New peer group comforts victims of sexual assault

By Linda Kumpfke

W hile one campus year will be a sexual assault peer group dedicated solely to ISU students. This Entering Shelter and Support group run by Avalon Center will meet the first Monday of each month from 7-8:30 PM. The group will be led by the ACCESS advocate. It will be a confidential way for ISU students to talk about their personal finance. Participating students will be able to work in teams and what works best for them and what students who are and what students who are.

Another group will start up this fall and complement the program. An outreach, the advocacy for this campus-based group has had numerous hours of training. She realizes their needs and the main problem is that many survivors do not take on-going training as a full-time students.

As a sexual assault advocate, my job is to empower survivors to make sure they understand their options and supporting them in their decision. I am also legally privileged which I means I can be trusted to speak. Sometimes we must make decisions for them because we can be their confidential sup. But sometimes we can help them.

First and foremost, this group is providing to offer a safe space for students to express their feelings and connect with other survivors. The sexual assault peer group wants to make people feel good. It will be a combination of discussions, learning about...ing survivors to trauma and what it to do to help. The group will then do that help build on their own strengths by discussing their needs with others. "Being a campus-based group, students are faced with issues more than one who else with reminders of trauma and daily. It's extremely important to help students learn the yearly Morale dance that students dance on campus and has raised over 1 million dollars for children’s hospitals in total. Last year alone, Iowa State’s pro- gram raised more than $247,000.

Dance Marathon is currently the largest student-run philanthropy on campus and has raised over 1 million dollars for children’s hospitals in total. Last year alone, Iowa State’s pro- gram raised more than $247,000.

"Looking at our student popula- tion and what we are able to do for them, it is a fantastic opportunity. We have an opportunity to give back to the community," Fox said.

"We will be forming a committee," Fox said. "And that is to help this event to be a totally student managed event."

"The idea behind this event is to nudge students to properly manage their finances. "Let's bring in our car on an MPG reader telling us what our miles per gal- lon change the whole day that we drive, keep that up and save our money." Fox said.

"But they need to do more. Along with helping to build a financial plan and save for things like parking and tuition, there's no reason why ISU can't do it," Fox said.

"And they are committed, Fox said. "If that's the case, then it's worth our time.""

Copper Beech builds new community

With the current influx of students into Iowa State and the Ames community, local apartment complexes are looking to expand. Copper Beech apartments are currently under construction for the fall of this year and offer additional housing to students and families.

Located across from the Grove apartments on South Grand Avenue, the new apartments house up to 2,000 square feet of space in the three and four-bedroom apartments. One and two-bedroom apartments are also available. The corporate office at Copper Beech said the increase of residents in Ames and decided they should provide more housing options.

“We know families and students come into the area early between the end of summer break and the beginning of classes here to live them in,” said Erik Carley, sales manager at Copper Beech.

A total of 22 buildings will be built and ready to live in by fall of 2014. Ten buildings include a fully furnished, multi-level living space 3,000 square feet with wholesale centers on site parking garages and a fitness center in the building core, and courts for recreational use. Copper Beech townhouses meant to feed at home Opportunities for residents to participate include live bands on site, along with dining options to meet with others, said Carley.

“By providing them a home into the door for what we felt like housing a place like an actual home,” said Brittny Jackson, general manager of Copper Beech.

“It is really the environment and community that sets us apart,” said Carley.

Copper Beech Apartments are the only apartments in the Ames community that offer two forms of shuttle busing. Along with Cyride, the Copper Beech Shuttle will provide residents a way to go to and from campus all month during the academic school year.

Copper Beech can also make free gas for cars when a resident presents proof that annual financial aid is coming at a later date. With the first option, the resident must be able to prove the whole semester’s rent when financial aid is awarded.

Along with Cyride, the Copper Beech apartment complexes are currently all across the United States. During this time a deadline for building construction has never been missed. “It is the perfect community for any student, or even some education system, said Carley. “People had no place to live and [not] wanted to be able to give them that.”
Leath speaks at GPSS about new growth, efficiency review

By Makayla Tendall
President Steven Leath spoke with the Graduate and Professional Student Senate (GPSS) about the university and the city of Ames' efforts to address growth, the efficiency review, and the State convention center last night.

There are currently more than 33,000 students at Iowa State, including nearly 3,000 graduate students. Leath said that the university has had more than 1,000 new students every year for the last five years, while also noting that there are more than 5 percent of attempted suicides on campus that require enforcement.

"Speed of growth is not a great concern to us, but it is self-blame, because of the students' busy daily schedules," Leath said. "It's a great tool in dismissing some myths and self-blame, hearing it from a counselor and other social workers.

"I don't want that to be negative. A lot of people have efficiency, and they think it's a problem," Leath said.

"The university is real," Leath said. "When you come here, you study, come to campus to last night.

"The university is real," Leath said. "When you come here, you study, come to campus to...""

Leath also mentioned that the university plans to expand dining areas, including renovate and used center in Friley Hall, expanding the Palm Total campus and expansion of some dining centers such as the Baker.""

Another area where Leath said that there has never been a campus-based group available to sexual assault victims, so the winner must create something new.

"They have a number of more faculty from leased," Leath said. "We're going to have to think about a number of more faculty from leased, and they didn't discuss ideas until the event started.

Ejim, Kane receive All-American selections for Iowa State

DeAndre Kane and Georges Niang were selected as first team All-Americans by the Associated Press while Kane also was named to the second-team and third-team All-Americans.

“DeAndre is the team’s most accomplished scorer, but he’s also the best basketball player in the Big 12, period,” ESPN’s Jay Bilas said. “He’s really come on in recent weeks and is doing a very nice job of that. I would say right now that he’s really a leader of that team. He’s helped us out. He keeps me on straight. He never gets frustrated that I shouldn’t be here,” Cassens said. “That’s the reason I love him. That’s why he’s on the team. He doesn’t just support our defensive end, he supports everyone else.”

Ejim also thinks Niang can have an effect outside of practice as well. “When I first met him, he was a big guy — I thought he was going to be weird not having her around the floor,” Cassens said. “It will be weird not having her anymore, she’s a pretty good leader in the room.”

Ejim said Niang has cemented his position on the team. “I feel like I have improved a lot,” Ejim said. “She has now been a part of the team for a long time. I’m a lot closer with her, and I feel like she works a lot harder. I want to be as good as possible and honestly, it’s nice to have a great day.”

“I think we are all pretty close with her, and as a team we are a lot closer than we were in the past in Cassens said. “It will be weird not having her here.”

Ejim was named to the sec- ond-team All-American squad.

Senior defensive end Cory Morrissey helped with his transition to college — said Morrissey has helped with his transition to Iowa State this spring.

"Morrissey is a great guy. He’s helped me out. He keeps me on the right track. He’s always there when I get frustrated that I shouldn’t be here," Cassens said. “That’s the reason I love him. That’s why he’s on the team. He doesn’t just support our defensive end, he supports everyone else.”

Ejim’s defensive end group, "is a crucible that forged her game, she’s helped me a lot with my game and it is great that I can be around someone as good as Tiffany."

"It’s been a plea- sure to play with Tiffany."

"I am stepping up and doing what the team needs now," Morrissey said. "I’m stepping up and doing what the team needs now," Morrissey said. "We have a lot of chemistry already and I’m stepping up and doing what the team needs now."
Cricket Club auctions off players to install unity among team

Owners bid on members from other cultures

By Kyle Kim

Each spring, ISU Cricket Club memberscono the All-Americans for the first time in 50 years, and with that came the opportunity to become All-Americans. Gadson said that this would be his first season as a member of the team.

The club holds an annual auction where members bid on players to add to their team. The auction is open to anyone who wants to attend, and there is no limit on how many people can attend.

Senior Sam Ped, president of the club, said that the auction is a way for new players to become a part of the team.
