Passion for Fashion event strives to help young girls
By Bethany Bosnes
The Fashion Show 2014 partnered up with the Girl Scouts of Greater Iowa to put on the very first “Passion for Fashion” event March 8.

About 10-15 a.m., a dozen Girl Scouts grabbed a name tag and took a seat in the Pioneer Room of the Memorial Union, from where they had an interactive talk with the girls and Double Roberts and Jennifer McDonald, two school of education graduate students.

The event proceeded into some hands-on activities that taught the girls about body image acceptance and gave them a chance to voice their opinions about the topic.

After being served lunch, the girls had an opportunity to make scarves out of old fashion Show T-shirts, a chance to draw and paint the scarves they made, and the girls had a chance to create their own inspirational words and images out of various materials.

Every year, students organize The Fashion Show pick a nonprofit as part of their philanthropy.

In this case, The Fashion Show decided to collect canned goods for the Assertive Care Giving Extending Shelter and Support. For this event, they wanted to do something a little more hands-on to support the cause.

The final candidates for the task of chairing the department are still having open forums with everyone present to ask questions and learn about their qualifications.

The three finalists for the position are: Mark McGuire from the University of Arkansas; Brian Reecy from Iowa State; and Andre-Denis Gull, director of the department at Washington State University.

McGuire spoke March 8 at the Iowa State Alumni Center and March 11 at the Iowa City Main Library. Reecy is interested in animal science at Iowa State and the state of Iowa. And Gull, a cancer survivor herself, is the head of the department at Washington State University.

The finalists will soon discuss with the campus community the strengths of their background and why they believe they are the best choice to lead the department.

P resident Barack Obama has decided that immigration reform is a top priority. Reformists recommend that the US extend legal status and citizenship to some 11 million illegal immigrants. People have been demanding it for at least a decade. But many believe that Obama is using immigration reform as a means to an end: to build a coalition of support ahead of the 2012 elections. Reformists believe that the political status quo is no longer tenable, and they see immigration reform as a way to bridge the divides within the Democratic Party and reach out to Hispanics, the fastest-growing ethnic group in the US.

The path to citizenship was a key component of the Obama administration’s stimulus package in 2009, and has been in the mix of the Democratic Party’s economic policies ever since. The president has repeatedly emphasized the importance of immigration reform, saying that it is critical to the nation’s economic vitality. He has argued that immigration reform will help to create jobs, increase the productivity of the workforce, and improve the fiscal health of the country. He has also emphasized the importance of compassion and fairness in immigration policy. The president has said that immigration reform is a moral issue, and that it is important to treat all people with dignity and respect.

The president’s push for immigration reform is part of a larger effort to reframe the debate on immigration. He has emphasized the need for a comprehensive approach to immigration that includes pathways to citizenship, increased enforcement, and a focus on economic and social integration. He has also emphasized the importance of engaging with the public on this issue, and has worked to build a broad coalition of support.

The president has been clear that he believes immigration reform is necessary to ensure the long-term health of the US economy. He has argued that immigration reform is critical to the country’s competitiveness and its ability to compete in the global economy. He has also emphasized the importance of immigration reform to the nation’s moral fabric, and has said that it is important to treat all people with dignity and respect.

Daylight saving time provides benefits to everyday life

By Ambassador Marcus

Daylight saving time started March 9, allowing us to enjoy a longer daylight period during the warmer months. This change is based upon the season, which is determined by the sun's position in the sky at different times of the year. During the spring, the days are longer, and the sun rises earlier. By setting our clocks forward, we save energy and reduce the demand for electricity used to light our homes and workplaces.

However, there is a cost associated with daylight saving time. The extra hour of sunlight can cause changes in sleep patterns, leading to fatigue and decreased productivity. Additionally, the change can be disruptive for people with children or older adults who may have difficulty adjusting to the new schedule.

I agree that daylight saving time is beneficial in some ways, but we should consider the trade-offs involved. As we look towards the future, we must consider how we can find a balance that maximizes the benefits while minimizing the drawbacks.
Oklahoma City — If ISU women’s basketball coach Fredonia was to look around at Big 12 Championship Saturday, he would see that senior Hallie Christofferson would appear poised again. At the second half, he would probably say she’s going to stay pretty in there anyway.

That wasn’t how he played out, though.

“It didn’t go in. It went in the first half, but it didn’t go in, and give credit to Oklahoma State,” Fennelly said. “You’re playing a top 20 team, a good team, and they played better. That’s the na to celebrate it.

“We made a commitment to go on to the next one and have confidence, and you shoot the ball and you’re known doesn’t lack is confidence. ”

ISU coach Fred Hoiberg. “You can’t have a 6-foot-3 post who can step out and make a 6-foot-3 post who can step outsaid, “I thought we were just a little more conscious after the first 10 or 12 minutes of the game about guarding the 3-line.”

The Cowgirls came into the game ranked 10th in the nation at 3-point line, but was only 28-of-82 from the floor, and 25 percent from the field. On the right wing, 25-feet from the basket, Melvin Ejim. “The kid just hits big in the moment, and when it went down it was killing it.” Kane said. “We won this game, the win, the fact that I missed the free throw, and the fact that I scored that pair of second-half free throws,” Fennelly said.

The Cowgirls came into the game against Oklahoma State on Feb. 3 with a 1-0 lead — just as he did Feb. 9 against Texas Tech, and back in early in the season — he prayed it would go in.
