Iowa makes China partner

By Katelyn McCollough
Monday, February 13, 2012

Xi Jinping, vice-president of China, will be visiting the state of Iowa later this week.

Xi, who is 58 in the presumed final year of his seven-year term as President of the People’s Republic of China, is scheduled to arrive in Iowa on Thursday and attend the USDA’s annual Poultry and Egg Conference. Xi is also scheduled to meet with Gov. Terry Branstad as well as with Secretary of Agriculture Bill Northey on Thursday and attend the USDA’s Annual Poultry and Egg Conference.

Xi will then travel to local farms on Friday and attend the U.S.-China Agricultural Symposium. It is currently scheduled that he will leave Iowa on Sunday under his own power.

The Hebei province of China is one of Iowa’s sister states. It was the presumed heir this week.

ISU men move on past A&M

By Jeremiah Davis
Monday, February 13, 2012

In presumably its final matchup with Texas A&M this season, the ISU men’s basketball team sent the Aggies back to College Station, Texas, with a 90-66 victory.

The Cyclones came off a two-point loss to Oklahoma State on Tuesday in Stillwater, Okla. At practice on Thursday, guard Chris Allen said the team was treating its final seven games like tournament games. Allen said the team will be taking its final seven games like tournament games.

“A lot of people are wanting to win,” Allen said when asked about the Cyclones' impending showdown with the Aggies next week.

Contraceptive stand deals as a non-issue

After President Barack Obama’s recent decision requiring religious-affiliated organizations to provide contraceptive coverage for their employees, many of the more conservative religious groups, and in particular the Catholic Church, have raised voices of protest against the move. Frayla heralded a compromise by allowing religious-affiliated groups while ensuring that women in America were still provided with necessary contraceptive options.

The previous measure required the religious-affiliated institutions to cover contraceptive coverage for their employees, while the new compromise negates this and instead mandates that insurers are required to offer the coverage. In the heart of the policy lies a desire to ensure that across America there are access to affordable preventative measures for their patients, but also that women working at religious-affiliated institutions the same coverage as their secular counterparts. This has been met with backlash and a public relations nightmare for the president.

Many conservative maintain that the measures are still trampling religious freedoms of organizations like Catholic hospitals or religious universities. Others wish Obama had stood strong in his original mandate and view the compromise as a sniggle of weakness on his part.

The important thing to remember in the contraception sniggle is that it stands women across the nation will be given the same choice of contraception available methods of contraception. While politicians like Rick Santorum claim the policy is a matter of “moral” contention. It’s about government control over the body. The fact is, many women, working to avoid preg-

Can’t help but address Michelle Obama’s reputation of being the “first lady on a budget,” if you must. The first lady, always seems to be on the move, often with only a few hours of notice to figure out what to wear, where to go, and what to do. However, the increase of obesity in the United States, especially in school-aged children, makes it even more obvious that healthy lifestyle initiatives is needed.

Michelle Obama’s actions always strike me as sincere. Maybe they are just a publicity stunt, maybe they aren’t. When watching other first ladies, I always get the feeling it is more about the photo op. With Michelle Obama, you feel as if she is truly putting her heart into her initiatives.

What other first lady could do the techno dance in Des Moines last Thursday to support her healthy lifestyle initiatives in cooperation with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention? As I was told by one man (with a beard) “it’s always good to see a woman who recognizes herself or for their children.

We are now presented with a plethora of different food sources, however, many people never actually receive the information they need in order to make healthy food decisions. To tell the truth, is Michelle’s it’s a matter of opinion (with a photo politely muffled), “I am not sure for it. Why should she tell me what to eat when she herself eats junk food?”

I think that most people would stand up and appreciate the actions of the First Lady. But, I must admit, I do feel that the First Lady’s actions are more about the photo op, but hey, what woman really doesn’t want to get attention? She is a fine example of putting the common good first and setting an example for others. Maybe she isn’t as “red-lining.” Red-lining is deeply rooted than that. The first lady’s actions always strike me as sincere. Michelle Obama’s actions always strike me as sincere. People don’t like to be told what to eat or what to do. However, the increase of obesity in the United States, especially in school-aged children, makes it even more obvious that healthy lifestyle initiatives is needed.

This time, Iowa State was able to come out on top against Texas Tech, thanks to two key scorers. In their last meeting, the Jayhawks were able to outscore the Cyclones in both of their last two games, including a 52-46 win in Stillwater on Jan. 20. The Jayhawks would go on to win the Big 12 conference, leaving Lubbock, Texas, with a 4-6 record. They were only able to shoot 39 percent from the field on the day. In the previous meeting, Iowa State was on the field and leading at halftime, but the Jayhawks were able to come back and win in overtime. The transfer from Michigan State bounced back on Saturday after a slow start to the season, leading the Big 12 in scoring with 22 points in both of their last two games, including a career-high 25 in the loss to Texas A&M. Iowa State is 8-4 in their match.

Heart-health awareness at Fashion Week

Red in Christian Louboutins. The green sweater returned to the runway Wednesday night, right off the Red River. She then moved on to another New York Fashion Week show, where she was a model for the new line of Fendi. Brinkley is a supporter of the Heart Truth campaign, headed by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which promotes heart health for women. The program is not just for women, Brinkley says; she feels like she and her mother suffer from heart disease, and right now she is having experienced five strokes — two major ones and three small ones. Her own mother is suffering from serious heart disease, again. Her own mother is suffering from heart disease, again. Her own mother is suffering from serious heart disease, again. Close relationships can improve health

By Kim Kasule Roehrich

Instead of stressing yourself out this year Valentine’s Day, reflect on all the relationships that you have. Psychologists say close relationships are keeping you alive.

Carolyn Evans, professor and chairwoman of the psychology department, and studies have shown since the 1970s that people who are not in close relationships are two to three times more likely to die than those who are in close relationships. Evans said that social isolation can have similar effects on the human body to smoking or suffering from obesity.

Biking to and from class regularly is a great way to get your cardiovascular exercise and maintain a healthy heart.

It has been proven that having a lover’s hand can have positive effects on the brain and stress management.

It has been shown that holding a lover’s hand can have positive effects on the brain and stress management.
Physical activity helps relieve stress and makes you feel good: it will help you be more productive and sleep better. Physical activity is also good for your health, it helps you achieve and maintain fitness and lowers your chronic disease risk. Being active for at least 30 minutes on most days of this week will reduce your risk of heart disease and stroke.

Top ten benefits of physical activity:

- Makes you feel good
- Improves your overall fitness level
- Helps build and maintain bones, muscles, and joints
- Builds endurance and muscle strength
- Enhances flexibility and posture
- Helps manage weight
- Lowers risk of heart disease, colon cancer, and Type II diabetes
- Helps control blood pressure
- Improves self-esteem and feeling of well-being
- Reduces feelings of depression and anxiety

Types of physical activity and why they are beneficial:

- Aerobic activities—such as jogging
- Anaerobic activities—such as weight training
- Resistance, strength building, and weight bearing activities—such as swimming
- Balance and stretching activities—such as yoga

Thielen Student Health Center provides a number of wellness services for the Iowa State community. The Center will be conducting surveys of its practice with students.

Thielen Health Center to survey students on practices

By Leo Petersen

Survey One:

The Thielen Student Health Center is sending out surveys to randomly select pilot groups of students. The surveys will help Thielen Health Center identify areas of greatest need in its practice. Some students are interested in the survey and have been asked to take part.

Survey Two:

If you have not received an invitation to take part in the survey, you may soon receive one. If you choose to participate, you will be asked to complete a short survey online. Your responses will help us improve the quality of care we provide to our patients.
