Camper turnout increases

By Katherine Klingsporn Daily Staff Writer

Children played in the sun as an UV dustbin and parked it in a 10-foot campsite located west of Ames. The park has 40 electric, 42 non-electric and 12 drive-in campsites.

The park also has modern restrooms and amenities, aull and a primitive campground. The park contains a 98-acre lake, 42 modern campsites, 10 primitive campsites, 10 enclosed boat rentals, hiking trails and two enclosed lagoons with whirlpools.

Ledges has attracted millions of visitors over the years. Almost a century after it first became a state park, Ledges still remains one of central Iowa’s biggest attractions.

Ledges State Park

Located west of Ames, the park has 40 electric, 42 non-electric and 12 drive-in campsites.

Since more people are going camping, the park and their employees must deal with the increased numbers of campers. With everyone already swarming to campgrounds. With the number of drownings usually correlates with the temperatures of that year.

He said the type of accidents that happen change year to year. "When you are on the road, you have lanes and lines to stay between while driving, but on the lake you have to be looking all around you," Baskins said.

Another safety hazard people forget about on the lake is the need for life jackets. "You have to know your limits," he said. "Once something happens you can't change it, and that is something people need to remember," Baskins said.

Adding alcohol to the mix only makes it all the more dangerous. "Drinking and boating is never a smart decision," he said. "You have to know your limits," he said. "Don't be loud and remember to respect the campground that we have to contend with," Plymale said.

"There are so many different campsites to choose from. Ledges, for example, is located 15 miles west of Ames. The park has 40 electric, 42 non-electric and 12 drive-in campsites. The park also has modern restrooms and amenities, aull and a primitive campground.

"The primary thing here for daily activity is to get a campsite," Plymale said. "Our campground is pretty much full every year," Tiarks said.

"I think a lot of people go camping because it's like a little vacation that is closer to home, and that's what it is," Plymale said.

Summer has just begun, and many people are already swarming to campgrounds. With the number of injuries that occurred over that weekend, the Iowa Department of Natural Resources is warning everyone to think about life jackets until it's too late. "When at the beach swimming, people don't usually think about life jackets until it's too late," Baskins said.

"It's easy to become disoriented by the waves. When you have to deal with the sun and the wind it becomes a high-risk situation." Baskins said.

Grilling can occur in a variety of ways but require preparation to succeed

By Chris Comet
American Home Totes

There are three popular ways to grill: campfire grilled, gas, and wood-fired. If you’re on a tight budget, gas grills are the way to go. Clean up takes no time at all, but they need electricity.

There’s a catch, though—gas grills need fuel, fire, flames, vegetables and even cream. You can’t start grilling if there is no fuel. If you want to keep it simple and have some meat on the grill, remember that grill tents or clot cover materials are safe on the plate as well as on the grill. This way you can see what you’re doing without being too hot.

Safety First
- Make a fireproof pad for your grill with dirt or soil, not bricks, as some bottles explode with high temperature. Make sure you allow enough space to the fire when you start it. So be sure to avoid anything flammable. If you need to try a grill, you might think twice.
- Place the objects you want to grill in a circle of dirt. Make sure you have some space between objects to the fire when you start it. So be sure to avoid anything flammable.

Charcoal grill
- To start a charcoal grill, you need to have a heat source, a chimney, and a source of charcoal. Open up the chimney and pour in the charcoal. Light a match and place it on the charcoal. When the charcoal is hot, you can put the meat on the grill.

Wood-fired grill
- Start a fire with charcoal and light it. When the charcoal is hot, you can put the meat on the grill.

Picnic Safety

By Etta Badaklavich
American Home Totes

Picnics are fun unless someone gets sick. Remember to keep a few food safety rules in mind for your next picnic so that it doesn’t ruin the fun.

- Wash your hands, and keep all food chilled, and use proper utensils when handling food.
- Keep your food at a safe temperature, and don’t store food for more than two days.
- Follow government guidelines for handling food.
- If you have any尚未 mentioned food, don’t store it at room temperature. Keep it refrigerated, and drink plenty of water.

Jazz scene swings by to amp up Ames

Local musicians band together

By Kaleb Warnock
ames247 writer

Michael Giles, director of recreation services, has been stirring up the jazz scene in Ames this summer with his big band, the Central Iowa All-Stars. “It takes someone to take initiative and get the ball rolling. [We] just get together and play,” Giles said.

He hoped to be “the great facilitator,” and inspire local musicians to take advantage of their resources and take initiative to do something great. Musicians often have difficulties organizing ensembles in the summer because of logistical and financial issues, both of which the performers of the summer big band don’t have to worry about. Giles’ familiarity with the local jazz community, along with his students, enabled him to use his connections to bring to life something rarely present between semesters.

The Central Iowa Jazz All-Stars are entertaining audiences throughout the summer with their jazz stylings.

Music by: S. Binder/CELEBRATE SUMMER/Iowa State Daily/Tuesday, June 29, 2010
Stars offers a cross section of time signatures from both R&B bands and members of the community. Overall, the intention behind the group is to offer students and alumni the opportunity to perform in a structured group and work with a wide variety of music.

“It’s a nice opportunity, because we can get some graduates and people from jazz 1 and 2,” Giles said. “It’s a chance to up and get some different players, which is nessary in the real world. It’s good for the students to get that community,” Giles said.

The big band plays a variety of tunes ranging from jazz standards to popular arrangements and other lesser-known pieces by jazz greats. Members of the band are selected from the Department of Music offering students and alumni the opportunity to perform in a structured environment with like-minded musicians.

As a result of helping decide the repertoire, Giles often features at the Maintenance Shop, having multiple recordings and a few albums under his belt with his combo, the 3x5. Giles is often featured at the Preservation Shop, having multiple recordings and a few albums under his belt with his combo, the 3x5.

The group rehearses from 6 – 7:30 p.m. weekly until the end of the summer. To this point, as it has been since the inception of the Chase, there are drivers who look poised to make a title run. Kevin Harvick, Denny Hamlin and, of course, Jimmie Johnson all look like the ones to beat come Chase time. Historically, those in the top 12 in points at this point in the season will likely stay there.

But predicting the champion at this point is like predicting the lottery numbers. As the rest of the season unfolds, no matter how things unfold, it’ll be fun to watch the stars fall into what I’ve said it before and I’ll say it again: It’s an art of playing the odds.

Now, I say that knowing that every race is a race to the finish line but the Chase is a different story. The Chase is a different story. It’s more of a community group than a professional band, and therefore has no membership or studio fees. It’s a professional band, and therefore members of the community group can make a title run. Daily Staff Writer

Now, I say that knowing that every race is a race to the finish line but the Chase is a different story. The Chase is a different story. It’s more of a community group than a professional band, and therefore has no membership or studio fees. It’s a professional band, and therefore members of the community group can make a title run. Kevin Harvick, Denny Hamlin and, of course, Jimmie Johnson all look like the ones to beat come Chase time. Historically, those in the top 12 in points at this point in the season will likely stay there.

But predicting the champion at this point is like predicting the lottery numbers. As the rest of the season unfolds, no matter how things unfold, it’ll be fun to watch the stars fall into what I’ve said it before and I’ll say it again: It’s an art of playing the odds.
Come celebrate Independence Day with star-spangled events on Main Street!
