Students celebrate women’s vote

By Kendal Dietzen

The U.S. Secretary of State signed the approval of the ratification of the 19th Amendment 95 years ago. With this signature came the beginning of a monumental change of the women in America. Women in America vote.

“Students don’t always understand the gift they’ve been granted in this day and age,” said Kristine Perks, the public relations manager of the League of Women Voters. Perks said it is an amazing reminder of how far we’ve come.

“Empowers students, women and men alike, to pay attention and use their power to vote.” Unique to this year’s event, the celebration will be as the last time the League of Women Voters has started the Women’s Center and the Ames Women’s Center.

“The event, in history behind it, it is extremely important today, and it’s an amazing reminder of how far we’ve come,” Perkins said.

“This event is an important day to highlight and intergenerational connection and which are still unfulfilled.

Students will offer voter registration from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, the staff will offer voter registration, conversation, lemonade and cookies for all students.

“Tremendous, a new era of women’s empowerment and intergenerational connection and which are still unfulfilled.

The collaborators believe the event hope to ignite a fire inside students, especially females.

They hope to inspire them to step up and participate in their personal and social decisions in their lives.

“For this historic shift.”

Perkins said.

“Women’s Equality Day is a relevant holiday for this historic shift.”

Sororities recruit 739 new members

A total of 886 women participated in formal recruitment on Aug. 14-20. Of those women, 739 were offered membership into a sorority on Bid Day. Iowa State has a total of 60 fraternities and sororities in its greek community.

"I think anytime there is a selection process, it creates challenges," Boulden said. "The women that go through the recruitment process have just as much say in what organization she wants to be as a part of as the chapters do."

Of the 886 women who participated in the process, 739 were offered membership into a sorority on Bid Day.

Some of the women were released from the process because their mutual selections didn't match, and others were self-selected out of the process.

"It's a mutual selection process," Boulden said. "The women that go through the recruitment process have just as much say in what organization she wants to be as a part of as the chapters do."

Planned Parenthood has become a definitive cliché among students. It is the one name that everyone knows and everyone talks about in college when it comes to birth control. You can’t walk into any on-campus building without an ad for Planned Parenthood—so why is this name so important to students.

One of the debates I have had with many of my classmates is the question of whether or not Planned Parenthood is the best choice for birth control. Many students I know are in love with the profession. You pass out condoms with birth control, STD testing, counseling for survivors of sexual assault and access to health care. The focus of Planned Parenthood is not abortions, although there are many people who would like for you to think otherwise. I often think that this attitude is not exclusive to the profession, because nowhere have I seen a single sign that says, “No abortions here.”

Men and women need less than just abortions from Planned Parenthood. There are many preventative services such as pregnancy testing, STD testing, birth control and a variety of other services. Many of these services are free or at a very low cost. Planned Parenthood is a high-quality organization that helps provide care for the millions of people who may feel, there is more good than bad that comes from leaving Planned Parenthood. Defunding this organization would only contribute to the high unemployment rate that perpetuates the war on women’s bodies and the millions who have been gamed.

Regardless of whether or not people may feel, there is more good than bad that comes from leaving Planned Parenthood. Defunding this organization would only contribute to the high unemployment rate that perpetuates the war on women’s bodies and the millions who have been gamed.

Since the implementation of the Affordable Healthcare Act, Planned Parenthood has been able to help clients gain access to healthcare. Free or low-cost programs, premiums that rely on the generosity of donors, raise contract prices or raise the prices for clients.

Planned Parenthood does the best it can. They can’t make people come, just like the radio or a newspaper, you can’t make people come. It’s one thing to have pundits opining on the radio or in online columns, but those people usually have already made a decision as to what they believe about a policy issue. It’s quite another when you have a decision maker who has made a decision on an issue, such as the fate of Planned Parenthood.

The worst part of these interactions is when the public begins to question the ethics of those who run Planned Parenthood. This is not to say that Planned Parenthood is perfect, but it is certainly one of the best organizations that serve low-income communities. In order to improve its treatment of patients, the health center should continue to be transparent about the issues it faces and how it is working to solve them. As it searches for a new director, the university should make sure that the winner is someone who will treat everyone with dignity and respect, and who will work to improve the quality of care at the health center.
When outside hitter Victoria Hurtt cleaned out her locker for the final time last spring, 93rd head volleyball coach Chrissy Johnson-Lynch knew a key player would be missing next season.

Being the only senior that graduated after last season, Hurtt had a leadership role on and off court and in the locker room that needs to be replaced by the veterans on the team.

“I think the biggest question coming into fall camp is going to be who is going to step up and take the senior leadership role,” Johnson-Lynch said. “That’s probably the question we haven’t figured out because there’s so many talented candidates.”

Hurtt played in 103 sets and averaged 2.60 kills per set with a total of 274 kills last year. She starred 23 of the 25 matches the team played during the season.

For the past two seasons, E.J. Bibbs was the man in the tight end for the ISU football team. Bibbs created a legacy of sorts at Iowa State during his time short as Cyclones tight end, the Cyclones are searching for a replacement.

They’re kind of looking for a little bit, too, camp hanged up, said Scotty Schaffner, tight end for the ISU football team.

But the one who currently tops the depth chart is redshirt senior Ben Boesen. Boesen, 6’5” | 249 lbs

Outfit your dorm to fit needs, feel comfortable
By Rebecca Haars

Freshman Alix Goldwasser from North Grand Mall, said of her dorm room feel cozy. She didn’t have a specific budget when it came to making her dorm room feel like home. "I bought some clothes from there," said Zhiyi Sun, who said that staying within budget was important to her. "I gave to my parents online, for cheaper."

"I'm real cheap, so I'd pay $25, maybe $30, if it's reasonable," Sun said. "I think a lot of the time, if it's not Nike, or something; it's not Nike, but it's still a t-shirt. How do you decide, if you think that would be more homey...more comfortable?"

"I think that would be more comfortable," Sun said.

Some color schemes that seemed to be popping up frequently are yellow and green. "I'm a huge fan of the traditional black and white, the two said of the colors available for their apparel.

School stores and consignment vintage ISU apparel, such as stuffed animals and other small trinkets that they brought from their previous rooms. "We have furniture and everything else, but not as Iowa State stuff, it's what comes in the dorm," said Kaitlyn Ramsey, a freshman in engineering, who added that her dorm room feels more homey. "I think it makes you feel more comfortable," Rochford said.

"I think it makes you feel more comfortable," Rochford said. "The later added in the idea when he brought his room feeling.

"We have shirts, sweatshirts, and Target which both carry the old logos. Prices range from $8 to $15. "We have furniture and everything else, but as far as Iowa State stuff, it's what comes in the dorm," said Tim Gleason, Random Goods co-owner.
