James Franco: Maybe I had too much to drink

After being accused by Oscar nominee Diane Kruger, a German actress he dated, of being drunk and rude during the 2011 Oscars, Franco said he was simply too tired to give a speech.

Speaking to Access Hollywood Live, the funnyman said that he’s definitely seen “Grey’s” solution for that — spontaneous singing — in action.

He added that he was nervous about the hosting gig, but Anne Hathaway is so good at it that he felt he could honestly play those lines as himself. He himself alone after his panic attack and kept the humor coming, which is the point of the Emmys as the gossip said.

But he did say he wouldn’t play a musical number or sing anything on a musical as this was the Emmys.

“Gray’s Anatomy” gets all the credit

While James Franco’s hosting gig was widely debated, it was not as controversial as the show itself was.

The show is all about drama and music and musicals, and viewers have seen everything from old and new episodes on TV shows, it’s the best way to make the show more entertaining.

But for the New York Post, it’s the worst deal of the year.

If you’re going to spend so much time and resources on a TV show, it’s the least you can do for your viewers.

There was some confusion that everyone at Snoop Dog was bonding the song.
This does not need to be remanded to the State Board, but, Joshua Persky, former investment banker, after making headlines across the globe in 2010, is still looking for a job. He replaced Vigeckas in the first day of the 18-month trial for what is being called the largest financial fraud of all time.

He was sentenced to 18 months in prison for his part in the biggest financial fraud of all time.

Joshua Persky was an investment banker who helped to create the shadowy financial company that became renowned as Enron.

Persky is described as an “investment banker who understood the risks of the business and knew what he was doing.”

He was found guilty of fraud in 2003, but the sentence was vacated in 2005.

The government is seeking a fine of $1.5 million.

Persky has been charged with barred from financial services for life, from June 2003.

He is serving two years in prison for his role in the accounting fraud that led to the collapse of Enron.

Persky has been charged with 18 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

He faces up to 30 years in prison.

Ames residents showed their flair for design and creativity Friday when the Pikes Library Preservation Department hosted its first Edible Book Festival. Twenty-six submissions contended for community-voted interest categories, books which were displayed from late morning to early afternoon in the Bookends Reading Room.

Contestants paid homage to a wide range of books with their designs. Some featured the classic Alice in Wonderland. Others included a cake decorated to resemble the book’s “Queen of Hearts.”

Library assistant Melissa Mosler represented the agency famed “Rugby Cookie Murder” with an array of sug-"It's 2:30am. Your project is due at 8am."

Enjoy ‘Friday’ for the right reasons

As the line between advertising and entertainment becomes more and more blurred, so does the line between whether something is good and bad, so it seems.

The overly popular song ‘Friday’, by 13-year-old Rebecca Black, is the newest in the world of jokes some people get and others are painfully oblivious or just plain forget.

The truth of the matter is, Black’s parents paid to have her record a song at Ark Music Factory. The song ‘Friday’ was her choice of from a selection of pre-written songs.

After it was recorded, the video received little attention until ‘Tosh.0’ put it up on its list of videos to be ridiculed.

Usually, the videos seen are just laughed at for the remainder of the week, and like most of ‘Friday’, does not cause much of a stir. However — there are people listening and enjoying the song.

Spencer Black, 13, is a fan of the song and agrees that it’s catchy.

‘I like it because it’s fun,’ he said. ‘I even get the lyrics written down and sing along to it.’

According to that — the song is actually fun, having the ability to make people sing along and enjoy the song.

Some may say that it is only tolerable because it is so bad it is funny, however, there are still people who find the song enjoyable.

Professor Cowell was asked about the song and said he was surprised at how many people listen and enjoy the song.

Cowell applauded Black; well, Cowell said that he found the song to be enjoyable even though he was surprised.

Stone praised Black and her charm.

The lyrics are insipid; the product of marketing and little more. The song at Ark Music Factory. The song is only for the right reasons but is considered fun.

The song is being ridiculed on the internet because it is bad, and bad, so it seems.

If you manage a large company, you are responsible for making sure that you are providing your employees with the tools they need to succeed. This includes not only the technology and software you provide, but also the training and support your employees need to use those tools effectively.

If you look at the average internet speed in the United States, it is only for the right reasons. It is incredibly bad, and bad, so it seems.

ISU senior sets goals for Olympic championship

Editor's note:
Last week, Daily staff writer Darrin Cline sat down with Jon Reader, Iowa State's freshest NCAA wrestling champion. Coming off a 39-0 season, Reader is settling back into life on campus.

ISD: What's been going on in your life since winning the tournament?
JR: Since then, I've just been relaxing and enjoying it, letting it all sink in. I'm just enjoying life right now. I haven't really had that much to just relax and focus on areas of life. I've done a few interviews and stuff here and there but mostly I've just been low key.

ISD: Has winning the national tournament changed your life in any way?
JR: Personally, it has changed me because I knew how hard I worked for this and how much it meant to me. It's been a dream and a goal since I was a little kid and to achieve it for me was satisfying and it's something I always remember and one I can take away from me.

ISD: What was your internal reaction to winning the championship?
JR: As soon as the whistle blew and I looked over at coach Jackson it was just overwhelming, kind of like a numbness. I didn't even celebrate like that. But that's something I worked for my entire life and so it just kind of came pouring right out of me and my body went numb. I looked over at the Cyclone crew and it was just exciting. It still gives me goose bumps when I talk about it.

ISD: What did you know that you had the match locked up?
JR: I had a solid first period and 1 and I was building on that and looking to score points from there. Once I knew I couldn't take me down I knew it was finally over. Once I knew I couldn't take me down it was really just looking to score points from there. Once I knew I had a solid first period and it was building on that.

ISD: Going back to your recruiting days, why did you choose to wrestle for Iowa State?
JR: My high school coach would have NCAA highlight tapes every year and it seemed like Iowa State got some kills. And thought I always wanted to wrestle for Iowa State. I was a good guy like Joe Trinkle. I was a kid that wrestled here. I'm a Paulson brother, those kind of guys dominated on a collegiate level and it made me excited for the next phase.

I had visits lined up with Minnesota, Virginia Tech, Nebraska, Oklahoma State, and Iowa State. I took my first visit to Iowa State and that is what did it right then and there. I always wanted to be with being able to sign and be under the mentorship of the Paulson brothers right away.

ISD: I never forget signing with Iowa State and being able to put on that Iowa State singlet was phenomenal.
JR: I would say I brought in to the sport. I've always been a student of it, but really buying in day to day out. My nutrition, my sleep habits, everything just buy-in day to day. I'm going to wrestle under the Cyclone Wrestling Club and get my education right here.

ISD: What is it like coaching from the coaching change from Bobby Douglas, to Carl Sanderson, to Kevin Jackson?
JR: Bobby Douglas was recruiting me and Carl actually took over right as I got in and then coach Jackson after my sophomore year. Personally I looked at all is a blessing to be able to work with so many legends of the sport and be a mat rat and pick their brains every day and be able to work with so many legends of the sport and be a mat rat and pick their brains every day.

ISD: What was your internal reaction to winning the national title so quickly?
JR: I don't look at it like that. I think it was an opportunity for me to be surrounded by some of the greatest players in the sport. Carl Sanderson, Tim Hartung, Chris Bono and now Jackson. I've had the Paulson's and Yero Washington, I had all the great guys in the sport. For me coming in I had coach Sanderson, Tim Hartung, Chris Bono and now Jackson, the Paulson's and Yero Washington. I've never been with these guys in the room around me and I just pick things from all these guys was a blessing in disguise for me. I wouldn't trade it for anything.

ISD: What was your reaction to winning the national title?
JR: I actually still talk to coach Sanderson we're real good friends and I'm glad he won the title. He's a great guy and I have nothing but great things to say about him.

ISD: Where are you going from here in your wrestling career?
JR: I'm actually staying here and being part of the Cyclone Wrestling Club under coach Jackson. I've had other places ask me to come to their schools and universities but I'm only going to stay here with coach Jackson and the Cyclone nation. Everything they've done for me to help me reach my potential, so I will stay here at this university and help these Iowa State athletes reach their potential.

I'm going to wrestle under the Cyclone Wrestling Club and do my own personally and continue to compete in the national championships last year on the college level and I just hate losing more than anything.

I just love being around the guys. Since my collegiate career is over I'm going to turn the page and set my goals for the next stage and here's to the future, me and coach Jackson that the sky is the limit.

Department deals with hazards, educates public

Environment and Safety Health

By Elisa Lorenz
Iowa State University

Iowa State handles many forms of chemical and biological research, and the Department of Environmental and Safety Health handles the hazardous materials that are handled from the research.

“If there ever comes a time in something’s going to be our your lab,” said William Diesslin, assistant director of the department. “Whether it’s going to be exhaust gas or something else, there’s a way to do it.”

Diesslin said the department does a variety of tasks including developing hazard training for campus, and they also look at the plans of the students’ fire safety program.

“We look at the plans, we make sure that all those life-safety things are in place. We check everything to make sure it didn’t fall out of the box,” Diesslin said.

The department takes initiatives to not only educate students but also the numerous facilities on campus, as part of their safety program.

“We have our fire extinguisher program and not only do we have to train them where they are, but they have to be trained to use that equipment,” Diesslin said.

Environmental Health and Safety teams about safety both in person and online to do so that the hazardous materials “are right there,” he said.

Prepared inside the Environmental Health and Safety funded building is a practice area where students can simulate situations, dealing with any type of hazardous equipment.

“People are not so much worried about the equipment itself, but they do worry about the chemicals and the chemicals because it’s not an organic chemistry lab,” Diesslin said.

Diesslin said the department met with the fire department on campus, and they also look at the plans of the students’ fire safety program.

“We look at the plans, we make sure that all those life-safety things are in place. We check everything to make sure it didn’t fall out of the box,” Diesslin said.

The department takes initiatives to not only educate students but also the numerous facilities on campus, as part of their safety program.

“The idea of that ponding area is that by the water being stored, the water is less likely to be able to settle and become solid if it sits long enough, and we need to do something,” Diesslin said.

Those who spot severe weather are encouraged by the department to seek shelter and “learn to deal with the building,” he said.

“A lot of the research buildings have a faster-spinning vortex. Because of this, the department is responsible for the research buildings for housing and training individuals about how to deal with them,” Diesslin said.

Diesslin said the department is responsible for the research buildings for housing and training individuals about how to deal with them.

“If you came to campus and were going to work with chemicals or work with radioactive material, it can’t just be handed to you; people have to be trained on what to do with the material, it can’t just be handed to you,” Diesslin said.

Inyang said, “The department does a variety of tasks in- cluding any sort of accident with real equipment. They have to be trained on what to do with the material, it can’t just be handed to you; people have to be trained on what to do with the material, it can’t just be handed to you.”

“I have to train them to know where the hazardous materials are, and then they have to be trained on what to do with the hazardous materials,” Diesslin said.
