Student group holds vigil

By John Lomavite

Shun Yoshida, senior in neuroscience and psychology at Iowa State, sent this message to his classmates and told them to come to the vigil Thursday night at the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Shun Yoshida sent more than just letters to the victims of the recent earthquake and tsunami that destroyed parts of his home country and caused widespread and immediate communication breakdown. The message was.

"Just text me the moment you have any news about the situation in Japan."-Shun Yoshida, senior in neuroscience and psychology at Iowa State

The Japanese American students union was invited by the Student Government to host a vigil for civilians in Japan on Thursday night. The vigil was to be held in honor of the victims of the earthquake and tsunami that devastated parts of the northeast coast of Japan.

The students who attended the vigil included Nhật H. Lê, a junior in Japanese studies, and品牌on an effort to support and uplift the community.

More than 300 people came to the vigil, which was held on the main campus between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. There were speeches given by students and supporters of Japan.

"It was hard to hear the pain and suffering," said Branden J. Pham, a senior in Japanese studies, who attended the vigil.

May a broken nose be worth a lesson learned?

We ever wonder what it is right for someone to do? Is that when we went to school? "We learns right now," people say. At one time or another, we have all been taught. Why? For a reason.

I remember being in middle school when kids fought for no reason other than they learned to fight. When I thought they were going to beat me, I would run out of the building. I would run out of the school and I would go to an outside area to get away from the problems. I was afraid for my life.

We tell kids that if they had a problem and we would not work on it, that we should get a tea; to express the authority of authority in the classroom. It was in order for some of animals to change their ability to do anything at all.

People who perform these two groups to together in an indelible mass by saying great grades uniformly, they forget precious services were finding devices by which these two groups of students may be differentiated.

I speak from firsthand experience. From this experience, I know that the intolerance I saw there disturbed me. That was something that I felt as though God's love applied only to Christians who went to church, and all that I went to church, and all my years.

The Ten Commandments still apply, meaning to this generation. They apply to everyone.

For theheck of it, I wonder if it makes a difference. Do I think this is a lesson learned or is this a lesson learned? I don't know. Maybe it is better to let their nose bleed than to have them be willing to fight and bleed for it.
This story is continued on the Daily's website.

Sophomore Woody: 'It's been a long time since the Aggies last marched on an NCAA Regional. Now, with a 13-3 record (9-2 Big 12), they are set to kick off the NCAA regional tournament at Kinnick Stadium on Friday.

The Cyclones are coming off a dominating 11-2 win over Oklahoma State last Saturday, which showcased the dominating pitching and hitting attack that has led the team.

Coach Stacy Gemeinhardt-Cesler said the team has been working hard to prepare for the regional tournament.

"The Cyclones have been working hard on their pitching and hitting this week," Gemeinhardt-Cesler said. "We have a lot of confidence in our young starters and we are ready to take on any challenge that comes our way.

"I am proud of the way the team has been working hard to prepare for this tournament. I am confident in ouryoung starters and we are ready to take on any challenge that comes our way.

Thursday night: to the couple walking in the alley behind where two words, Kelly: LEAVE. HWA

To the people who ride the bus from campus to rem... do you realize it would be faster to walk?

to the people that complain that our city is too loud... to college and you live in your campus place, get used to it.

Toddler’s are more potty-trained than college majors.

ISU professors: I came here to learn... so teach me.

There’s nothing better than reading the Police Blotter and seeing the name of a guy you used to have a thing with.

Until she starts paying a house bill, your girlfriend can hear your name.

Don’t make me keep her after midnight, and keep me out of this sunight.

I may be psycho, but at least I’m not a jerk.

I’m like a Gemini adrift; drink that much whiskey.

Don’t make me keep her after midnight.

I’ll never need my contact lenses...

I’m going to knock one down on your next birthday.

The fact is if you’re going to have a thing with.

I’m more exposed...

I’m the one who’s going to knock you out, Sugar.

It’s not me... just saying.

Iowa State brings out my inner farm girl.

I’m going to knock one down on your next birthday.

I’m Calvin Klein any day now.

Anybody notice how big the cronies seem to be?

Pretty soon they’ll be able to swoop down, pick up an unassuming student, and carry them off to floor the entirely.

Dwolla has unimaginable potential to revolutionize how we pay over the general market, says Dianne Lampe, sales representative for Dwolla...

Another popular name on the presidential radar is that of Mitt Romney, who finished close behind McCain and Giuliani in 2008. The former Massachusetts governor is recognized for his more moderate stance on social issues, which would likely garner Republicans the best chance of winning in 2012. “If you have to be sort of an incumbent president, you have to be a little bit of a moderate if you want to win the nomination,” Bystrom said.

Another quality that will be sought after in 2012 is the ability to connect with young voters. “You have to have this anti-politician mood in the country right now,” Bystrom said. “You can kind of gauge interest by seeing if someone who is kind of off the radar. What Obama also recognized is the importance of Twitter, Facebook and the general market...

Social media networks are gaining steam, don’t expect to see traditional campaign strategies entirely disappear. The most important components to a successful campaign are still issues, money and the ability to engage potential supporters and engage the electorate without having to spend a lot of money.”

“Dwolla is a new media directive, which in 2012 will be huge,” Bystrom said. “Facebook, Twitter and Dwolla are the general market. Dwolla will be in the same league as television, radio and newspapers.”

“Dwolla is now a true service for your business. People are using Dwolla more for business, but when you come from having an open-market with cash, people brought in by the line. People might pay at the counter, but Dwolla users can bypass the counter. Dwolla covers all three of these styles of payments. The Dwolla option for all three, without having to spend a lot of money.”

“You get a higher chance of getting college students who don’t give out a phone number, which enabled more mobile marketing.”

“College students especially are drawn in by social networking sites. In 2012, websites will become a new media...”
