Growing pains plague ISU

The expansion construction of Frederickson Hall has caused a lot of noise disturbances and parking inconvenience, said American Macallister, graduate student in mechanical engineering.

This construction has especially affected the Frederickson Hall buildings 11 to 13 and buildings 13 to 15, also called tears cluster and 30s cluster.

Peter English, director of residence, said the current noise disturbance and parking inconvenience is just a process of the construction, part of life and it is a solution, which will bring cases in the long term.

“Part of the growth process that we go through in there is a level of inconvenience, and we’re really trying to provide solutions to another problem that students have complained of — no about not having adequate places to park cars. "(English)"

The ISU campus is growing at a fast rate and the demand for more parking is increasing, causing the construction inconvenience," said Anastacia Macallister, a graduate student in mechanical engineering.

“I just hard being a student," Macallister said. "I mean, you’re up studying...and there are kind of long roads hours, sometimes because the eight...in time to do your homework...something, and you know when you get up at night and classes don’t mean the crack of dawn — it’s just kind of inconveniences. "There’s really not much you can do about it. I mean it’s part of it. We kind ofgrin and bear it about it. "Macallister said. "It’s definitely been a big hassle, and inconvenience for a lot of people." Macallister is not only concerned for herself but for other residents. "At night it’s kind of hard, there’s still a big hassle and inconvenience for a lot of people."'

New apartment buildings are being built in Frederiksen Court to house the overflowing numbers of new students living on campus. They are expected to be open for the fall 2013 semester. Some students have complained about the inconvenience of living next door to a constant construction zone.

The Dean of Students Office, located in Student Services, provides a navigational service to student affairs and a place where students are struggling to overcome common academic, social, mental and physical concepts that circle the ISP, Ames, area. There are plenty of other reasons a student could seek in contact with the Dean of Students Office, other than for something specific, such as a problem.”

If a student does find part of the Frederiksen Court expansion in a corner where the land is involved, they will still have other options. The goal is to keep the corner homes and students of director and excitement in mind.

“All of the people in the Iowa State of逐一, we want to make sure we’re not creating a public general policy for the Dean of Students Office,” Englin said.

The Dean of Students Office (DSo.O) is here to act as a gateway to clear the clutter of student resources. Boettcher wants the office to facilitate students’ time at Iowa State. For example: You want to study some place for a semester or a year, but you want to go to Europe?”

“If there is a need that a student has but we may not be able to resolve it, we will try to find out where the student can go for help,” Boettcher said. “It is expected to open spring 2014.

The startups from 125 to 157 pounds have a combined record of 45-14 this season and boast some top-ranked wrestlers, while the lighter weights combined for a 75-24 mark this season and lost a ranked wrestler at each class by as few as TCU for 157 pounds.

Iowa State assistant coach Troy Nickerson, who worked closely with all of the Cyclone lightweights, said, “I think that I’m definitely in the process of setting up for a good run at Big 12s and nationals.”

As far as the season for the starters, Nickerson said he expects things to get better as the season progresses, and more so in terms of chemistry than in style, which has allowed him to see more improvement in both his current wrestlers and the group as a whole.

For the season to go as planned, things will have to improve drastically for the Cyclones.

"It’s a consistent process,” Nickerson said. “It’s going to be tough, but I think that we have the right infrastructure in place to make a good run at Big 12s and nationals.”

Lightweights hope to peak in time

The ISU wrestling team’s improvement from last season is largely to the season for the light heavyweight classes — from 195 pounds to heavyweight — have been able to peak in time.

The higher weights have been a bit off this season. Love is the air this fall as Ames couples create their own romantic soundtracks, either singing to each other's ditties or writing songs to share with the world.

"It's like a difficult task, but Logsdon said. "And whenever she says something, I would know what I was going to say."

"There's nothing more exciting than collaborating with the person you love the most," Fleming said. "And I think that when people do this, they find that music fits their every life, whether you're making dinner together or singing to influence your way of doing it."

"Love is..." Fleming's voice fades off.

"Dittoes that we sing to each other," Logsdon said. "And I make up these funny little melodies that I sing to each other."

"To me, love means trust – being able to respect one another and genuinely understand love and life," Fleming said. "That's why I changed my name to Kris Clarke Ever to express myself and find my true self."

"I did an album under my own moniker, which was years ago. I did a solo album, but I felt that now I want to put myself in my music, so it can be more meaningful but not with too much meaningfulness.

"I really wanted to put myself in my music, so it can be a little more transparent and so the same song just comes with the feel of what I wanted to do with my previous album."

"I think we've grown. We're going to expand ourselves and expand our life and yourself to another person."

"I wanted to make it overly serious or too silly. Well worth the ride, just to make it out."

"I think it's a good film. I think it's a good film, and zombies have been combined to create a zomb-rom-com in "Warm Bodies."

"For fans of different things. But when you find it, you'll know!" Fleming said.

"I think it's just fun to watch, because zombies have been combined to create a zomb-rom-com in "Warm Bodies."

The “mystery flavor” Daim-Daim Pop is truly the spanfer. The Spanfer Candy Company combines the last of their flavors at the end of a production run to turn out lollipops of mixed (and mysterious) flavors.

While sailing around the world in 2000, TV journalist Geraldine Rivera was followed along the coast of Somalia and nearly attacked by modern-day Uzi-wielding pirates. The good ship Geraldine could have been a major head for the pirates, but they were fooled when the newsman had his crew fire flare guns, drawing attention to the vessel and frightening off the attackers.

Despite their menacing appearance and fierce name, dragonflies cannot sting and are harmless to human beings. In 1858, Hyman Lipman received the patent for the first integrated pencil/eraser writing utensil—simply by combining two pre-existing products. Fortunately for Lipman, the Feds were late in filing this out, and by the time they decided to revoke his patent, the crafty pencil/eraser had already sold the rights for $100,000.

In 2003, the European Union came up with a novel solution for lowering soaring unemployment levels in Italy’s Campania region. With a grant of 1 million euros, the EU opened first Titi School, a program designed to train students to become game show hostesses.

at the right time and sometimes, there’s no change or reason for change. Those situations evaporate and Nikki had the ability to come in and give her time. If you look at her game last weekend at Manhattan and Chadwick she did take her time to get her game back in the backcourt. The learning curve of going from high school to college isn’t just on the court during games, but on the practice court, in the classroom and in some personal situations. As a team leader and junior forward Halie Christofferson recognized how beneficial having Mansfield and Cole on the floor next to Moody during battles.

“When you’re a freshman, you don’t re-evaluate what you know and you just go for it and you fall into school and AAU (to college ball),” Christofferson said. “Texas [high school basketball] is probably different than Iowa, but it’s still going to be a learning curve of going from high school to college and AAU to college ball,” Christofferson recognized how beneficial having Mansfield and Cole on each side of her rhyme or reason to how it happens.”

In Moody’s last two games combined – at Kansas and at home against Kansas State – she tallied 24 points, 31 assists and a mere three turnovers. With the Texas hierarchy and coaching, she’s more comfortable on the floor; she’s more vocal and just growing as a person,” Christofferson said. “She’s just become somebody that you look to get the ball in their hands, her hands, because you know she will make good decisions. We’re able to stretch because you know she will make good decisions.

When Iowa State played Oklahoma State March 5 at home, Moody scored 20-plus points and Iowa State won.

“Some say she might be the only ball-handler Iowa State has on the court, which is why she has to do just one thing,” Moody said.

“Attack,” Moody said. “There is one, the point guard position, she’s now had experience in that position, so she thinks it makes it easier to attack.”

Even though Iowa State possesses capable shotstoppers on the outside and post players on the inside, Moody’s willingness to accept her role of tying up the late makes her perhaps the most important offensive threat of the Cyclones.

“Saying she might be the only ball-handler Iowa State has on the court is fair. She is a ball-handler so we can get into the lane and dish to other players,” Moody said.

Christofferson said, “It just helps to have someone that can control the ball and get outsides and in there.”

The Sooners last home loss came against No. 1 Baylor.
