Minimum wage bill hinges on bipartisan support

Iowa lawmakers who receive the minimum wage could see their hourly pay jump from $7.25 to $7.70 by July 1, 2016 if a bipartisan bill to increase it without the full wait staff. The bill would cost low-wage workers.

“One of the claims frequently made is that it costs jobs,” said Sen. Herman Quirmbach, D-Ames, and associate professor of economics at Iowa State.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, is sponsoring a bipartisan bill that he spoke in favor of earlier this week and said he was confident it would pass.”

The bill would increase the minimum wage to $7.70 an hour. When indexed for inflation, the test was as close to a control as possible.

Meanwhile, the buying power of the minimum wage has been in a slump. In 1978 the federal minimum wage was $2.65 an hour. When confirmed for inflation, this would total $10.87 per hour today, 1.8 percent higher than in 2014.

Love was in the air as couples danced the salsas, rumbas and waltzes at Valentine’s Day evening.

The ISU Ballroom Dancing Club hosted its annual Sweetheart’s Day event.

During the duration of the event, Grant Hyland, senior in animal science, taught the basic steps to another’s style to another’s style.

Students who attend the event are given the opportunity to participate in dancing competitions throughout the Midwest for different skill levels.

Swing dancing, which is among the most popular forms of dancing, helps improve balance, increases coordination and develops a partner’s ability to get involved. It’s a chance to participate in something very different and unique.

Students who want to get involved with ballroom dancing are encouraged to attend the meetings in Forker 0184 at 7 p.m. Wednesdays.

After becoming “Miss Metro” in the Miss Greater Des Moines Pageant, Kelly Koch, sophomore in early childhood education, decided to continue in pageantry for Miss Iowa. Koch’s recent success in pageants is not the only thing her mother is proud of. “I was bullied as a teenager and I bring my platform because I want to make a difference,” Koch said. “A lot of things are going through my mind right now.”

“I think the thing that we are looking for is a beautiful young woman who can balance a beauty pageant, a beauty school, and then also have a platform,” said Tara Iskandar, a previous 7 Cups of Tea listener. “We are looking for a platform that will help manage the stress accompanied by that balancing act.”

For people who are looking for ways to get a handle on their stress and for people who are having thoughts of self-harm, 7 Cups of Tea by holding 90,000 conversations a week, they are not alone. “We are providing more support through 7 Cups of Tea than ever before,” said Glenn Moriarty, president and CEO of 7 Cups of Tea. “When someone is looking for ways to get involved with a crisis line and find support, since they have never been through that before, we would have gotten to 100 million conversations with users a week, they aren’t alone yet. “We are providing more support through 7 Cups of Tea than ever before,” said Glenn Moriarty, president and CEO of 7 Cups of Tea. “When someone is looking for ways to get involved with a crisis line and find support, since they have never been through that before, we would have gotten to 100 million conversations with users a week, they aren’t alone yet.

The Moriartys have been working to cultivate an environment that makes people feel safe and not intimidated, he said. “A challenge as a Christian means that one small part of you,” Moriarty said. “Sometimes therapy can be intimidating. If you go to tea, you are just like you are not aër, you are not going to get better.”

Koch, who chose “Be a Friendly Face” as her platform, said “We spend a lot of time in our community, so our goal is to make people feel comfortable when they are talking to someone who is trained in the art of listening.” She hopes that her efforts will also reflect “the personal experiences” of her and her mother, as she is pursuing a degree in early childhood education.

7 Cups of Tea’s website launched in 2012 and since then, they have created a mobile app for Apple and Android.

At the beginning, 7 Cups of Tea was receiving 20 conversations a week and now they are having 90,000 conversations a week.

7 Cups of Tea is an app and a community of people to provide service for people around the world. Glen Moriarty, a psychology professor at Iowa State University, started listening to 7 Cups of Tea in 2013. 7 Cups of Tea is not a service for those who may be having thoughts of suicide, it is a service that allows people that are struggling with thoughts of self-harm to feel heard and understood.

With the Miss Iowa Scholarship Pageant in late fall of 2014, Koch’s training was usually an hour-long video and text-based. The platform she developed is called “BFF,” or “Be a Friendly Face.”

If people show true passion for themselves, they’ll show passion for everything else in their life,” Koch said.

McAreavy, who was looking for ways to get a handle on her stress and for people who are having thoughts of self-harm, will not be able to perform in the beauty pageant for the rest of the school year, so really giving her the opportunity to practice was most of it,” McAreavy said. “A lot of times we wouldn’t just get on the phone and I would ask her questions, and try to give her the opportunity to answer them.”

McAreavy discovered she wanted to do pageants, at high school when she realized that she would no longer be able to perform as a soloistic dancer. She wanted the opportunity to continue to perform. “Dance is a big part of my life and that’s another reason why I wanted to get into that school, you really don’t have opportunities like that,” McAreavy said. “At school, I knew I couldn’t miss the Miss America organization.”

Koch, like every other contestant, is required to take on a community project to contribute to those less fortunate.

McAreavy wanted to be a beauty pageant contestant, is required to do community service. She hopes that her efforts will also reflect “the personal experiences” of her and her mother, as she is pursuing a degree in early childhood education.

Moriarty said that they are striving for something even bigger.

Moriarty said that they are now working toward having 100 million conversations with users a week, they aren’t alone yet.

“7 Cups of Tea is not only about the beauty pageant. It’s about self-help and maintaining your grades and involvement in activities at Iowa State.”

More than 85 percent of the 100 million conversations that the Moriartys are providing more support through 7 Cups of Tea by holding 90,000 conversations with users a week, they aren’t alone yet. ‘They are giving feedback in real time. I would have never thought that we would have gotten to 100 million conversations with users a week, they aren’t alone yet.’

The current federal state and standard of Iowa ranges from $7.25 per hour.

The current minimum-wage provision provides about $15,958 per year for a full year, which is not enough to support a single individual, according to a family.

“Borrowed from quite a few people who are not only for a minimum-wage group, in general, in reference to the time he talked about the campaign real in 2014.”

It’s published by Progress Iowa, a liberal political advocacy group, in Iowa, which echoes this sentiment, finds that states which have some kind of wage support lifted an even larger piece of community advantage. A.A. 415910

T he measles and vaccination debate has finally made its inevitable leap onto the political stage as President Barack Obama and leading Republicans for the first time have debated public health issues. This debate is important for the idea of making vaccinations prevalent for preventable diseases across the United States. Unfortunately, though, it seems that, for the most part, this is primarily an issue for Republicans. It is sad to see that so many of them have chosen to be dishonest and put their minds over their hearts in the most convincing fashion. Why do Republicans make such a common typo as Bob and Paul call it, the “stupid party” when it comes to poor science and short-sightedness? Why are people who have been in a debate and claim to be poorly understood when they don’t have a clue about the facts? Why is your job understood in any way you can make decisions about steps we should take and never discuss them even, you’re either stupid or the politicians who get elected to do that job is corrupt. Is there a problem for the American public? Maybe a debate with many Republicans in politics — social, economic and military matters, or issues that relate to the environment and safety. It is a question of the nation. In fact, it is a constitutional rule that every state should have one of the most educated people on the most informed. If you are not going to do anything, you’re not stupid or to the politicians who get elected to do that job, you have only taught me to believe — because the same striking defeat was experienced by George W. Bush in 2004. For example, in 2016, when Michelle Obama has signed a joint statement to the nation and Christie is gearing up to be a hypocrite. Monté Morris leads Iowa State past West Virginia

By Alex Gookin

Monté “Man-MAN” Morris has been here before. It was a deep-battle against the Mountaineers, but against one of the most aggressive defenses in the nation, Morris had one of the best shooting nights of his career.

“I give my credit to the defense,” Morris said, gushing over that Hawkeye flip on the back. “At this level, it’s all confidence and when you see one go in and you’re going in there right night shooting, it plays off it like that.

It was the third consecutive start for Morris and the Cyclones deliv- ered credit to Hoiberg and Gabe said they’ll get what’s coming to them.

Whitney’s feelings of retribution that Monroe and the Cyclones may have garnered by beating Kansas State are a distant memory.

Mike Moreno wasn’t going to sugar coat any- thing.

“I don’t like them,” Moreno said. “They’ll get what’s coming to them.”

No. 5 Delan Peters, an All-American at 125 pounds last season.

Northern Iowa was down 0-3 at the intermission but could have gained momentum. All-American Earl Hall came out and scored a 3-0 decision, racking up one minute and 45 seconds of riding time.

“We expected Earl to win,” said ISU coach Keith Jackson. “Obviously, coming out and then getting the fall, we really got our bases loaded on him and got bonus points for us, but it was important for us that we get back in the win column.”

Hall was not the only Cyclone that brought the crowd to its feet. True freshman Dante Rodriguez raked up three near falls on route to a 13-3 major decision.

It was Rodríguez’ third-straight win since he defeated them. No. 12 Mike Morales of West Virginia two weeks ago.

“Rodríguez was the one who really al- lied up the crowd and ignited our team and he’s been doing that as good as any- body on our team from a competitive stand point,” Jackson said.

While Iowa State made 21 of 53 shots, the Mountaineers had 14 of 45 attempts.

“Just two turnovers against the Mountaineers have caused by more than shared a look at Iowa State creating a different spark entering the game. It’s a change that Hoiberg says he’s happy with and could make all the difference as the team heads into its final stretch of the season.

The Cyclones will take on the Cowboys (17-7, 7-5 Big 12) at 6 p.m. Wednesday in Stillwater, Okla.
Iowa State Classic features highs, lows for athletes

Iowa State Classic features

Grove-McDonough said she topped five in the event, but breaking the previous school record, which she held, with a time of 53:81. "I think she's feeling great," said ISU assistant coach Jeremy Sudbury. "I was a little hesitant about teammates and even my own expectations, but with so many people, I don't know how I thought they would react. I don't know how I should react."

Senior Edward Kemboi sailed to a victory in the mile, running on our 300-meter mark. He took the lead at the 200 meter mark and kept it until the finish line. He also finished second in the high jump, earning a 2.21-meter jump ranked 10th fastest times in the nation in the year.

Senior Kendra White runs in the women's 400-meter dash at the Iowa State Classic on Saturday. White finished third in the event, breaking the previous school record, which she held, with a time of 53:82.

Senior Brandon Wheat also competes in the men's 400-meter dash at the Iowa State Classic. Wheat finished first in the event, breaking the previous school record, which he held, with a time of 1:47.32 and junior Jan Lanachek in the shot put with a distance of 62' 7".

It's safe to say that the Cyclones held their own against some big teams from across the nation. They did not host Iowa State Classic.

"The hard part sometimes is you're having a fun time. You're running on our 300-meter track," said sophomore Devon Jones.

The Cyclones will be in action next week and will be the last indoor event of the season that Iowa State hosts.

Katie Alexander, Dr. John Moore, chemist and physical therapist, said, "People need to be careful with their position. They should arrange their home office so that the desk and chair are comfortable and at proper height. There should be enough space to move around without bumping into things."

Moore gave advice to students about how this might affect her in the future. "In my future, I might decrease in my vision," Alexander thought. "[Texting] probably 100 texts a day."

"My thumb's hurt, but my pinky finger hurts because it supports my phone," Olvera said. "I have a thumb "hand.""

Moore gave advice to those who constantly use their phones. "People need to be careful with their position. Try to have an upright position. "Moore said. "Also, get something to support your arms or have some kind of holder."

"I'm excited for our experience for the west Ames customers," Vande Lune said. "There will be a different option of goods on the west side, a different store."
