Students rescue felines

Students create and assist homeless animals

By Teása Calleldin

Students Helping Rice Animals, a group that focuses on animals that are dedicated to helping animals, has been around since 2006. In January, the group held a Kitten Rescue Day where they collected donations and allowed students to meet and adopt a kitten. For this event, students who have never owned a cat were allowed to come and adopt a kitten.

“Kittens were rescued from a local shelter and found new homes that same day,” said Lark Dunham, the organizer of the event and a junior in animal science and international business. Dunham said that the organization was designed to raise awareness about animal homelessness and provide a place for students to interact with cats. Dunham said that SHRA is dedicated to helping animals and is planning to continue the event in the future.

Woodley's first impression of Shanghai

By Nicholas Woodley

Nicholas Woodley is a graduate in management from China. He has been studying at Iowa State University since 2002 and said that this type of work experience is his first time living abroad.

Walking the streets of Shanghai, Woodley said that he is not happy with the amount of stray animals that are on the streets. Woodley said that the number of stray cats and dogs is something that he had never encountered before. He said that it is something that he had never encountered before.

Woodley decided to study abroad

Woodley decided to study abroad after he returned from his hometown of Wyoming, looking for something a bit bigger than what he was used to. He said that he had never thought of living in a city as large as Shanghai before. He said that he had never thought of living in a city as large as Shanghai before.

Woodley's first impression of Shanghai was that it was very large and there were many cats and dogs on the streets. He said that it was something that he had never encountered before. He said that it was something that he had never encountered before.

Corn stover converted into bioproducts at research farm

By Ben Theobald

At the Biorenewable Research Farm, many projects are underway that deal with conversion or transportation of bioproducts. One project deals with corn stover transported fresh and harvested, and converting it into types of bioproducts.

Birrel has concentrated more on some of the harvesting and sustainability aspects of the project. He also looks at the difficulty, as well as the cost associated with transporting the corn from the field to the processing plant.

"We have a limited distance to move that material," said Robert C. Darr, the director of the Iowa State Biorenewable Center. "Fifteen miles is as far as you can move it economically. There has been a lot of work going on in terms of the conversion of the stover into bioproducts, but not so much work on actually making sure we have a feasible method as to what we are trying to do.

"If I was in a better-weathered country, I would not think it should be a safety concern," said Woodley. "If I was in a better-weathered country, I would not think it should be a safety concern."
Rule adherence is imperative to Dead Week

Texts, Projects, Essays
All of these words encompass the last week of school.

Now, we can understand how a professor, rather than memorizing information, can plan a comprehensive final during Dead Week. We found yourself in that position last semester, and it made the last two weeks of school hell for me and my fellow classmates.

“Rule adherence is imperative to Dead Week,” a student at the University of Iowa said.

Yes, the University of Iowa has a group of students who adhere to its Dead Week tradition. The group, led by Morgan Smith, worked to ensure that Dead Week was a success in 2010. They created a Dead Week schedule that was followed by all students. The schedule included Dead Week activities such as study sessions, classes, and lectures. The group also made sure that Dead Week was conducted according to the university’s policies.

According to the group, Dead Week is a time for students to reflect on their academic year and to prepare for the next semester. It is a time for students to take a break from their studies and to enjoy the company of their peers. The group believes that Dead Week is an important part of the university’s academic calendar and that it should be continued.

On the other hand, some students do not adhere to the university’s policies. They believe that Dead Week should be used to relax and have fun with their friends. They think that Dead Week should not be used as a time for study or reflection. These students believe that Dead Week is not necessary and that it should be abolished.

South Korea must stand firm

By Yoos. Kwak

Going to war with North Korea still not good decision

On November 6, 2013, a screenshot image was discovered of August 1980. North Korea was attacking South Korea. No one was aware of the event at the time. But in the present, we are faced with the same issue, and once again, we are facing North Korea. We are facing the issue of North Korea's continued aggression. The screenshot image is a visual representation of the event. The image shows a screenshot of the South Korean president's speech, where he is addressing the nation and the situation with North Korea.

ANCIENT SOUTH KOREAN TEMPLES

Ancient South Korean temples are located in the government's response, the situation is dangerous. While North Korea is still a threat, South Korea has not been blamed for the situation. South Korea has a long history of military aggression, and its military is one of the most advanced in the world. However, North Korea is also a military threat, and its military has been responsible for many conflicts in the past.

WHEN NORTH KOREA IS ATTACKING

North Korea has been attacking South Korea for many years. The most recent attack was in 2010, when North Korea attacked the South Korean island of Yeonpyeong. The attack resulted in the death of four South Korean marines. The attack was a response to South Korea's military exercises near North Korea.

WHEN SOUTH KOREA IS ATTACKING

South Korea has also been attacking North Korea. The most recent attack was in 2016, when South Korea launched ballistic missiles into the sea near the North Korean border. The attack was a response to North Korea's nuclear and missile program.

WHEN BOTH ARE ATTACKING

The situation is dangerous, and both countries need to stop the attacks. The situation is a threat to the stability of the region and the world. The United Nations has been trying to mediate the situation, but so far, there has been no success.

WHEN NEITHER IS ATTACKING

However, there is still a chance to resolve the situation through diplomacy. The United States and South Korea have been trying to negotiate a solution, but so far, there has been no success.

WHEN NORTH KOREA IS NOT ATTACKING

North Korea has not been attacking South Korea for many years. However, North Korea has been trying to negotiate a solution to the situation. The most recent attempt was in 2018, when North Korea and South Korea signed a joint declaration to end the war.

WHEN SOUTH KOREA IS NOT ATTACKING

South Korea has also been trying to negotiate a solution to the situation. The most recent attempt was in 2019, when South Korea and North Korea held a summit to discuss the situation.

Cyclones return to Sports Pavilion for NCAA's first round

By Travis, Cordes

The Cyclones (6-1) were eliminated from the Big 12 Conference, the same league that includes Iowa and No. 9 Texas. The 19-point victory over Iowa lands. The Cyclones went 3-2 in the Big 12 Conference.

Winning three of its previous four matches by the 2008 team is most of the two matches.

Each squad hit rough patches through the final 55-55 in 65-55 at Northern Iowa on Wednesday, Garrett just got Cal to 24 wins — including first “Big Six” — schools that are No. 2 Nebraska, No. 3 Stanford, No. 4 Kansas and No. 5 Kentucky. The Cyclones are seeded in this tournament, coming to teams ranked No. 12 in the Big Ten. The Cyclones are 9-5 all-time in NCAA Tournament play, with a 4:30 p.m. first serve.

Racing to make Carver-Hawkeye debut

By Garry Dine Iowa State Daily

In the 77th edition of the Iowa State versus Iowa meeting, racing 40+ Cyclones will kick off a much-anticipated football season against Hawkeyes. Cyclone fans have heard coach Matt Campbell’s name in recent years, but few have heard of Iowa State’s coach of the year Joe Cohn. In June 2018, Cohn was named coach of the Cyclones. In January 2019, Cohn was appointed as coach of the Cyclones. In November 2020, 40+ Cyclones were poised to play against the Hawkeyes in the season opener. Iowa Stateuku.

Despite some being moved to Carver-Hawkeye Arena, the cyclones are well aware of the impact of the move on the road in the Cy-Hawk Series.

“Being able to do this as your senior season is something that is very rewarding, the most rewarding sacrifice you’re making more than one guy,” Jackson said. “It’s different than a

Costly food irradiation lab shut down

By Paige Satter
wsaterrdailys.com

On Feb. 26, 2003, Iowa State was the first university in the nation to commission a food irradiation lab. It opened as part of a $12 million project which began in 1997.

The lab itself cost a total of $8 million, five of which came from the federal govern-mment and another portion from state or university funds. The lab about $200,000 per year for the operating and maintenance costs. Dennis Olson, professor of agricultural economics, said, “The radiation in food preservation is cur-radiation, also known as irradiation. These sources are capable of damaging microorganisms such as those that cause food spoilage or cause food spoilage and determinations,” he said.

Iowa State received the irradiation equipment in 2003. The university said the lab had the capacity to irradiate food to extend its shelf life. The lab also could be used to test the efficacy of different irradiation methods.

Iowa State had about $200,000 per year for the operating and maintenance costs.
