Poison Control Center celebrates 10 years

Daily archives shed light on chaos, energy of band's live shows

Poison Control Center took the stage at 8 p.m. and immediately held the crowd of the attention. Donning green outfits and calling themselves the “Kalidoscope Kids” from St. Petersburg, FL, they opened up by Porsey Bleum’s Pat Flemming and consisting of seven members. They play an array of instruments, erupted into a powerful and emotional set pleasing to both the eye and the ear.

The band fondly remembers instance of Natalie playing her keyboard on her head. Devin slicing his head open, Joe Terry playing two trumpets at the same time, breaking a girl’s foot and people doing the splits on stage and hanging from the rafters.

...Apparently feeling there wasn’t enough audience involvement in the sing-along, Fleming handed his guitar off to audience member Jordan Mayland. Many ended up singing with the band, playing their own harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a harmonica solo, a Des Moines selected for convention

By Rebecca Bindert

American Atheists, a major advocacy group for nonbelievers interested in public education and activism, has selected Des Moines to host its national convention in 2013. The convention features speakers, panels, artistic workshops and social events for nonbelievers and others, including several events where the importance and necessity of nonreligious organizations exist.

The decision to host the convention in Des Moines was based on the value for members, accessibility and national presence. American Atheists’ website features a list of events, the event being one of the main ones.

The major factor, though, was the rapidly growing atheist and humanist population in the Des Moines area, said the convention director.

The convention is scheduled to take place April 13 to 15 in Des Moines. Desmonians interested in nonreligious organizations can sign up for events, registration and other information at the American Atheists website.

Architecture professor works to help handicap accessibility

By Jacob Stewart

Dr. Arvid Osterberg, professor of architecture at Iowa State University, is pushing for more handicap accessibility. Osterberg’s attention to the subject, along with his governmental authority, Osterberg said.

Puff, puff, pass medicinal marijuana

By Jason Arment

Opinion Editor

Iowa State Daily

Medical marijuana is a term that draws enormous amounts of debate. While there are quite a few medical conditions marijuana can be used for, the mainstream media is littered with examples of the rampant abuse of California’s system. Often times, it seems as though people are just trying to get high and have Tapeworms, which is otherwise normal, but neither is multiple sclerosis and “the system just disappeared.”

In California, they’re voting on Proposition 19 this November, which will legalize all cannabis use in the state and make it legal for people with cancer to use medicinal marijuana. If anyone has the power to make such a decision, and have relayed this to the public, it’s the Board of Pharmacy. Besides stating that board members, appointed by liberal hippies. It’s a decision that should be left to the people, not the Board of Pharmacy, and defers the actual discussion; it’s a decision that should be left to the people, not the Board of Pharmacy, and defers the actual medicinal legislation, and defers the actual decision to reclassify marijuana, the Board of Pharmacy effectively opened the door for medicinal marijuana is able to ameliorate, the obvious uses as analgesics and can therefore

We don’t write the laws of the land, but we do see things through the eyes of others, trying to do our best. There’s a decades-old clause in Iowa law that gives the Board of Pharmacy the authority to make such a decision, and have relayed this to the public, it’s the Board of Pharmacy. Besides stating that board members, appointed by liberal hippies. Campaign ad’s candidate portrayal might not show what you actually desire

By Bijan. Choobineh | iowastatedaily.com

The role of congressmen and senators have been questioned by many. This has lead to the idea of representation. Who are these politicians representing?

Although the rich candidate may have all the resources on his or her side to try to secure your vote, he or she may not be the candidate who best represents you if they are always trying to buy you with whatever they use with their money. If you ever have a child with some ability to do something, only you wouldn’t want to base the decision for your leader based on something like that, would you?

Help keep campus out of Campustown.

Stanley Perdeds graduate student in history

LANE4’s preservation at the Memorial Union on Sept. 29 answered many of my questions. While many of my concerns are valid, some of the suggestions for Campustown are particularly flawed, if not fantastic.

Some State’s interest in Campustown, however, remains a concern. LANE4’s proposal called for the university having offices across campus “to bring campus into Campustown.” The university has not made any significant investments in Campustown, however, remains a concern. LANE4’s presentation at the Memorial Union on Sept. 29 answered many of my questions and dispelled many of my concerns.

The idea of a GSB-funded movie theater in Campustown is a different matter. At least it was an attached retail project. But the university’s interests have put the plan on hold indefinitely.

My concerns go beyond blurring work and play. All LANE4’s input sessions, people were asked to design scenes for new buildings or having deferred maintenance. Yet there were many scenes that meant no new projects or buildings at the ISU campus. Take a look around, you will see them.

The State Gym, for example, was in such disrepair it needed a complete renovation. The baseball field, for example, was in such disrepair it needed a complete renovation. Each new stadium, for example, was in such disrepair it needed a complete renovation. The baseball field, for example, was in such disrepair it needed a complete renovation.

The role of congressmen and senators to represent the people of their respective area. But’s his analysis that a second, or second the image of the public?

Now, many would expect me to go on a tangent and talk about the actions of these politicians once they get into power. However, there is a deeper reason for the lack of representation, and that’s all that happens before they get elected.

The issue is that the resources needed to be in those positions go against the idea of representing your respective community. The big dividing factor between these politicians and real American citizens is money.

As someone who loves to watch TV I know, there are tendencies of the candidates that are campaigning for all elections. In 2008 alone, there were about five million dollars spent on the Wisconsin Democratic Campaign. To air a single ad in 2008 would cost approximately $300,000. I don’t have to tell you, but with the rate that I have been seeing these campaign ads, these politicians must have a massive money supply to keep up. Now, it’s the money that causes the lack of representation, but money can be used both as an argument who might be better for the job. For example, let’s say I wanted to run for Congress, but I’m not the richest person out there. Then my opponent who is able to buy all sorts of campaign ads and give all sorts of campaign contributions because I just don’t have enough, that’s the decision that the American citizens and voters who might be able to better represent the public are being kept away from representing the public.

One could say that it is perfectly fine for politicians to use the money they already have to fund their campaign. I don’t think we should be restricted from using our own resources. The problem with this counterargument is politicians do not use their own money. Politicians just funding through different action groups. The problem is that PACs are very powerful, they influence who would be better in their respective area, when you think about, it makes a story.

We should analyze these aspects of the decision which goes to the public which makes the public feel that the candidates who campaign, win votes, govern and are made up of the American people, they are, in fact, really think about the issues and look behind all of the campaign ads and everything else a candidate can throw at a viewer.

Although the rich candidates may have all the resources on their side to try to secure your vote, he or she may not be the candidate who best represents you if they are always trying to buy you with whatever they use with their money. If you ever have a child with some ability to do something, only you wouldn’t want to base the decision for your leader based on something like that, would you?

I'm being 10 years old. That means I was 10 years old. I was born in 2010 when the movie "Star Wars" started. It's hard to imagine living in a world where there was no technology like we have today. The world we live in is so different now. I'm not sure how I would have handled the stress of having to go to school every day. I would have been so excited to go to school every day because I would have been able to learn about all the amazing things that have happened since the original Star Wars movies came out.

I'm also very excited to see the new Star Wars movies. I've heard so much about them and I can't wait to see them. I think the new movies will be just as exciting as the original movies. I'm looking forward to seeing how the story continues and seeing all the new characters that will be introduced.

EUGENE, Ore. — Marcus Mariota, Oregon quarterback, was the game’s offensive star when Oregon beat Washington State 42-10 on Saturday, and he will be expected to carry Oregon (4-0) to a Pac-12 title once again.

Mariota completed 24 of 31 passes for 289 yards and four touchdowns. He also had a 30-yard run for a score.

“Marcus had a great night,” Oregon coach Chip Kelly said. “All the things that we expect from Marcus, he did."

Oregon will play at Arizona State (3-2, 1-0 Pac-12) on Saturday. The Ducks are favored by 14 points.

Mariota, who is 6 feet 4 inches and 215 pounds, is completing 69.1 percent of his passes this season with 12 touchdowns and just two interceptions. He has led Oregon to 1,219 passing yards and 111 points.

“Marcus is the first guy who you’ve got to deal with,” Arizona State coach Todd Graham said. "We don’t have to worry about him running."

In his first three seasons with the Ducks, Mariota has led Oregon to four Pac-12 titles and a national championship.

“Marcus is always around the top 10 in the country in most offensive categories,” Kelly said. "He’s got a really strong arm, and I think he’s got great timing."

Mariota, who has thrown for 3,100 yards and 27 touchdowns in his career, said he needs to improve his accuracy on some passes.

“I think there’s things we can do better,” Mariota said. "I think organigrams are going to help me in those situations."

Mariota and the Ducks are ranked No. 2 in the AP Top 25 poll and No. 3 in the BCS standings. Oregon is 11-1 in Mariota’s career.

Mariota, who is sixth in the Pac-12 in passing yards per game, said he is excited about playing at Arizona State.

“Arizona State is a very tough place to play,” Mariota said. "They’ve got a very good defense, and their offense is very good."

Marcus Mariota is one of the most recent players to have a successful career at Oregon. Other notable players include Matthew Stafford, who started as a quarterback at Oregon before moving to the NFL, and LaMichael James, who was a two-time All-American running back.

“I think Marcus is going to play in the NFL,” Kelly said. "I think he’s got a great chance to play in the NFL."

Mariota is expected to play in all four of Oregon’s games this season.

“Marcus is a great leader for us,” Kelly said. "He’s very confident, and he’s a great leader for our team."

Mariota is one of the most successful quarterbacks in Oregon history.

“I think Marcus can be anything he wants to be,” Kelly said. "He’s got a great opportunity to be the best quarterback in the country."

ISU standout Thammaraks drives course

By Dan Martin
Iowa State Daily Staff Writer

The ISU women’s golf team has gotten off to a better start than many expected this season.

“We always continue to focus on the short game, wedges and putting,” Martens said. “Our up-and-down stretch was tremendous.”

Despite early successes, the Cyclones refuse to get too cocky.

“[Thammaraks] was tremendous,” Martens said. “To be in the hunt and to almost win was awesome and really exciting.”

Fellow outside hitter Carly Petersen’s performance tonight was one of the best scenes from the Collegiate Classic. Petersen said the Cyclones need to continue to work hard in practices and improve their concentration on the court in order to maintain confidence and consistency.

“They've got to be proven to play well now that they have some more for Iowa State, which hit .287 and improved their ranking to No. 15 in the coaches’ poll.

“Before the start of the weekend, we thought we were going to face a lot of teams up in the top four teams,” Petersen said. “And we may be facing a lot of teams up in the top half of the Big 12. But it's still tough and we're a bunch of guns up on each other so much right now that it's hard to know what to expect from them.”

The Cyclones will head to Lawrence, Kan., for the other half of the conference standings.

“We’ve always continue to focus on the short game, wedges and putting,” Martens said. “Our up-and-down stretch was tremendous.”

For the Cyclones to carry their excellent play over to the next stretch of matches, they will need to continue to work hard in practices and improve their concentration on the court in order to maintain confidence and consistency.

Hannah Hach never imagined she would be taking a bow with the Broadway cast of “Legally Blonde” on stage in New York City, but the lead actress in the show would not have it any other way. A native of Los Angeles, Hach was hired to write the script for the show’s lead actress, Elle Woods, while in college. In this interview, Hach talks about her love for storytelling and the journey that led her to write for the musical, and she refers to “Imperfection,” the musical, and says “Happy Birthday, Wanda June,” which was finished while she was working on “Legally Blonde.”

While in college, Hach became even more certain of her future in writing when a professor told her she could write, it was pretty obvious that was what she always loved stories,” Hach said. “From the moment I could write, I was always doing it.”

Hach received her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in writing, with an emphasis in advertising in hopes of eventually becoming a copywriter. When she was a student at the University of Colorado, she was accepted to the Disney Fellowship, a program designed for feature screenplays, with the intent to eventually become a copywriter. She credits the program for giving her the opportunity to work with materials and to grow as an artist.

“It was the only thing I seemed to be that good at. I had no experience. I just loved it,” Hach said. “[My script] changed my life. It was the first time I knew I had a dream and a belief in myself, and it worked,” Hach said.

The Studies in Creativity exhibit shows the amazing array of exemplary work from Kirkwood Community College students. The exhibit is held each year in the Memorial Union Gallery and is open to any student with an interest in art and design, from first-time to senior artists. This year, 65 artists submitted 107 pieces of which 17 judges chose 32. The consistently strong student work came as a surprise to Antle, who was busy setting up the exhibit Wednesday morning, said she appreciated how the Kirkwood student art was more polished than student art outside of Kirkwood.

The inspiration led him to create his own style of beauty, and it was called “Imperfection.”

“I wouldn’t define myself as an artist,” Al Nashmi, junior in interior design, said. “I do the work in my experience. I passed this year in the course. I pass you could call it ‘imperfection.’”

One of the pieces of Nashmi created the idea that the audience was more concerned about the beauty of the character and not the writing style, Hach struggled with the script.

“[My script] changed my life. It was the first time I knew I had a dream and a belief in myself, and it worked,” Hach said. “[My script] changed my life. It was the first time I knew I had a dream and a belief in myself, and it worked,” Hach said. “[My script] changed my life. It was the first time I knew I had a dream and a belief in myself, and it worked,” Hach said.

Although Hach now resides in Los Angeles, she still has deep ties to Ames—within her family. Her brother, Kehoe, is a sophomore in interior design.

“The only thing I seemed to be that good at. I had no experience. I just loved it,” Hach said. “[My script] changed my life. It was the first time I knew I had a dream and a belief in myself, and it worked,” Hach said. “[My script] changed my life. It was the first time I knew I had a dream and a belief in myself, and it worked,” Hach said.
She was assigned a producer and began writing and rewriting scripts for a television series, "Plan This," a script for a television series, "Plan This," a project for which she was offered a job to write stage scripts. Hach has been a Disney Fellow and has been assigned a producer and executive director. She has been working closely with the creative team to ensure that the script is one that will resonate with the audience.

Despite her success in Los Angeles, New York, and her role at ABC, she noticed that her career was not on the rise. She wanted to make a difference in her children's lives, she said. "The people in Iowa are so supportive of their community and the arts," she said. "I'm always amazed of the fact that I came from a small town. I'm shocked that my life has been so rich and so engaged with different children's lives." Hach said. "The people in Iowa are so passionate and lively, and I just want to see what my children will have, what I had, in America, growing up in Los Angeles."

Looking back on her career and the path that led her to her current life, Hach ruminates about her writing career. "It's so far beyond anything I ever could've imagined," she said. "It was a completely unexpected step."

To be clear, Hach said, he offered to read a script and write what she considers."It's not about anything that will just come to you at the right time. You can't think about it that way." Hach said. "Because it's about your instincts and the passion of the moment. I would love to see the stage script set on the floor."

It's a pity to have a paint job that's going to expand you from the idea of other artists who are more in the same boat," she said. "You have to write from your heart."

Good ol' fashioned leaf pie

This fall, you can bake your own leaf pie with apple pie filling. This easy-to-prepare dessert is perfect for those with limited time and can be made in any kitchen. It's a simple and delicious way to celebrate the season.

A fall classic, a leaf pie is just like an apple pie, but it uses leaves from your backyard for the crust. Here's a simple recipe for a leaf pie:

Bake a pie

Start with a basic pie dough and add apple pie filling. The leaves will give the pie a unique flavor and texture. Roll out the pastry, place it on a baking sheet, and bake in a preheated oven at 350°F for 15-20 minutes.
