By Madison Vangroel
@iowastatedaily.com

Deadline approaches for Affordable Care Act

By Zoe.Woods
@iowastatedaily.com

Students may have more to worry about than just midterms this month.

According to the IRS, the individually-shared responsibility provision in the Affordable Care Act means that each person must have health insurance coverage for each month, qualify for an exemption or make a penalty payment.

Amy McCarthy of the Iowa Department of Human Services, said there are certain eligibility standards in order to qualify for insurance programs.

"It would apply across the board for people from 19 to 64," she said. Those not insured under their parents might be eligible. There are student insurance plans through the university available for students who need to buy an exchange for one credit hour or more.

"This is a student insurance plan that is offered through the University of Iowa," said Michael O ster, director of health insurance available.

If students are not covered by their parents, there are other options for health insurance available.

"If you have a financial aid package, you can make a payment," she said. "In the fall of 2013, [the university] conducted a survey of its graduate students, asked about graduation and about financial habits, how much debt they have and what kinds of debt they have.

"In the fall of 2013, the program needed to contribute to the data that the program needs.

"One of Iowa State's roles in this program will be to survey in graduate students, conducted in fall 2012, asked about gradu- ate students' awareness of debt and their financial habits, how much debt they have and what kinds of debt they have.

By Justin Lo
@iowastatedaily.com

Iowa State has re- cently received a $46,000 grant to become the 15th university research partner in the Enhancing Student Financial Education program.

This program gathers data to determine how students and in- stitutions talk about financial responsibility to undergraduates.

Daniel Denecke, assis- tant vice president of pro- grammes and best practices in the Council of Graduate Schools, said that Iowa State can use this grant to implement an educa- tional program, to develop its financial resources and conduct the research to contribute to the data that the program needs.

"One of Iowa State's roles in this program will be to survey in graduate students, conducted in fall 2012, asked about gradu- ate students' awareness of debt and their financial habits, how much debt they have and what kinds of debt they have.

"In the fall of 2013, the program received a grant to become a research partner in the Enhancing Student Financial Education program.
Schubert earns national award

By Lauren Shubert, Iowa State Daily

Nicole Schubert sits in the Memorial Union on Friday. She has been awarded a national scholarship from the National Corn Growers Association and BASF. Schubert was chosen to be future leaders in the agriculture industry.

Schubert said she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.

Schubert said that she decided to apply for the scholarship because it would give her the opportunity to attend and participate in the National Corn Growers Association scholarship program. Schubert said she plans to attend and participate in the program during the summer of 2014.
Students learn in native languages, not English

By Kira Gerremann

Large reading assignments are a challenge for many international students.

“The goal is to help international students understand the content of the course. If they are not able to understand it, they will not be able to participate fully in class discussions or understand the course material. This can lead to feelings of isolation and anxiety for many international students.”

A team of four in their introductory classes will provide translations into the Chinese language to help relieve this burden.

The Chinese language textbook presented in Chinese to Iowa State University’s Chinese students to get a sense of what’s going on in the class,” said Slimane Douiri, assistant professor of English.

Douiri, Skater said that the ultimate goal of the translation is not merely to translate the text, but to translate the content to all students.

“It’s important that the students can understand the content, the context, and the meaning of the text.”

Therefore, the Chinese language textbook will be translated into Chinese by two graduate students in their first year of graduate school, majoring in Chinese.

Douiri explained that the team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

The team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

According to Douiri, the team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

International students learn in native language, not English

By Kira Gerremann

Large reading assignments are a challenge for many international students.

“The goal is to help international students understand the content of the course. If they are not able to understand it, they will not be able to participate fully in class discussions or understand the course material. This can lead to feelings of isolation and anxiety for many international students.”

A team of four in their introductory classes will provide translations into the Chinese language to help relieve this burden.

The Chinese language textbook presented in Chinese to Iowa State University’s Chinese students to get a sense of what’s going on in the class,” said Slimane Douiri, assistant professor of English.

Douiri, Skater said that the ultimate goal of the translation is not merely to translate the text, but to translate the content to all students.

“It’s important that the students can understand the content, the context, and the meaning of the text.”

Therefore, the Chinese language textbook will be translated into Chinese by two graduate students in their first year of graduate school, majoring in Chinese.

Douiri explained that the team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

The team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

International students learn in native language, not English

By Kira Gerremann

Large reading assignments are a challenge for many international students.

“The goal is to help international students understand the content of the course. If they are not able to understand it, they will not be able to participate fully in class discussions or understand the course material. This can lead to feelings of isolation and anxiety for many international students.”

A team of four in their introductory classes will provide translations into the Chinese language to help relieve this burden.

The Chinese language textbook presented in Chinese to Iowa State University’s Chinese students to get a sense of what’s going on in the class,” said Slimane Douiri, assistant professor of English.

Douiri, Skater said that the ultimate goal of the translation is not merely to translate the text, but to translate the content to all students.

“It’s important that the students can understand the content, the context, and the meaning of the text.”

Therefore, the Chinese language textbook will be translated into Chinese by two graduate students in their first year of graduate school, majoring in Chinese.

Douiri explained that the team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

The team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

International students learn in native language, not English

By Kira Gerremann

Large reading assignments are a challenge for many international students.

“The goal is to help international students understand the content of the course. If they are not able to understand it, they will not be able to participate fully in class discussions or understand the course material. This can lead to feelings of isolation and anxiety for many international students.”

A team of four in their introductory classes will provide translations into the Chinese language to help relieve this burden.

The Chinese language textbook presented in Chinese to Iowa State University’s Chinese students to get a sense of what’s going on in the class,” said Slimane Douiri, assistant professor of English.

Douiri, Skater said that the ultimate goal of the translation is not merely to translate the text, but to translate the content to all students.

“It’s important that the students can understand the content, the context, and the meaning of the text.”

Therefore, the Chinese language textbook will be translated into Chinese by two graduate students in their first year of graduate school, majoring in Chinese.

Douiri explained that the team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.

The team is working with the students to ensure that the content is accurately translated. The team is also working with the students to ensure that the translation is as close to the original text as possible.
Let's Move spreads smart, healthy habits

Editorial

President Obama has announced that he’s putting the country on the path to become a nation that’s healthy and strong by encouraging good habits and preventing obesity. The Let’s Move campaign is a great start. Its message is that good nutrition starts in childhood and that fighting obesity is a family issue. It’s a national conversation on the importance of health. But is it working?

A new study by researchers at the University of California-Los Angeles, which was released last week, showed that the number of children with obesity has not decreased since the Let’s Move campaign began. This is not a surprise. The Let’s Move campaign has been criticized for its lack of specificity and for its failure to address the root causes of obesity.

The Let’s Move campaign focuses on the children of America, the future generation of food consumers. It is designed to educate young adults about the importance of healthy eating. The campaign encourages young adults to be thinking about the way they eat and to make healthier choices even when they’re on a budget.

Let’s Move is an effort to promote healthier eating habits and to reduce obesity among children. It is an initiative to make sure that children have access to healthy food and to encourage them to make healthy choices. It is an effort to change the way a generation of kids thinks about food and nutrition.

The Let’s Move campaign has been criticized for not coming to terms with the fact that changes in food policies on what is available in schools and in the marketplace are needed. There is also a need to address the issue of portion sizes and to educate young adults about the importance of eating healthy.

The Let’s Move campaign is a great start. It is an effort to promote healthier eating habits and to reduce obesity among children. It is an initiative to make sure that children have access to healthy food and to encourage them to make healthy choices. It is an effort to change the way a generation of kids thinks about food and nutrition.

Let’s Move is an effort to promote healthier eating habits and to reduce obesity among children. It is an initiative to make sure that children have access to healthy food and to encourage them to make healthy choices. It is an effort to change the way a generation of kids thinks about food and nutrition.
New offensive coordinator Mark Mangino watches over Iowa State's first spring practice on Monday in Bergstrom Athletic Complex. Mangino has yet to name a starting quarterback for the 2014 Cyclones football season.

By Ryan Young
#iowastatedaily.com

After eight weeks of strength and conditioning, the ISU football team is ready to take to the field. Spring practice officially started Monday, and coaches and players alike are more than ready.

"I'm very excited about getting started with spring practices," said ISU coach Paul Rhoads. "You've got eight weeks of strength and conditioning, so everybody now thinks that their game is elevated from all the work they've been doing. It's really time to temper that and get back to the business of football."

The Cyclones have implemented many new changes during the past offseason, along with the hiring of several new coaches. One of the biggest changes for Rhoads comes in the form of Mark Mangino, who is now the ISU offensive coordinator.

"Even though he has only been on staff for a few months, Mangino hasn't wasted any time implementing his new system in fact, since Mangino joined staff, Rhoads hasn't had much input on the offensive side.

"Mark's locked me out of the offensive meeting rooms, so I don't know what we're going to get out there," Rhoads said. "Mark knows exactly what he's doing and he's doing it and they've been working diligently ever since.

Mangino replaces Courtney Messingham, who was let go at the end of last season.

"You had your Tilton basketball sweatshirt over your head when you entered the ISU campus and potentially a new man campaign at Iowa State, ISU coach Mark Mangino said Monday.

"That's when Niang peered out of the window, stating that he had been named the starter at this point.

"I had my Tilton basketball sweatshirt over my head when you entered the ISU campus and potentially a new man campaign at Iowa State, ISU coach Mark Mangino said Monday.

"I was just like, 'Where are you coming from? Iowa State? Who could ever go there?'" Niang said.

That's when Niang peered out of the window, stating that he had been named the starter at this point.

"I wanted when he came in, and I sensed that urgency as soon as I got here. They want to learn, they want to improve, they want to get better. But I also sense that urgency.

"They want what is best for the team. They want to go out and compete and win," said Mangino. "They want more than that. They don't want to be satisfied. They want to be great. They want to be the best in the Big 12. They want to be the best in the Big 12. They want to be the best in the Big 12. They want to be the best in the Big 12.

"I'm very excited about getting started with spring practices," said ISU coach Paul Rhoads. "You've got eight weeks of strength and conditioning, so everybody now thinks that their game is elevated from all the work they've been doing. It's really time to temper that and get back to the business of football."

The Cyclones have implemented many new changes during the past offseason, along with the hiring of several new coaches. One of the biggest changes for Rhoads comes in the form of Mark Mangino, who is now the ISU offensive coordinator.

"Even though he has only been on staff for a few months, Mangino hasn't wasted any time implementing his new system in fact, since Mangino joined staff, Rhoads hasn't had much input on the offensive side.

"Mark's locked me out of the offensive meeting rooms, so I don't know what we're going to get out there," Rhoads said. "Mark knows exactly what he's doing and they've been working diligently ever since.

Mangino replaces Courtney Messingham, who was let go at the end of last season.

"I thought they did some good things, and I thought there were some things I wasn't too pleased about," said Mangino. "Overall I thought there was some room for improvement there. I don't have any more time on when to name a starter. We're going day to day, and the competition is healthy. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program.

"Some things were more or less focused on who will be named the starter. Richardson is all focused on the quarterback. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program.

"I'm just trying to approach it the same way I did a year ago," Richardson said. "I'll take every rep that you give me and make the most of it. We will just make each other better, and at the end of the day we will have the best guy out there on the field.

With either Richardson or Rothach, the offense will have plenty of experience. The Cyclones return 13 total starters on offense, including every line- man from last year.

"When you're talking about players with a lot of pride, I don't think they'll ask for more than that," Mangino said. "They decided collectively that they were going to do something about it. I sensed that urgency as soon as I got here. They want to learn, they want to get better, and they want to win. As a coach you can't ask for more than that.

"They're on their own,"

ISU football focuses on improvements in spring practice

New offensive coordinator Mark Mangino watches over Iowa State's first spring practice on Monday in Bergstrom Athletic Complex. Mangino has yet to name a starting quarterback for the 2014 Cyclones football season.

"I'm very excited about getting started with spring practices," said ISU coach Paul Rhoads. "You've got eight weeks of strength and conditioning, so everybody now thinks that their game is elevated from all the work they've been doing. It's really time to temper that and get back to the business of football."

The Cyclones have implemented many new changes during the past offseason, along with the hiring of several new coaches. One of the biggest changes for Rhoads comes in the form of Mark Mangino, who is now the ISU offensive coordinator.

"Even though he has only been on staff for a few months, Mangino hasn't wasted any time implementing his new system in fact, since Mangino joined staff, Rhoads hasn't had much input on the offensive side.

"Mark's locked me out of the offensive meeting rooms, so I don't know what we're going to get out there," Rhoads said. "Mark knows exactly what he's doing and they've been working diligently ever since.

Mangino replaces Courtney Messingham, who was let go at the end of last season.

"I thought they did some good things, and I thought there were some things I wasn't too pleased about," said Mangino. "Overall I thought there was some room for improvement there. I don't have any more time on when to name a starter. We're going day to day, and the competition is healthy. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program.

"Some things were more or less focused on who will be named the starter. Richardson is all focused on the quarterback. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program.

"I'm just trying to approach it the same way I did a year ago," Richardson said. "I'll take every rep that you give me and make the most of it. We will just make each other better, and at the end of the day we will have the best guy out there on the field.

With either Richardson or Rothach, the offense will have plenty of experience. The Cyclones return 13 total starters on offense, including every linemen from last year.

"When you're talking about players with a lot of pride, I don't think they'll ask for more than that," Mangino said. "They decided collectively that they were going to do something about it. I sensed that urgency as soon as I got here. They want to learn, they want to get better, and they want to win. As a coach you can't ask for more than that.

"They're on their own,"

ISU football focuses on improvements in spring practice

New offensive coordinator Mark Mangino watches over Iowa State's first spring practice on Monday in Bergstrom Athletic Complex. Mangino has yet to name a starting quarterback for the 2014 Cyclones football season.

"I'm very excited about getting started with spring practices," said ISU coach Paul Rhoads. "You've got eight weeks of strength and conditioning, so everybody now thinks that their game is elevated from all the work they've been doing. It's really time to temper that and get back to the business of football."

The Cyclones have implemented many new changes during the past offseason, along with the hiring of several new coaches. One of the biggest changes for Rhoads comes in the form of Mark Mangino, who is now the ISU offensive coordinator.

"Even though he has only been on staff for a few months, Mangino hasn't wasted any time implementing his new system in fact, since Mangino joined staff, Rhoads hasn't had much input on the offensive side.

"Mark's locked me out of the offensive meeting rooms, so I don't know what we're going to get out there," Rhoads said. "Mark knows exactly what he's doing and they've been working diligently ever since.

Mangino replaces Courtney Messingham, who was let go at the end of last season.

"I thought they did some good things, and I thought there were some things I wasn't too pleased about," said Mangino. "Overall I thought there was some room for improvement there. I don't have any more time on when to name a starter. We're going day to day, and the competition is healthy. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program.

"Some things were more or less focused on who will be named the starter. Richardson is all focused on the quarterback. We have five starters on offense who would be starters in another program.

"I'm just trying to approach it the same way I did a year ago," Richardson said. "I'll take every rep that you give me and make the most of it. We will just make each other better, and at the end of the day we will have the best guy out there on the field.

With either Richardson or Rothach, the offense will have plenty of experience. The Cyclones return 13 total starters on offense, including every linemen from last year.

"When you're talking about players with a lot of pride, I don't think they'll ask for more than that," Mangino said. "They decided collectively that they were going to do something about it. I sensed that urgency as soon as I got here. They want to learn, they want to get better, and they want to win. As a coach you can't ask for more than that.

"They're on their own,"

ISU football focuses on improvements in spring practice

New offensive coordinator Mark Mangino watches over Iowa State's first spring practice on Monday in Bergstrom Athletic Complex. Mangino has yet to name a starting quarterback for the 2014 Cyclones football season.

"I'm very excited about getting started with spring practices," said ISU coach Paul Rhoads. "You've got eight weeks of strength and conditioning, so everybody now thinks that their game is elevated from all the work they've been doing. It's really time to temper that and get back to the business of football."

The Cyclones have implemented many new changes during the past offseason, along with the hiring of several new coaches. One of the biggest changes for Rhoads comes in the form of Mark Mangino, who is now the ISU offensive coordinator.

"Even though he has only been on staff for a few months, Mangino hasn't wasted any time implementing his new system in fact, since Mangino joined staff, Rhoads hasn't had much input on the offensive side.
and played a very strong things right. We went out to it was: We did the little playoff setting like that af-feeling to beat Ohio in a hockey.

Tournaments and last year has fallen to Ohio in the March 8. These two teams 1 CSCHL) at nationals 7 Bobcats (30-7-3, 14-4-0

The seniors on the team—Jon junior's stick. Out of the four offense in the win over team provide most of the defense game and capital-

The seniors on the team have something to say, oth-

The ISU team (32-11-4, 14-4-1 CSCHL) won its second consecutive national title by beating Ohio at, 8-7 score after a 7-4 tiebreak was finally decided by an

Iowa State finds doubles match pivotal for wins By Mike Randleman @iowastatedaily.com

Iowa State Daily founds Ohio losing streak, falls short of championship By Will Musgrove

Iowa State Women's Golf 3-2 loss to Drake on March 6, 2014

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insisted on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while

On-iam insists on focusing on the individual, putting her career as a Cyclone while
Spring Break is nerve-wracking — Trevor Spring Break is a trendy baseball cap. Lee suggested high-neck shirts to your Spring Break list so you can wear crop tops without being too revealing. Another trend to be on the lookout for this spring is animal prints. According to Lee, spring fashion is all about the perfect mix of casual and chic. If you've ever wondered how to choose from this season, look out for striped shirt in your closet. Lee said she loves stripes and animal prints are also something you may want to consider adding to your closet this spring. Lee said she loves stripes and animal prints are also something you may want to consider adding to your closet this spring.

Get body confident — looking happy starts with self-confidence. Don't worry about being the business, you will find more confident and people will be attracted to you. People love getting compliments because it boosts their confidence. By lightly luminizing on your face, you can get people talking to you. Don't worry about being the business, you will find more confident and people will be attracted to you. People love getting compliments because it boosts their confidence.

Wearing green for the holiday kept simple

By Mariah Wellman@iowastatedaily.com

St. Patrick’s Day is a time of the year to rock these — just be confident to class. Make your Spring Break stand out with a bit of greenery. If you decide to line your eyes with green, line your eyes with green or a simple accessory. If you’re not comfortable with crazy tees or holiday-like jewelry, try a hint of green in your makeup routine or a simple accessory.

Want to look great all Spring Break long. See you. Follow these steps and you’ll be on the way to looking great all Spring Break long.