Cyclones battle Cornhuskers for final time

Iowa State has had some tough losses in its recent 10-game losing streak, but perhaps none more devastating than the team's first-ever Big 12 loss.

The Cyclones (16-14, 1-12) dropped a 75-56 game to Nebraska on Saturday that left the team in the middle of a conference schedule and began a trend of losing close games that hasn't flipped.

On Wednesday, the Cyclones will face the second-ranked team in the Big Ten, and they'll be trying to break a losing streak that has been a constant source of frustration.

Iowa State head coach Fred Hoiberg said on a radio show on Wednesday that the Cyclones have been working hard to prepare for Nebraska's visit.

"We've had a lot of tough losses, but losing that one on Saturday, we're going to try to just keep looking ahead and not think about it," he said. "It's just like any other game, we could've done more, we could've done better, it's just the nature of the game.""

The Iowa State Cyclone hockey team had to face four games last weekend as they've done in the past, but it was the final time the Cyclones would be on the ice this season. The Cyclones now have Northern Iowa beat Indiana to improve their record to 10-1-0.

The Cyclones play their final game of the season this Saturday when they face off against Minnesota State-Mankato at the Disch-Falk Field House. The Cyclones hope to finish the season with a bang by making it into nationals. It has not in two years since the 2000-01 season that the Cyclones made it to the tournament.

Despite losing four seniors, the Cyclones' looks to be in good shape for the next season. "It is a dream of mine," said Jordan Hudson. "I've been thinking about this since we were kids."

Hudson is another of the many seniors that could make it into the tournament this year. The seniors are the key to the Cyclones' success in the tourney. "The seniors are going to step up, that's a given," said Hudson. "We need the younger guys to step up and the seniors to lead the way." Hudson

"We had to be in the top 12, and in the tournament. We had to be a part of the 12 if we wanted to make it into nationals." Hudson said that the tournament was a good last weekend as they've done in the past. "It's not a bad experience," said Hudson. "We've been to nationals, we've been to the NCHC championship."

"It's definitely disappointing," said Hudson. "It's a dream of mine," said Hudson. "I've been thinking about this since we were kids."

Students looking for ways to pad up some free time doing something both fun and pro- ductive will find incentive to volunteer through the 10,000 Hours Show.

The show is a "student-led outreach effort to recruit and recognize young volunteers who serve their community," according to the 10,000 Hours Show website. The program moves to a new, so-called "ISU-led" student organization to lend a hand doing volunteer work, with the incentive of a free concert ticket for volunteers who fill up at least 10 hours.

"This year the 10,000 Hours Show will be held under the tent at the Ames-Isu Mall on April 9 at the Maintenance Shop. The show will be held on April 9 at the Maintenance Shop for the show at 7 p.m. The event will feature indie-rock band Paper Route with local bands Like A Rock and weird." said Laura Curless, student manager of "10,000 Hours." "The program is very organized and student opportunities, and we want the number of hours students have volunteered is actually increased."

"I have a passion for volunteping and see the 10,000 Hours Show, it makes it so easy to find volunteer activities to fill in their hours. For example, I volunteer through the 10,000 Hours Show to fulfill their 10 hours through CyServe."

"The volunteer events are different for each volunteer organization," said Lake Stephenson, junior in mechanical engineering. "So you find whatever fits your fancy then you just go to the website, log your hours, and that's the end of it."

Some members choose to define-hands-on activities individually, while others choose to fulfill their required hours through activities they perform with other student organizations.
