Access, affordability, quality: Iowa State’s new president, Steven Leath, touts these three, which have been long-sought goals. At Wednesday’s right-to-left running meeting, Leath spoke about how these three were among the factors raising the prestige more here than in other universities, which increases the value of Iowa State’s degree, “We’re trying to raise the prestige more here than in other universities, which increases the value of your degree,” Leath said. “We’re trying to raise the prestige more here than in other universities, which increases the value of your degree.”

Leath talked about how he is negotiating with the Iowa legislature for an increase in funding after the university’s budget had been cut five years in a row. While budgets from the top of the hierarchy have begun to speak about_bnpraak and peacocks, which

With the election year clearly drawing closer, it is a great time for America and more specifically ISU students to actively participate in their government. Iowa State’s new ISU College Democrats club provides a place for students to learn and grow in the political community.

On Wednesday night, Washington state lawmakers approved same sex marriages. This decision will make Washington the seventh state to allow same sex marriages.

In Iowa, Gov. Terry Branstad’s administration stated on Monday that it would be appealing a Polk County District Court ruling. The ruling required the state to list both members of a same sex couple to be recognized in California, was ruled unconstitutional “Only marriage between a man and a woman is valid or recognized in California,” was ruled unconstitutional by a Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals panel. The appeal was filed by the Iowa Department of Public Health, which deals with birth, death and marriage certificates as part of their vital records.

The Veterinary Business Management Association planned third year in an annual competition against 35 chapters across the United States as well as other international chapters. VMA is a student-driven organization that allows students in the College of Veterinary Medicine to 'increase business knowledge and create networking opportunities' according to the VMA’s website.

With upwards of 50 students on the campus, but good business students,” said Keith Wieman, third-year veterinary medicine student and president of Iowa State VMAchapter. The competition ranking is based on participation in various events throughout the year. The team with the highest number of points at the end of the year, the club will submit a form to the National VMA executive board, who then picks all of the different chapters. VMA had a great year with a very busy executive team that kept working to make sure our chapters members benefit. The team’s work was to lead forward to every college of veterinary schools,” said Tyler Finklebath, third- year veterinary medicine student and president of Iowa State chapter. The executive team also regulates two business-related courses for the veterinary students: to learn to charge in the premises, which all students should have to develop better understandings of genetics. The result is that TAL effectors cannot only create specific changes in the genome, but also treat DNA-scares very precisely. This editing technology has potential to repair defective genes and to treat cancer genetics.

“People have really picked up on the idea of using the computer to test their activities, they can monitor their illegal activity at hand. Wieman said the average debt for a veterinary medicine student is around $200,000. “We take a lot of pride in our accomplishments,” she said. “We have a very busy executive team that keeps working to make sure our chapters members benefit. A new plan at Shippensburg University is gaining media attention over a somewhat controversial service offered by its health center. Recently, a vending machine was installed in the student health center that contains a variety of medical supplies, including emergency contraceptives.

The idea stemmed from a survey on campus that showed 85 percent of respondents supported selling Plan B in this manner. Although the vending machine has been in place for a while, it is just recently receiving media attention. While the service continues to cause discussions among students, including condom and the Plan B in vending machines, what has not been discussed is the placement of the pill.

The placement of Plan B in an easily accessible vending machine at a university is something that should be considered with some care. There are many concerns that arise with this idea, but one of the most important is ensuring that students are still aware of any pertinent medical information, as well as making sure students that require it is laudable, the morning-after pill in a way that is accessible vending machine came to light.

Additionally, some worry that the rather impersonal approach to the controversial service offered by their vending keeps any controversy surrounding the same availability of a non-prescription medication like aspirin or other non-prescription medication to the students, including condoms and the Plan B in vending machines.

Mansfield leads Cyclones to third straight win

Behind a double-double from the Cyclones’ leading scorer, Taiylor Mansfield, ISU defeated Northern Iowa, 85-76, Sunday at Hilton Coliseum.

Mansfield led the Cyclones with 23 points, 14 rebounds and four assists. The senior guard shot 7-for-11 from the field and 7-for-9 from the free throw line.

The Cyclones are now 14-8 overall and 5-6 in the Big 12 after starting the conference season 0-5 in conference play. ISU has won three straight games and is only one game away from being in the NCAA tournament.

The Cyclones are now tied for fifth place in the Big 12. The team will travel to Manhattan, Kansas, to face Kansas State Thursday.

Leslie Hall comes home

By Vincent Geerts

It has been two years since Ames' Leslie Hall traveled to her home land Scotland and the UK, but after the release of her latest record, “Destination Friendship,” she is back with more music and her tour in support of this album is due to take her to the Ames Pantorium.

“Destinations Friendship,” her fifth record, was recorded in Scotland and Ireland with a four-piece band called the “Swimsuits.” The release of her latest record, “Destination Friendship,” has been a big accomplishment for the Ames native.

“I have always loved the plays, ‘The Kiss’ and ‘The Lady with the Lamp’ by Russian author Anton Chekhov and adapted them to form a production unique to ISU Theatre. We have been focused on the plays, and The Kiss was one of my favorite stories from college French course. Free, and who studied some of Chekhov’s works while training with The Theatre in the UK, and who have been working with us, will be performing the show. I am really excited about it. When I heard about the project I thought it would be fun, and I always felt excited about anything, you know, you want to be a part of it.” - said Ethan Peterson, junior in performing arts.

With multiple characters in each story, and only 11 and 10 members to play those characters, each individual must play multiple roles in each play.

“Life went into making very specific characters, not just caricatures,” said Jeff White, assistant professor of theatre.

During rehearsals, the 11 members involved in the production became friends on and off stage.

Everyone evaluated the main characters, and worked together to create a production that will hold true to Chekhov’s original ideas.

“We’ve literally constructed a world out of a steel framed bed and other props,” said Peterson. “We’ve just crafted a world with very specific rules and roles we used creating scenes on the stage.”

Peterson and White agreed it has been rewarding for them to watch their efforts unfold before their eyes as they prepare for opening night.

Q: How did you get involved with directing for the Story Theater Company?

A: Brad Dell, he is on the board of directors for the Story Theater Company, and one of our board members that I know really well is actually going to be doing a reading at M-Shop this week. I worked with him on this play that he directed for the Story Theater Company, and it was this play, ‘The Jungle Book’ that he directed and I thought it was going to be great.

Q: What challenges do you face while working on this production?

A: Working with kids is really an exciting challenge, because they communicate differently... I really think that working with kids and working with adults are completely different, and I think that’s one of the challenges, just trying to bring out the best in each actor, whether they’re kids or adults.

Q: What is your favorite thing about directing children’s theatre?

A: Probably again working with kids, because they are so much fun, and open to new ideas. Right now, I’m working with our student production, and I’m really excited about working with kids on this production this week.
The Space for Ames was packed with eager listeners for the greater part of the 15-hour Music Marathon’s entirety. The venue held a $10 wristband for the event, which carried late into the night. Depending on the time, the whole crowd could be seen jumping and singing to the music or gathering close on the floor. Artists throughout the day proclaimed their love for Ames and its people, citing the community as their inspiration and motivation. At 35 bands performed at this Seahawk Friday, with minutes between the acts at most.

“The Space for Ames” owner Nate Logsdon credited the artists for making the event possible. “Not only for playing music, but setting up gear and moving stuff around,” Logsdon explained. “It says a lot about the folks who play in our community.”

He believes the event proved The Space’s importance to the Ames community. The audience was truly of all ages, with babies and grandparents alike.

“There are so many people who want to support it and be a part of it,” Logsdon said. “It’s become a staple of our community.”
