The clock ticked from 10 minutes to zero. The barista behind the counter made the two drinks as fast as possible while the judges tasted and critiqued the drinks on menus by fall. The competition included the clinking and whipped beverages. The two baristas and the 10-minute time limit, the drinks creation, and the exercises were thetests presented to the judges. The aroma and sounds of automatic shots being pulled by the espresso machines inspired the judges to call the coffee to a halt.

“My goal was to make the drink fast and the judges said that they made the fastest drink. The second one was a hot chocolate drink. The judges asked if they liked their first drink,” said Jason Phillips, Barista competition winner and senior.

Three judges were chosen to compete from Caribou Coffee and the Roosevelt, which supplies coffee to the school.

Participants were encouraged to use ingredients creatively or find a way to make the drinks in an easy fall.

Barista competition winner and senior Jason Phillips said that he had the potential to put the drinks on an easy fall.

Unlike last year, the school displayed various different drinks from “Cookie Monster Mochas” to “Mint Chocolate Chip Mochas” and “Butter Almond Roches.”

Wendel Rickman, student in management information systems, participated for his second time and was inspired by chocolate whipped topping.

The Harry Potter franchise includes seven books that have “bewitched” more than 450 million worldwide fans, and has been translated into 72 languages, with 11 new languages to be released in 2011. It is one of the most successful film franchises of all time, with over $3 billion in worldwide ticket sales. The Harry Potter phenomenon has also led to the creation of new theme parks, attracting millions of visitors each year.

Universal Studios Hollywood was the first park to unveil a Harry Potter-themed ride, Harry Potter and the Forbidden Journey, in 2010. The ride was a huge success, drawing millions of visitors and generating significant revenue for the park.

With the help of the film’s success, Universal Studios Hollywood added a Harry Potter-themed area to its Islands of Adventure theme park, including the first-ever outdoor roller coaster. The ride opened to great fanfare in 2010, drawing record-breaking crowds and generating significant interest from visitors.

Celebrating ‘freedom for the thought you hate the most’

Iowa State Daily

Editor’s note: This is the second of a two-part series of opinion columns about the recent hearing involving the controversial Westboro Baptists in their attempt to picket at military funerals. The first column, “Issues of visibility,” ran Thursday, April 7.

rly, there have been several articles in the Iowa State Daily regarding various religious views.

One article dealt with discussing and the freedom of speech, while another focused on the impact of religion on campus. Christianity and the reaction of the American Atheist Convention that will hit the Midwest this month.

While all this is perhaps useful for starting dialogues about religion on campus, similar columns could also promote one point of view that may inhibit honest discussions.

A recent survey from the Pew Research Center shows that Americans are divided on whether “anti-Christian” attitudes are prevalent in society. Those who are open to exercising their First Amendment rights simply have a day that urges students to talk about religion.

This event is meant to allow students to ask questions of differing views in their community. I, for one, plan to attend, because I am very curious about the question the Muslim Student Alliance asks. It is really a question that all of us should ask ourselves.

s of late, there have been several articles in the Iowa State Daily regarding various religious views. Surely, we all have that?

Questions about religion shouldn’t come from a closed mind, but a healthy curiosity and openness in sexual orientation to break down stereotypes, preconceptions, and generalizations about atheists.

One of the best ways to demolish stereotypes is the OUT Campaign.

Perhaps the most well-known organization of its kind is the American Atheist Convention that will hit the Midwest this month.

Arizona legislation proves racism is still a problem

Senate Bill 375. This one act of Arizona legislation is sufficient enough to repudiate Robert Bender’s article. “Racism is dead, let’s move on,” it states. Part of the bill is that a “peaceful protest” is defined as a “non-violent assembly for the purpose of petitioning the government or its representatives.” Translation. Law enforce- ment doads for or seeks documentation of citizenship status. Additionally, the bill fails to tactically point out one or more long-standing police practices. One is allowing the authorities to stop, based on their skin color or assumed immigration status of the individual. The bill itself is not as ex- tremistic as it seems. The first African American president is elected and poof, racism was Obama’s presidency. By Bender to the death of rac- ism was Obama’s presidency. The bill states that “for any law- enforcer who lacks reasonable suspicion.” The translation is that the legislator to prove that the officer is dead. Let’s move on.”

Iowa State plans to use home field advantage against familiar team

By Darrin.Cline | iowastatedaily.com

Home field has been relatively friendly to the ISU softball team thus far this season. Standing at 8-0 playing at Ames, the team will try to use the friendly atmosphere as they play host to the University of Minnesota.

“The matchup will mark the first time the Gophers (10-14, 1-3 Big Ten) have played in Ames during Stacy Gemeinhardt-Cesler’s tenure with Cyclones (37-11-1, 8-10 Big Ten).” Gemeinhardt-Cesler said.

While it is the Gophers first visit, the two teams are very familiar with each other. It will be the 70th meeting between the schools, as in season when Minnesota has a 39-30 advantage.

“I know their players, so many games this week and that’s really nice for the players,” ISU pitcher Rachel Zabriskie said during the Cyclones’ game against Northern Iowa on Tuesday at the Southwest Athletic Complex. Zabriskie had six strikeouts and allowed six hits in Iowa State’s 11-3 win over the Panthers. Photo: Jake Lovett/Iowa State Daily

“I hope to get a big crowd here,” Gemeinhardt-Cesler said. “I still remember playing against South Dakota last night. The Dodgers picked up a big win with that walk-off home run, and it was tough to swallow for everyone involved.”

“I think they play a lot of competitive games and so do we so it will be a lot of fun,” Gemeinhardt-Cesler said. Thursday’s doubleheader will begin at 2 p.m. at the Southwest Athletic Complex.

Runners hope to improve times in Arizona classic

By Sally Dinlin

The ISU track and field team will be headed to Tempe, Ariz., to compete in the Sun Angel Track Classic Thursday through Saturday.

The team will be sending the majority of its mid-distance runners to the meet along with a few distance runners and the field event competitors.

Mid-distance coach Kristy Popp has high hopes for many of her athletes, including Elphas Sang, who is currently ranked No. 50 in the nation.

Sang, 19, is a distance runner and will be ready to compete this weekend.

"I think he’s ready to have breakthrough race how any meet now," Popp said. "He’s been stuck on that 1:50 mark all of the indoor season I am hoping to see him break good things."

Senior Lucy Kimbrough has been overcoming a physical setback with an Achilles tendinitis this past week but she has been doing well and will be ready to compete this weekend.

Distance runner Kirsten Theriard had a successful meet last weekend as well taking first in the 800-meter and second in the 1,500-meter.

"Kirsten has been a little stuck around that 2:30 mark so we’re trying to get her under that," Popp said.

"We had a tough week of training so her stride isn’t really great but hopefully she’ll bounce back in time for the meet."

Cyclones travel to take on Texas Tech, Baylor

By Clint Cole
clintcow@iowastatedaily.com

The ISU men’s basketball team will have its hands full this weekend against two very talented teams.

The Cyclones – 10-4 and Big 12-3 ranked neither Friday and Saturday in Lubbock, Texas, and No. 9 ranked Baylor in Waco, Texas.

Last weekend, the Red Raiders (14-4, 4-0) defeated Oklahoma State by a score of 68-64 and followed that up with an upset over No. 23 Texas, also by a score of 68-64.

ISU senior Liza Wischer said that this isn’t going to be as easy.

"They’re not really tall at the state, or the wine and losses, because Baylor just beat Kansas State, who we almost beat," Wischer said.

Wischer said that the wine and losses between the Big 12 doesn’t matter anything to us because I think we can go out there and win one game and we can beat anyone. And I think that gives us the idea that we’re Big 12.

Last season, the Red Raiders defeated the Cyclones by a score of 62-54.

The Baylor Bears (15-3, 5-1) are also coming off of a victory over No. 23 Texas. They defeated Oklahoma State 47-23 and followed that up with a win against Iowa State. The Bears have a perfect 15-0 record against the Cyclones.

"The Bears have a perfect 15-0 record against the Cyclones and have only lost four games throughout this series," Coach Armando Espinosa said that this weekend will be for salvaging after the tough losses to Kansas and Kansas State last Friday and Sunday.

"The Cyclones have been practicing outdoors at Fisher this week and he thinks that they will benefit from that. He’s never been a guy to be formal, we’re going to try to adapt to that," Espinosa said.

"Thursday is an all day travel day so we won’t even be able to see the day of the match."

The main advantage Espinosa thinks his team has is being a team with nothing to lose.

"If we play like we have nothing to lose then we’ll be okay," Espinosa said.

"The minute we start putting pressure on ourselves and think about things, then that’s when things is a little bit tougher."

The Cyclones take on Texas Tech at 4 p.m. Friday in Lubbock, and Baylor at 1 p.m. Sunday in Waco.

Painters Anonymous encourages talent Club offers students opportunity to advance skills, create art with others who share passion of painting

The College of Design Art Club’s art studio is a large mural. Any interested artist is welcome to work on the mural. They can “combine relationships with materials provided for them.” Blanc said.

Blanc also said that they had created a mentoring system for the studio. He also added that the club members would be giving back to the community.

Schafer’s mom had said she didn’t recall him not showing it to us, and he had said he didn’t remember doing it. The newspaper chain was also discussing whether to sue the school.

Sudik was relieved of advising, said the college spokesperson. “We’ve kept our stories straight the entire time,” said Gutierrez.

Lundie also informed Schafer and Goldstein that they had been given permission to print their story.

But Lundie changed his mind when he saw that the story was going to be published.

“Within less than 24 hours we had to print the story,” said Gutierrez.

Sudik described the story as a “very pertinent” piece of information.

Legal specialists said it was possible that the school had violated the First Amendment.

Gutierrez said that there are a lot of things that Schafer had written about cop — quotes him nine times in the article.

Leibert’s mom had said she didn’t recall him not showing it to them, and she doesn’t believe in suing anybody anymore.

But when we asked to see the call log, she said it was lost. “We had the call log,” said Leibert. “We were called by the police.”

“By the way, if you want to know what the police are doing in the school, you can ask,” Leibert said.

“Schafer, Lori’s mother. “She was merely referring to the graduation rates story. That matters, so I called my mom and told her not to go in without calling first.”

Goldstein listened in on the meeting, but he said he was unable to vote.

But Lundie changed his mind when he saw that the story was going to be published.

But Lundie changed his mind when he saw that the story was going to be published.

“We’ve kept our stories straight the entire time,” said Gutierrez.

Lundie also informed Schafer and Goldstein that they had been given permission to print their story.

But Lundie changed his mind when he saw that the story was going to be published.

“Within less than 24 hours we had to print the story,” said Gutierrez.

Sudik described the story as a “very pertinent” piece of information.

Legal specialists said it was possible that the school had violated the First Amendment.

Gutierrez said that there are a lot of things that Schafer had written about cop — quotes him nine times in the article.

Leibert’s mom had said she didn’t recall him not showing it to them, and she doesn’t believe in suing anybody anymore.
