Veterans Day

Ceremony honors fallen soldiers who were ISU students
By Josa Weilzulin

On the 11th day of the 11th month each year, the United States pays tribute to those who have served in the military with the observance of Veteran Day. Veteran Day is an opportunity to honor the U.S. military and those who have died while serving.

A ceremony at the Memorial Union on Thursday afternoon, on the eve of Veteran Day, did just that.

The program began with the presentation of the colors and the national anthem. "These men felt a call to duty," said Lt. Col. Michael Neary. "They made personal decisions for the good of humanity." The life story of each soldier was provided by various friends and family members and read aloud while photos of their lives were shown on an overhead screen.

International Night to feature dance, food
By Mihyar Abdalgalil

This year’s International Night will feature performances from various countries and regions including Sri Lanka, Malaysia, China, Puerto Rico and Russia. The African Students Association will perform African dances; the Puerto Rican Association will perform Puerto Rican dance and International Night will start at 6:30 p.m. Friday in the Memorial Union. Darin Williams and his partner perform the Bhangra dance during the 2009 International Night. Bhangra is a popular dance from the Punjab region of India. The tournament will be co-ed bracket play and will finish at 10 p.m. in the Forker gym.

Pi Beta Phi’s Phibs continues to exceed expectations.

The Phi Phi Phil society has combined a love for volleyball with the desire to help low-income families by hosting the first annual Arrowspike Volleyball Tournament.

"We decided to have a volleyball tournament because of our sorority’s love of the game. We also want to promote volleyball because we know so many girls that love to play and still play frequently on campus," said Emily Culp, vice president of philanthropy for Pi Beta Phi and junior in accounting.

The tournament will be co-ed bracket play and will finish at 10 p.m. in the Forker gym. Along with other prizes, the winning team will take on the ISU Women’s Volleyball Club team.

From the weekend:...
Success in its own right.

“Success with honor.” In our view, and ignores the harm that befell eight dismissed after he may have declined Rioting because their coach was of one student, as reported by The institution that retains individuals were potentially victims in 15 years. success would be having a sex-abuse embarrassment and drag on their State community. But an even bigger be an embarrassment to the Penn building up and devoting enormous amounts of energy to academic and athletic programs, respectively, does not redone a failure to report im- properities done by a subordinate to authorities who can either stop the activity or punish it accordingly. The failure to more thoroughly investigate and prosecute the al- legations against former defensive coordinate Jerry Sandusky belongs to several individuals. While they may have done all that was legally required of them at the time, more can always be done. Going above and beyond is sometimes necessary.

Firing Spanier and Paterno may be an embarrassment to the Penn State student body. An even greater embarrassment and drag on their success would be having a sex-abuse scandal under investigation on their hands, especially when there are so many questions about why eight boys were potentially victims in 15 years. The scandal is an obstacle to them continuing to do their jobs well. No information that rotates that some whose integrity is in such doubt can reach excellence to enable.

Some students have said the fire- ing by Penn State students, insist- ing they want Paterno to remain is understandable. (On the words of one student, as reported by The Daily Collegian, “We stand united as people, not as students. We don’t care what anyone else has to say. We want Joe and we want him back as long as they let us.”) It is, of course, more about their university’s prestige and fame as an academic- and athletics institution. If, however, they are interested in upholding any standards of decency, the protests are reprehensible. Raising because their coach was dismissed after he may have declined to do all he could to protect a series of young boys a juvenile, repulsive and ignores the harm that befell eight boys.

Raising in the way the Penn State students did is to selfishly think only of their own well-being. It ignores po- tential victims and corruption. Penn State’s athletics motto is “Success with honor.” In our view, sports requires reputation and honor in a success in its own right.

Penn State:
Success comes with honor

Hagiography is always dangerous. Outside its usage in Christian circles when discussing the saints, it refers to uncritical or reverential biogra- phies. While it is a positive term to describe someone who does good, it also has negative connotations. Reading the same romanticized portrayal of Jerry Sandusky’s actions has a thousand times before been in the whole- thing has come to an end. There is justifiable worry about the whole- thing to insert it into their academic agenda when discussing the history of Sexual abuse. They’ve been covered up, they’ve been denied, they’ve been denied and ignored. When someone who joined the organization.

A veteran is someone who has lived through a war or other violent conflict. They’ve been through the fire, the battle, the struggle. They’ve seen the hate, the fear, the violence. They’ve seen what it’s like to be on the front lines.

Role requires executive experience

Politics is a learning process. It is a skill that can be developed. To be able to handle people, budgets, negotiations, disasters and killing ter- rorists is not the same experience as being a senator.

The word “veteran” itself is a jargon. It’s often used to describe someone who has served in the military, but it can also mean someone who has served in a political capacity or even in a business setting. It’s not always clear what exactly it means to be a veteran.

Choosing a president should be no differ- ent. As a college student, it’s important to choose someone who understands the challenges of running a university and knows how to handle the responsibilities that come with that position.

Iowa State and ISU Dining Services hosted a panel centered around the impor- tance of fresh, local, and organic food. One of the topics discussed was the health benefits of eating fresh, local, and organic food. The panel featured experts from the Food and Drug Administration, the Iowa State University College of Veterinary Medicine, and the University of Iowa College of Medicine.

A food buying club in Ames provides a means for farmers to receive support and for Ames residents and ISU students to purchase fresh local food from a variety of farms in a centralized location.

Farm to Folk is a way to con- nect local farmers with con- sumers who want to buy fresh produce, along with other foods like meat, dairy, and eggs.

The program offers two op- tions for farmers: a community- supported agriculture share and an a la carte selection.

A CSA share allows a farmer to invest in a season’s oper- eration, and we can’t afford to pass it up. We need to do this, as well as a host of other chemicals not listed on the website.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A lawyer who advises some of the young men involved in the Penn State sex-abuse scandal predicted Wednesday that people angry about the firing of longtime coach Joe Paterno late Wednesday will continue placing the blame on others.

The Associated Press

The people he is advising believe the university made a decision that endangered young men. "It's not in some way going to improve the playing field," said Scott Andreozzi, who specializes in sex-abuse litigation.

"These sexual assault victims were not being protected properly and not in accordance with the standards that they were set," Andreozzi said Thursday that the university is "not an innocent victim" in the sex-abuse scandal.

The women’s team recorded No. 1 and putting a repeat a shot. “We have to guard against showing up and expecting to happen,” said coach Corey Petersen. “I think we come ready to play and the coach is capable of doing what we’ve got a shot.”

Last year, the women’s team scored 35 points for the regional crown. The next best team was Oklahoma, which totaled 105 points.

Leading for Iowa State was second place finisher Abby Bane, who finished the 6,000-meter race in 20:55.4. The team will only six Seniors to finish on the top again.

After missing the regionals last year, the women hope to continue their recent success on the national scene.

“We will be expecting us to take,” said senior Jenna Lee. “They’ll be running out fast”.

At the Big 12 Championship, Lee, usually the No. 5 spot winner for Iowa State, fell back as junior Taylor Petersen picked up the pace in the homeplace.

“I think something will happen,” said Watts. “They’ll be running out fast.”

The men’s team was aiming to outdo its finish at the Big 12 Championships, of a crowd.

The men’s team will be attempting to place third or fourth at regionals to have a shot at qualifying for nationals.

“Every time I see a point guard I say ‘I’m learning calculus here. At the end of the day you’re still getting another chance to get more comfortable with his new role.”

The post-Kelsey Bolte era is set to officially start when the Cyclones team takes the court on Friday for the first time since the senior point guard’s final game against Houston Baptist.

Communication is going to be key for the Cyclones to start the season. Coach Bill Dossett centered contrasted last month, leaving him with little patience. The Cyclones are going to be seeing “We’re a little different,” said forward Lauren Mansfield. “I think the way we communicate was probably the biggest problem on the team. We’ve made sure it’s a little bit better so we get along with anything there’s not going to happen anything.”

Mansfield and junior foward Chelsea Poppens were recently voted team captains for the upcoming season. Mansfield is making the move from three point guard to shooting guard with the departure of Bolte.
