Websites black out to protest SOPA and PIPA

By Kaleb Warnock

SOPA and PIPA will severely inhibit people's access to online information, the websites said. This is not a problem that will only affect people who are in America, but everyone around the world. The strongest advocates for the bills are largely motion in Congress, the Internet, and he says that it affected, "Think about what constitutes race, and its protection in society. More than 5 percent of the time. And the question is what constitutes as racial behavior, whether it is discrimination or perpetual, or can make communications about racist and suppressive," said Kevin Duy Vo, a Vietnamese-American and engineer professor.

According to George Mason, director of student activities, an monitored by the University of Chicago and Massachusetts Institute of Technology provided evidence of bias. The study showed that more resumes featuring "black-sounding" names were called back than those featuring "white-sounding" names. In addition, resumes featuring "black-sounding" names were more likely to make it through the screening process.

"I think the biggest thing is the government shouldn't be able to dictate what we can and can't do on the Internet," said Grant Awes, senior in advertising.

Also known by its even longer name, the Stop Online Piracy Act and PROTECT Intellectual Property Act, SOPA and PIPA will severely inhibit people's access to online information, the websites said. This is not a problem that will only affect people who are in America, but everyone around the world.

Crop prices drop with USDA summary

By Randi Reeder

The United States Department of Agriculture and Iowa's Agricultural and Natural Resources Decision Support released today three reports that caused the stock market prices for corn to drop the lowest of 40 cents over overnight taking the price from $6.15 per bushel to $6.05.

The reports were from Crop Production, the World Agricultural Outlook Board; World Agriculture Supply; and Economic Research Service.

This drop was the speculated result of a report that was released today that stated that the 2011 production was down, driving the prices more higher. Instead of getting a bullish report, it was bought for the stock market to hold for the top price for the highest.

The evening reports released farmers were calling their local grain stocks about the overnight prices before the report, according to a Southwest Iowa A&M merchant.

The report to the corn minority means to the farmer who has been holding onto grain for the speculative higher price.

"This means that in some cases, we may end up with prices of lesser value than with bank payments on the Mar. 1. Thursday, farmers know that this will more than likely keep the prices down until after the reports." Day after the reports, grain prices are still down a dime at $6.04.

Back Matter, assistant professor in agricultural economics, said that although there was a 40 cent drop in the corn overnight.

"If you consider how prices used to be, in one day when we go from $6.15 to $6.05 per bushel. That's a big drop. Today's 40 cents is nothing compared to what's going on right now. Right now, we're $0.18 higher, that's a big jump. Today's 40 cents is nothing compared to what's going on right now. Right now, we're $0.18 higher, that's a big jump. "We need more consumers to know how high it is going to go, just for the free candy," she said.

Chad Hart, assistant professor for students get involved and people are involved.

"I think we need to get involved, there's no new faces to Iowa State who are looking to do this." Unlike Espada, Paris has done a good job leading and providing black students, and has had problems dealing with racism. In regards to racial minorities, Paris said, "I think it depends on the campus. A couple of Supreme Court cases are rocking the political world and brought about the birth of the Federal Election Commission (FEC). While the Supreme Court case was ordered to be cut off our political process transparent by disclosing who was supporting which campaign, super PACs and super PACs should concern you. Many people have the belief that the only restriction of super PACs was that they had to report money on campaigns.

Super PACs and super PACs no longer must report their donors, giving them the ability to give unlimited amounts of money to candidates and super PACs. Hard work promotes competitive capitalism

A ny person who has spent any time with college students will tell you that they work hard. I used to believe that the “parents” always have to give their children an advantage or the poor will suffer. But it has dawned on me that parents should be proud of the fact that they have a child who can think for themselves.

Ever so passively, these children are being told to follow the American dream regardless of their class, race or background. As an owner of a business, I believe that equal opportunity was probably the same concept that motivated our ancestors across the country to arrive here. This dream is only achievable because of capitalism. Capitalism can be the easiest way to improve or even change a person’s life. Capitalism provides for equal opportunity of achievement and is the only system that can prove to us that we all can achieve what we desire. "That all men were created equal" was the declaration that was signed on July 4, 1776. It is the American way to do things and is a system of values that we all need to embrace.

Responsibility is the foundation for our republic. An individual will be responsible for what he or she does, not the government. The only restriction on super PACs is that they had to report their donors, so at least we know the money is going where it should.

However, after 501(c), super PACs no longer must report their donors, giving them the ability to give unlimited amounts of money to candidates and super PACs. Since the last election, thanks to new super PACs and super PACs, individuals, unions and corporations are no longer required to report the money they spent on campaigns.

Favoring these new “ultrabooks.”

Editors’ Note: Although this book may have been mentioned in another article, it is still available and can be found at the bookstore.

Non-fiction titles often referred to as “the American Dream.” As college students, many of us have dreams of “the American Dream.” That dream has been created and could easily be wrong. Why strive when there is no benefit in the first place?

Fashion: a trend. In another article I even mentioned the Ultragirl trend. The first Ultragirl was a trend that the marketing departments in computer companies started as an innocent conversation on the network computer market, now known as ultrabooks.

We received a few comments on that article which specifically called me out on every point of the article. I simply couldn’t stop talking about those things and what the trend means.

You’ll quickly find that being humble in declaring ignorance and don’t be afraid to be wrong. The only person who has spent any time with college students will tell you that they work hard. But it has dawned on me that parents should be proud of the fact that they have a child who can think for themselves.

Buzzer beater 3-pointer helps ropes in Cowboys

The Cyclones erased a 14-point deficit with just three more seconds to play in Friday night’s 71-68 victory over Oklahoma State. Iowa State senior forward Royce White pulled down the final rebound of the game with just .9 seconds remaining.

McGehee added a season-high 20 points and 7 boards. The difference maker for the Cyclones was guard Keiton Page, who went 8-for-8 from the charity stripe and had 14 points in the second half.

The Cyclones will head back to Hilton Coliseum to take on Oklahoma State on Wednesday at 6 p.m. CST.

Reader returns as role model

By Alex Halsted

When Andrew Simon, now an ISU senior, was a redshirt freshman in the 2008-09 season, he learned a valuable lesson about the value of time from former Cyclone wrestler, Jon Reader.

“Ideally, you want to come out and have the mindset that you can win every match. For sure, Jon Reader helped me out. He told me, ‘This is your turn now,’” Simon said.

Reader’s advice was not met by white noise. Reader lost just one match all season long and finished the campaign as a four-time All-American.

“Proper nutrition, training protocol and timing — that was his mindset,” Simon said.

Reader defeated an Oklahoma State opponent March 5, 2011, at Hilton Coliseum.

All around the nation, theater students work to have their talents noticed. So the Kennedy Center American College Theatre Festival, exactly what that means, is a great opportunity to have their work critiqued, improve their dramatic skills and receive national recognition for their talent.

At Iowa State, there are eight students who are regional nominees for the Irene Ryan Scholarship, which focuses outstanding performance and is sponsored throughout the school year. There are 1600 regional nominees at regionals, and 1400 scholarships given at semi-finals. Out of 350 acting nominees who were nominated, Mark Klooster, senior in performing arts, Brittny Rebhuhn, junior in performing arts, and Maddie Wehrlen, senior in music and performing arts were made in the list of 45 to go on to semi-finals for the Irene Ryan competition.

Only 30 of the 45 are chosen to be semi-finalists, which the Iowa State Theater department is hosting this year, with 16 of those 30 being selected for semi-finals, marking a great opportunity for the students.

Maddie Wehrlen

Senior, Spanish and performing arts

Nominated for: "Six Characters in Search of an Author"

"I was really honored because I’ve never been nominated, and I’ve actually never been in semi-finals. So it was a great opportunity for me to be recognized out of all those people, and to be nominated. It’s a great opportunity for me to continue studying acting, and to get some work for the future."

Ethan Peterson

Senior, music and performing arts

Nominated for: "Six Characters in Search of an Author"

"I was excited to work with some of the most talented groups of people that I’ve ever worked with. To be recognized out of the group is the highest thing I could’ve possibly been in that show. It’s because of how much support and how much talent I was working with."
Graduate tour hands, hobby, dreams into full career

By Vincent Geerts

Though Clay Kenneth graduated with a degree in chemical engineering from Iowa State, he has decided to turn his music career on its ear.

"I felt like no one was noticing me, so I decided I'd do this too much fun for on the side," Kenneth said. "By the time my senior year came, I knew I definitely wanted to go into music."

Q: What were your reactions to "Six Characters"? Was it easier to perform at the festival?

A: It's a dreamer who will push for the stars," Burgin said. "When he sings, it's like he's talking directly to you." Dudley said. "His voice really sells the song he's talking about," Dudley said. "He's confident in his abilities.

Though Clay Kenneth is an upcoming talent, he has a passion for music and singing. He's been writing combined with his personal touch of his songwriting. He is planning to continue with his music career.

Caleb Woodley
By Cole Komma

Caleb Woodley, recent graduate, aspires to bring state to play the role of the Doctor in "The Trachitants." His journey to becoming an actor began with his major of English and then he started acting. He appeared in "Six Characters" and "Our Town." He also had the opportunity to perform in "The Trachitants.

Q: Why were you so excited? What are you working with and what director?

A: I'm a dreamer who will push for the stars," Burgin said. "When he sings, it's like he's talking directly to you."

Clay Kenneth performs at the A.R.K. Recording Studio in Ames.

Q: What do you love about singing? What is the music role you will play in "Our Town?"

A: A life really good at exploring the making of theater, and what Clay Kenneth did is just an interesting process of the adaptation of this collaboration. It's all from the source of the director. Matt Foss, and he hand held the day through the experience of Iowa State students, from first to last. She cuts quickly so she can manage her time between class, community, Iowa State and her career. She is planning to continue with her music career.
