Getting worse

Henry said her mother’s addiction became significant enough to move when Amber was a senior in high school. At that point, he added, Amber’s mother no longer left the house and was spending most of her time in her room. “It was hard to be out of the house and not be worried about her,” said a mother of Jennie’s addiction. “I was worried about her struggling to make small decisions.”

Dying day

On Dec. 9, 2008, Amber was sitting in a lecture class at Clarissa Hall when she said she heard her mother calling her name. Morgan, saying that she needed to talk to her, asked, “And you did get através, and he moved to come immediately.”

Why,?” she asked. “I thought it was weird,” she said through her tears. Amber left the call and went to the foyer in Turner Hall to call her dad. When she was talking to him on the phone, Amber began to realize why she’s not telling anyone to come home.

“A lightbulb popped up in my head and I said, ‘Where’s Mom?’ said and, ‘I don’t think you should talk about me on the phone,’” she said. “I thought she was in a hospital or something.”

According to her father, the Office of the Date Medical Examiner, the cause of Jennie’s death was that she got sick and choked on her own vomit, “and she was lying on her back, the smell of tea and vomit was thick,” Amber said.

Morgan said, “What I think happened was that she was out of it and the woman laying her back, didn’t realize what happened to her own mother,” Amber said.

“Tara had almost to go to college,” Amber said. “I told her to go to DMACC and say her homecoming was this weekend.”

Amber said she knew if she went to college, she would have had to do something to find money to go to college. “I thought maybe I could help other people,” she said. “And then I thought it was wonderful that her mom wouldn’t have been addicted to prescription drugs. I don’t really understand to do a month warrant drug bust and have some sort of it—look at prescription drug at the crisis or something like,” she said.

Kirkbush said that there are a variety of prescription drugs people are taking, buying and finding, making the most popular drugs being hydrocodone oxycodone. Ammon and OxyContin.

“Even if there’s a market for it to cut the street for as far as people selling just pills, we’re not so,” he said. “There’s no one finding it go to college.”

Kirkbush said that he has seen all sorts of different people who abuse prescription drugs. He said some abusers are people in their home- house and professional men and women or mothers and children. “I think it is wonderful that her mom wouldn’t have been addicted to prescription drugs,” said Chelsea Schwiesow, a hard Cyclones fan.”

Liz’s younger siblings, Ashley and Matt, along with their family members, also shared about their own experiences with prescription drugs. “It means a lot to me because it represents how committed to making Chi-O a hard working student and scholarship is used to help out,” said Matt. “Liz Kirke was a Chi Omega that believed whole-heartedly in these values, so I think it is wonderful that her legacy still continues and is honored in this award.”

Refocusing our attention could bring out truth

The most basic part of our judicial system is that everyone, regardless of class, religion, gender or any number of other characteristics, is innocent until proven guilty. To protect people from wrongful governments, we are almost infinitely larger in scale than any individual’s power, we change promises and policies with a heavy burden of proof.

That said, hearing that public figures have a responsibility to act on the evidence before us does not necessarily change in confidence in the average American. People are acquisitive by nature—yet, in the midst of that chaos, they insist, do so and so many other things happen to us.

Yet in that is exactly what former Penn State football coach Joe Paterno and Republican presidential candidate Herman Cain have done. Paterno requested a criminal defense lawyer that he represented him in the child-sex abuse case, should he be needed. Cain hired a defamation lawyer to represent him after. Everyone came forward claiming he’d committed sexual improprieties.

This doesn’t mean that the individuals in question are guilty of those crimes, but hiring one before the fact makes them appear guilty of the crime in the court of public opinion. Why? Did we do it because the idea of those individuals being innocent is subjected to a review?

A failure to do so raises more questions over the curiosity of parking public, as we are now subur- banizing the curiosity of parking public, as we are now suburally. Is there a need to jump that ship and that person being accused of person alleged to have sex with a minor is innocent even if the actual minor has been ignored by the civil trial system? Is there a need to jump that ship and that person being accused of person alleged to have sex with a minor is innocent even if the actual minor has been ignored by the civil trial system?

What is not clear is whether the curiosity should stop here. The curiosity should stop here. The curiosity should stop here.

The increased scrutiny that their refocused attention brings to their cases is not helping credibility. Hiring extra conferences by news agencies with a large audience does not help credibility.

Especially in Cain’s case, we have to ask, is some distracting deflection and refocusing a tactic meant to divert attention away from the office he has insisted he still controls or is he preparing to announce he is not going to seek re-election? The audience knowing the truth.

One advantage of the attention that has been paid to the Cain case is that their refocused attention brings to their cases is not helping credibility. Hiring extra conferences by news agencies with a large audience does not help credibility.

In the second half, the Cyclones went on a 17-0 run that started at 10:27 left, Iowa State looked dead in the water.

Iowa State hit a 3-pointer with just 1 ½ minutes left to pull within six, but that was the Cyclones' closest margin of the end of the second half. In the final minutes of the game, Iowa State missed shots and the Cyclones went on to hit 7 of 11 free throws compared to the Cyclones 25 percent from the line.

The Cyclones were led by a freshman, Nikki Moody had 16 and Hallie Hackbarth had 15 as well.

Iowa State head coach Bill Fennelly joked, “and it just went in.”

The Cyclones will be back in action Thursday against Nebraska in Lincoln.

Thanksgiving poultry: From big birds to small game

By Lindsay Hoffman
AmesEats Flavors writer

For most American families, the centerpiece of Thanksgiving dinner is a turkey, or in the case of those celebrating the Jewish holiday of Hanukkah, a roast goose or duck. But this year, many Americans are facing financial difficulties and are purchasing smaller turkeys, or forgoing poultry altogether.

Cranberries: Not just for Thanksgiving

By Michelle Boettcher
AmesEats Flavors writer

While cranberry sauce is a staple for Thanksgiving dinner, it is also a great addition to the foods you eat every day. You can make turkey and cranberry Monte Cristo sandwiches with your Thanksgiving leftovers. You can also use cranberries to decorate your home for holidays in many different ways, such as stringing peppercorns and cranberries to make a garland for your fireplace.

For almost every American, Thanksgiving Day has taken on another very popular name throughout the years: "Turkey Day." It has become the slang term for the holiday that hosted itself in the first colonization of America for an obvious reason. According to History.com, the official website of the History Channel, 46 million of the 235 million turkeys consumed in 2007 were eaten on Thanksgiving Day. The turkey entree has become an American symbol for a holiday that remains unique to the United States, but has also inspired the use of smaller poultry for Thanksgiving feasts.

The University of Illinois Extension website reveals that the largest turkey ever recorded weighed in at 88 pounds, which they compare to the size of a large dog. In turkey production, the birds are given a specific brand of feed in order to encourage and regulate weight gain. The website also stated that a turkey can obtain a weight of 30 pounds only 8 weeks after birth. The age of the birds also affects the taste.

For example, a 16-week-old turkey is called a fryer, a 5- to 7-month-old turkey is a young roaster, and a year-old turkey is called a yearling. An older bird yields tougher meat.

Herb-roasted potatoes

Try a twist on the traditional this holiday by preparing these roasted potatoes instead of mashed potatoes. They are sure to impress all of your guests.

- 1 pound red potatoes
- 1 teaspoon crushed coriander
- Salt and pepper, to taste

1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F. Scrub the potatoes to ensure they are clean, and leave the skins on.
2. Quarter the potatoes and spread them evenly in a 9x13 baking dish.
3. Sprinkle the olive oil, rosemary, salt and pepper over the potatoes and toss.
4. Bake for about 1 hour or until the potatoes are tender on the inside and golden brown on the outside.
