Greek council helps students develop skills

By Alayna Flory

The Greek council offers an opportunity for freshmen students to become a part of a council that teaches members about leadership and social skills. "The Emerging Greek Leadership Council serves as a training ground for students in terms of leadership and social skills," said Biedenbach, program manager for the provost's office.

Schmid participated in EGLC when he was a sophomore and noted that it offered a high variety of skills that he gained through EGLC, such as: "I now am ready to take on higher roles and responsibilities." Schmid said.

Complex metal hydride holds potential for hydrogen applications. It is a rechargeable storage medium for hydrogen that would make the idea of a mass-produced hydrogen-powered vehicle far more viable and safer than storing hydrogen gas or as a liquid. Hydrogen fuels would need to be stored in giant tanks or in underground caverns, which can be costly and dangerous. Hydrogen is also a hazardous substance, as it is highly flammable and can cause explosions.

Pecharsky thinks that an adapted form of this technology could someday be used to develop a hydrogen-powered vehicle. In search of a suitable process for hydrogen combustion, Pecharsky and his team have been experimenting with different methods for storing and releasing hydrogen. They have focused on using complex hydrides, which can store hydrogen in a solid state and release it when needed. This process is more energy-efficient and safer than using hydrogen gas or liquid.

In a recent study by the Environmental Protection Agency, complex metals like carbon, silicon, and titanium, which

Obama consoles victims of Arizona shooting

By the CNN Wire Staff

President Barack Obama received a warm welcome Wednesday night, with an overflow crowd of the 14,000 people the school said held just under 14,000 people in Arizona's McKale Memorial Center, which the president filled with encouragement the day after he was shot.

"The president wanted to begin this solace of the aisle have reached out in words and deeds to help our office in our time of need," Giffords' husband, astronaut Mark Kelly, said.

"The sudden hole torn in your hearts," Obama said, "There is nothing I can say that will fill..."

"We will go forward..." Secretary of Homeland Security and former Arizona Gov. Janet Napolitano read from the book of Isaiah, while Attorney General Eric Holder read from the Second Letter of Paul to the Corinthians.

"We are talking with each other in a different way..." said other public officials to the request. The university has "become..." a threshold above which an adjustment will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

"The policy, effective Jan. 14, outlines several reasons for making a salary adjustment including a performance-based, merit salary adjustment for employees who consistently meet their performance standards of performance. Other increases include a merit or equity need-based adjustment and a retention adjustment.

"Salary-based adjustments are made to correct an internal salary disparity..." For example, if you have two employees doing the same work with the same qualifications and experience and there is a large disparity in their salary, an equity-based adjustment may be made. Equity-based adjustments can be made for any employee who has been an employee for three or four years as well as for new employees who are based in..."

Do you recall the special MTV show about abortion? It was called "50 Days of Shame" or something like that. You know, the show that interviews women who have had abortions. Instead of promoting the idea that abortion is a moral right of women, the show's producers decided to focus on the women's stories, as if to demonstrate that abortion is a personal decision that women make after thoughtful consideration. This was a deliberate strategy to shift the conversation away from the real issues at stake: the economic and social costs of abortion, the role of the state in regulating reproductive rights, and the impact of abortion on women and their families. The show was a classic example of how media organizations can use their influence to control the narrative and shape public opinion. In this case, it served as a powerful tool for demonizing abortion and amplifying myths about the procedure. It's a stark reminder of the importance of critically analyzing media content and not taking it at face value. Instead, we should seek out diverse sources of information and engage in informed discussion to arrive at a clear understanding of the issues.

Morrises’ big night lifts Cyclones past Jayhawks

By Jake Lovett
jlovett@iowastate.edu

ISU forward Jameel McKay and center Draymond Green were the stars of Wednesday’s game against the Jayhawks, each providing 27 points and five assists on the night. The corridor was filled with gold shirts.

Green praised the Morris brothers’ play.
“I think they’re beasts. They’re big-time basketball players,” Hoiberg said.

“ Their emphasis is to go inside, get the lead I think we’re in really good shape.”

With the crowd appreciating the home court advantage, the Cyclones utilized a height advantage against the Jayhawks and were successful on just 61 percent of those, but the Jayhawks were successful on just 53 percent of their shots.

JOIN OUR TEAM!

Midway through the season, Jon Reader has stepped up as the leader of ISU wrestling and has hit some milestones along the way.

Almost halfway through the season, the senior is the only undefeated wrestler on the team, with a 23-0 record, and has won the No. 1 ranking in Intermat’s national poll at 174 pounds.

“This is my last season, and it is really just about going out with as much respect and as much confidence as I can,” Reader said. “I’ve got two months left, and it really is just about going out with no regrets and to just compete and have fun.”

Reader said he’s just wrapping his head around this March in Philadelphia. “This is my last season, and it is really just about going out with as much respect and as much confidence as I can.”

“The winner from each women’s and men’s division will have the opportunity to participate in the State of Iowa 3-Point Contest at Drake University on February 3 for Women and February 4 for Men.”

Browning, Shealy receive Big 12 honors

Iowa State gymnasts Michele Browning and Michelle Shealy have received Big 12 honors this week for their performances against Arkansas on Jan. 7.

“Having a junior, was named Big 12 Gymnast of the Week after winning the all-around competition last week against Missouri. His success this year has been achieved by his performance at last year’s NCAA Championships, where he fell one spot short of winning All-American honors for a third straight season.

“I would look at him as a great accomplishment,” Reader said. “To get over that little hump was a great accomplishment.”

'The Final Flight' — one made Harry Potter musical written by 130 students at Ames247.

Vance, first appeared at the national convention in Orlando last summer. After the show’s national cast released for months completely via Orlando, Hawke was excited to see the production come together in the end. He was very excited to be returning to his home state of Iowa.

In July, Vance and the rest of the producers will perform at the Harry Potter convention, LeakyCon, this year will be the first Harry Potter themed in the United States.

This time around, Vance is looking for ways to make the show by developing the show and technical efforts more efficient. This year’s performance also requires more casts than ever, including new additions to the producing team.
