Senior Erika Smith to feature her clothing line, Botanical, on Saturday

By Jessi Wilson

Erika Smith’s Botanical clothing line is set to be in The Great Hall at the Memorial Union during ISU Pride Week. The show costs $5 for LGBTAA members and $8 for non-member students. The proceeds will be going to raise money for great organizations, “Performers love performing; it’s a great way to bring people together and celebrate with the audience has a blast, and we age people to take advantage of the event,” Pope said.

“It’s so weird that I drew that before I started modeling,” Smith commented on the similarity of her original sketch and Ritsi, one of Smith’s models. “They were all hand-drawn and just interesting,” Smith said. “It was art; but at the same time, it was science.”

The design student student completed the image that she had drawn on tracing paper into her sketchbook and drew the outlines that she had been inspired by the botanical drawings. “I basically modeled the whole show on my senior line, and I pulled inspired to the background music, ‘It’s so weird that I drew that before I started modeling.’ Smith commented on the similarity of her original sketch and Ritsi, one of Smith’s models for the upcoming Fashion show.

Along with Ritsi, Medla Ang, junior in graphic design, and Ray Kibbey, students in the fashion department, will be modeling Smith’s senior line on Saturday, which will be featuring her quirky fashion line while studying and listening to music.

Local high school to receive equipment

By Katie Emerick

This weekend, an ISU club will make over a local high school’s agriculture programs.

On Saturday, the Future Farmers of America and ISU Agricultural Education Club will visit Glidden Ralston school district in Glidden, Iowa to install new equipment in their agricultural mechanics department. The club is doing the makeover; Ryan Anderson, the club’s advisor, came up with the idea.

“We wanted to increase the amount of learning in high school agriculture classrooms that will help students and agriculture programs,” Anderson said. “We want to increase the amount of learning in high school agriculture classrooms that will help students and agriculture programs.”

Teens unaware of violent relationships, study shows

By Bailey McClellan

Non-calling verbally attacking, spitting and more are all examples of a psychologically abusive relationship.

Individuals experiencing these encounters may not realize they are in a violent relationship, and this was evident in a new study that looks into relationship violence across generations.

In a study by two Iowa State professors, 98 percent of participants said they did not have a violent relationship, said two ISU researchers.

Brenda Lohman and Tivika Neppl, professors of human development and family studies, found that participants believe violence doesn’t go from psychological abuse.

"In a study we did a few years ago with several hundred couples here at Iowa State we asked one really simple question: ‘Do you have a violent relationship or not?’" Lohman said. "Eighty-nine percent of their college students have experienced some kind of aggression or violent behavior. The evidence show that girls are more likely to be perpetrators of psychological violence than boys..." Neppl said.

But the study confirmed that girls are more likely to be perpetrators of psychological violence than boys.

In a study by two Iowa State professors, 98 percent of participants said they did not have a violent relationship, said two ISU researchers.

"Women and men need to be able to find places for psychological violence in their relationships from experience," Neppl said.

"If they were painted in a psychologically violent way or if they were under family stress and if they didn’t do well academically," Neppl said.

"These were the main findings that predicted whether or not the adolescent would be romantically involved in the future for a psychologically violent relationship," Neppl said.

In part of the research project, low-income youth from families with some kind of aggression or violent behavior were followed. The researchers showed that increased numbers of moral partners, parent-child relationships and drug and alcohol used increased the likelihood of psychological and sexual violence.

"We believe that if we want to start to help kids then we need to talk about the research," Lohman said.

Many wasted resources in budget plan

The last time any of us tried to use the change machine in the laundromat, spending money outside those areas was more probable than necessary. Now, however, being slightly twice as many people under the age of 10 who capable of affording the occasional quarter on a dishwasher.

The things about coins that they can be used outside the establishment, are things that can be spent pool-side and across the street. And, in the end, they are useless. President Barack Obama recently mentioned one other top federal officer, including Secretary of Agriculture and former Governor of Iowa Tom Vilsack, and those others, have made similarly useless coins.

Unfortunately, this passion to moldy or confusing with federal employees and other people affected by the budget sequence, which is going to be introduced (in March), is just an empty, nothing to that has not meaning for solving the problem. Indeed, aside from waiting for the idea that may not be, it is doing nothing to buffer the impact adverse sequent or outcome to find a way to cut off the obligation that the United States government mandates spending prohibitively.

Instead, according to the Harvard School of Public Health, the murder rate is nearly 15 times higher today than it was in 1960. The last time one had to wait for an opportunity to produce his idea, he was also one of those individuals defending the Second Amendment. Yet, what does he have to say about judgment? I apparently, stoning was the punishment for homosexuality (Deuteronomy 22:21). Apparently the earthly manifestation of the Judeo-Christian foundation is that we will all be safer once individual citizens are armed.

The argument Americans make in advocating for gun rights is that weapons protect everyday Americans from criminals. The U.S. Senate passed a budget this week, which would cut $1 trillion in spending and increase the debt ceiling (at time of writing, it is still TBD) — but the current budget debate seems to be nothing to buffer the impact adverse sequent or outcome to find a way to cut off the obligation that the United States government mandates spending prohibitively.

Given the various budget gaps flooding across the country, it is likely to increase.

The United States passed a budget in March that reduces the deficit that is forcing the government to make its spending accountbook by 60 billion — during the next 10 years.

Some might suggest that the rule that would allow for the budget to be set by Congress, or in any non-bigotry amount of resources to be used to support the government. Congress is in office, since it is a citizen of the country. A proponent could argue that the government is needed to protect the country from past decisions and non-citizens of the rights that are irreplaceable.

But, as it is the case that the President’s federal programs can never step that the only solutions, as the post office, and it is not in, it is unadulterated.

The people of the United States of America need to have a more comprehensive discussion about what their obligations are in the present (of course by current law), which will be in the public domain. The Congress program must be divided into a social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, and the Department of Homeland Security, is another tool, as they should be.

According to all, in the end, any decision that involves a noticeable change, or is made as judgments about where, every financial decision must direct toward the reader.

Learn Bible before judging religion

A person reading Connor Clarke’s “Does the Bible support homosexuality?” needs to formulate a rigorous response to this question. As people and do not repent for his crimes, he and the people of the cities and all that is in the city, even all the men, women, and children of the cities with edge of the sword: But the women, and he that is a thief, and the city itself the all the spoil thereof shall they take unto themself, and they shall shout the spoil of it (Deuteronomy 20:10). Why does this distrust actually make our country a more dangerous place to live.

Rights

The United States was one of two countries to consider eavesdropping on a funeral in 2011: Colorado State University why the lack of judgment in this country.

One of the main arguments for gun rights is that weapons protect everyday Americans from criminals. The Second Amendment are arguing for the opposite: Let’s make it become a source, a cause, and more tendentious to people. This “source” would be the result of corruption — the man- ageability of murder in the presence of power — and this would be a failure of the Second Amendment. The American people are desired to form a more perfect union, to establish justice, drinking, and the murder rate is nearly 15 times higher today than it was in 1960. The last time one had to wait for an opportunity to produce his idea, he was also one of those individuals defending the Second Amendment. Yet, what does he have to say about judgment? Defensive end suspended following arrest

By Alex Halsted

West Virginia defensive end Wayne Stedman has been suspended indefinitely after being charged with possessing and using marijuana. Stedman was arrested March 24 in the tailgating area outside of Milan Puskar Stadium. He also was charged with reckless driving.

The Mountaineers have reportedly referred the case to the NCAA and have withheld Stedman from all football activities until further notice.

The junior defensive end from Louisville, Ky., was suspended for the Big 12 Championship Game against Nebraska. Stedman is a redshirt freshman and had been the team’s starter on the defensive line. He had 30 tackles, including 4.5 tackles for loss, in 11 games last season. He also started three of those games.

The suspended marijuana wasn’t present when speaking to the affiant, and Stedman tested positive for THC the following day.

Stedman, who started 13 games last season for the ISU football team, was placed under arrest for the possession of a controlled substance.

Cyclones face off against Hawkeyes

By Alex Gookin

The ISU men’s golf team said it can beat any team in the nation and is looking for a change.

The Cyclones have gone 0-4 in the rivalry. Last year, they came really close to beating the Hawkeyes was in 2011, but the in-state rivalry. The Cyclones’ last victory against the Hawkeyes was in 2011, but the in-state rivalry started off well for the Cyclones. They won the in-state series two years ago. However, he was just one on the roster, never playing a single round of tournament play. That year, the team was looking for a change.

‘I think the pressure is really on Iowa,” said Steinbauer. ‘I think they are the higher ranked, better team, and they have a home court advantage. I think it’s important for us to come in guns blazing and just expect to do well and take care of business, then we will win.”

The ISU men’s golf team said it can beat any team in the nation, Iowa State has struggled in Arizona against some of the best competitors and has no shortage of confidence going into the tournament.

The men’s golf team is preparing to face Iowa, who won the last four games of the in-state rivalry. The Cyclones beat the Hawkeyes in the Big 12 Match on Feb. 5, 2011. Since then, the Cyclones have been on a streak.

Blake Waller is the only current ISU golfer who has won a Big Four Match this year. The team is ready to bring home the win.

The tournament will start with two rounds Friday, April 12, 2013.

“Everybody’s pretty pumped, playing against a big team like Minnesota,” said ISU sophomore setter Jared Stensgaard. “They’ve been conserving in our practices so we’re just going to do our usual stuff and stay focused and get the job done.”

The matches are set to begin at 10 a.m. Saturday against Nebraska-Omaha, 11:15 a.m. against Northern Iowa and 1:30 p.m. against Minnesota.

The Cyclones are hoping not to get too comfortable, as the last regular season tournament before playing in the Big 12 Championships. Tank stressed that as the end of the season nears, focus needs to increase.

“It’s really like to see everybody raise their expectations up and not be comfortable with just finishing second,” Tank said of just winning the Big Eight. “We’re going to try to raise that ceiling up to Iowa City that week, so we are up there to play well.”

“I think we have the ability to do it if we play great, we do have a chance to win.”

“Everybody’s pretty pumped, playing against a big team like Minnesota,” said ISU sophomore setter Jared Stensgaard, who had 23 assists and had 43 kills in the match. “They’ve been conserving in our practices so we’re just going to do our usual stuff and stay focused and get the job done.”

The matches are set to begin at 10 a.m. Saturday against Nebraska-Omaha, 11:15 a.m. against Northern Iowa and 1:30 p.m. against Minnesota.

“I think the pressure is really on Iowa,” said Steinbauer. ‘I think they are the higher ranked, better team, and they have a home court advantage. I think it’s important for us to come in guns blazing and just expect to do well and take care of business, then we will win.”

The ISU men’s golf team said it can beat any team in the nation, Iowa State has struggled in Arizona against some of the best competitors and has no shortage of confidence going into the tournament.
