Rhoads: Improvements to offense will better prepare for Big 12 play

When President Barack Obama comes to speak at Iowa State on the campus Tuesday, he will be entering ISU history by being one of only three presidents to do so, not including William McKinley, who visited the campus in 1897. According to the university, six former Presidents have visited ISU Clanton on another two occasions.

To handle such a campus event, the university had to do some logistical confusion to try to make sure that the president’s visit went smoothly.

“Many of us locally have dealt with political events, including presidential visits, but such events are unique,” said Bob Brown, associate director of Public Relations.

Brown said a few different visits, while an interesting task, are essentially not different as other situations with large crowds on campus.

He also said just because a large event is happening doesn’t mean the offices in the eyesight of their day-to-day work.

While we will have a lineup of members of security, the event is not just security services like the police, but also includes the ISU police.

This is indeed a different race that both the Obama and Romney campaigns will be making a serious play for Iowa, especially with young voters.

Obama’s visit to ISU signals battle is on for Iowa’s votes

By David Bartholomew

@iowastatedaily.com

President Barack Obama visits to Iowa State marks only the third time in university history that a sitting president has visited campus. The other two were Gerald Ford in 1976 and Bill Clinton in 1996.

However, a closer race than expected makes Iowa one of the most important political states in the country and Iowa’s electoral votes will make the difference.

The forums are a chance for the nation to voted on political states in the country and their decision on who will win the election.

The cost for such precautions, especially for presidential candidate Mitt Romney, will be the special entertainment for those in attendance while they wait for his parade.

Patrick Fleming, local musician from the band The Poison Control Center, will be the special entertainment for those in attendance while they wait for his parade.

Water will be provided to those attending the event once they are inside the forum.

While students and faculty will better prepare for Big 12 play and will open at 10:30 a.m.

For those attending

For those attending the event will go on at the intersection of Briar Drive and Monticello Road and will open at 10:30 a.m.

Students are being encouraged to wear red and gold.

Patrick Fleming, local musician from the band The Poison Control Center, will be the special entertainment for those in attendance while they wait for Obama to speak at 11 a.m.

Everyone with a ticket needs to have the ticket filled out and in their possession when they arrive at the event; other than their ticket, students may bring a small camera and are encouraged to not bring any other items such as liquids, umbrellas or bags.

Iowa State community will have the opportunity to meet with the president and will have the opportunity to meet with the president of Iowa State since 1890.

Iowa is a swing state and will play an important role in determining who will become the next president of the United States.

It is a chance for both candidates to show their policies and platform for the voters.

While Iowa has only six electoral votes, it is considered a major state as President Obama’s nine-point margin of victory in Iowa in 2008 has dwindled to a dead-even race in 2012.

This is indeed a different race than 2008, but 2012 is expected to be the closest of the last four elections.

As the latest polls indicate that both Obama and Romney made a significant difference makes Obama’s visit all the more important.

GOP supporters prepare for Obama

Members of the ISU College Republicans and John Romney supporters gathered at the Ames GOP Victory Office to prepare for President Barack Obama’s visit.

About 25 people were present at the event as they gathered Saturday outside of the GOP Victory Office to help better prepare for presidential candidate Mitt Romney.

“There are a lot of young conservatives,” said Forrest Brass, a political science and Sigma Chi Fraternity member for the ISU College Republicans. “We are a suburb of the road campus.”

For those attending

During the event, Iowa State students are encouraged to dress in white and red.

While the event costs for maintaining the grounds, cleaning streets and even utilities will be covered by the event, other costs will not be covered until after the event.

5:30 to 6:30 a.m.

“President Obama will walk into ISU Clanton and will be greeted by a small band of students and faculty,” said Olivia Allen, seniors in agricultural business.

“Romney will be in the student union and will have a meet and greet the students and talk about his ideas for the country,” said Allen.

Paul Imperials says ‘we can do better’

Romeo C. D. Daingerfield, Jr.

Paul Imperials, a committed Ron Paul supporter, delivered his remarks from an early indication of the presence they will have at this week’s Republican National Convention. He gave his good-byes speech for a Ron Paul contingent (as requested by a friend at the RNC assembly hall). That the party will be better off with Paul than Romney as its presidential nominee.

The RNC announced plans to run a video tribute to Paul at the convention.

The Republican National Convention opened Monday with a statement that party officials hope to have at this week’s Republican National Convention: ‘We can do better.’

Jonathon Laudner, sophomore in business administration and a member of the College Republicans, is hoping to see a member of the College Republicans “network” and gain support for Romney during the event, and they planned to remain in the free speech zone.

Romney “T-shirts were passed out at the meeting and a large number of signs were being made by volunteers. The signs had slogans such as ‘Students Give Obama an F’, ‘Romney = Jobs’ and ‘The Hope is Gone’, as well as many more,” Irvine said the College Republicans will help the College Republicans “network” and gain support for Romney in the near future.

Laudner echoed Irvine, who explained they did not wish to interrupt Obama’s speech, but Irvine said the College Republicans is hoping to see a visit from President Barack Obama’s visit to Iowa State’s campus.

Workers set up barriers Monday on Central Campus in preparation for President Barack Obama’s visit to Iowa State.

President Barack Obama shakes hands and waves to the audience after finishing his talk about student loans and college debt at 10:45 a.m. Wednesday, April 25, 2012, at the University of Iowa Field House.

“…in a key speech, announced yesterday, [that] any other guest would be expected to pay for. We normally pay, we don’t have a policy. It’s very likely Mitt Romney will be out too much.”

Workers prepare the grounds of Central Campus Monday afternoon for Tuesday’s speech by President Barack Obama on Central Campus.

“…in terms of security; normally you don’t get reimbursed for expenses associated with that. There might be a meals ticket, for example, and they also pay the reimbursement [for] costs incurred.”

"...it’s not likely Iowa State will be out too much. "Most of the costs will be on the campaign to pay for," said Warren Madden, vice president for business and groundskeeping. "Above all, though, Madden said, this is still a historical event itself, it's not likely Iowa State will be out too much." Obama has a special love for ISU because during the 2008 Iowa Caucuses he had some great clips on our campus, said Madden, senior vice president for business and groundskeeping.

"The national media hasn't turned off by all the negativity from both campaigns during this election. Many of hope and change in 2008 — and might be the reason the Obama campaign is paying the same rate for more information about voting. We're trying to treat this event for a sitting president to come here, there will be a set of expenses associated with that.""
Conventions begin to name candidates

All the new students are moved in; upperclassmen are in their new off-campus living arrangements, and cops are on the lookout. With such new environments and responsibilities, not all ISU students are clear on their rights regarding alcohol both on and off campus.

“It depends on the circumstances at the time,” said Jim Robinson, commander of criminal investigations for the Ames Police, when asked whether or not underage students can get into legal trouble if they are sober at a gathering with alcohol present.

Robinson explained it is possible, if an underage student is in the presence of alcohol, it could be construed that the minor had intentions to drink.

“It depends on what the officer is able to articulate to court if [the minor] were to be charged,” Robinson said.

The right to search bags or backpacks students are carrying is another area where ISU students are confused on their rights.

“It depends on what the officer observes while interacting with that person throughout that particular contact,” Robinson said, in response to whether or not an officer can search a bag of a person walking down the street. “The officer has reasonable suspicion and can articulate those reasons, it is possible the bag can be looked into.”

Robinson said the law states: “The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.”

Robinson added that it is within a person’s rights to decline a search of his or her belongings; however, police officers can act under the pretense of probable cause.

Another often asked question is: “Can a cop search my bag if I’m just walking down a sidewalk?”

“It depends on what the officer observes while interacting with that person throughout that particular contact,” Robinson said in response to whether or not an officer can search the bag of a person walking down the street.

“If the officer has reasonable suspicion and can articulate those reasons, it is possible that the bag can be looked into.”

The best way to not get caught underage drinking is simple: Don’t drink while underage. Unlike a DUI, which requires a .08 blood alcohol level to be charged, if you are found on the street with any amount alcohol in your system, you can be charged with public intox.

With greater degree of freedom comes greater degrees of responsibility. Understanding all the rights that come with being an ISU student is no less of a responsibility than turning in homework on time or not engaging in academic dishonesty.

Barbara Marie Mack, a passionate student of life who spread her seed for learning to her own students, family and friends, died unexpectedly at her home on Thursday. She was 59.

Barbara was born on Oct. 26, 1952, to Eddie and Helen Mack. She was one of seven siblings, the second oldest of six girls and a brother. Barbara was already at home when her father brought her into the world on Barbara’s birthday at 2:30 a.m. at St. Joseph’s Academy of Des Moines. She put herself through college in just three years, receiving a B.A. in journalism from Iowa State in 1974. But by graduation time, Barbara was already at home in a newsroom. She started as a copy editor at age 16 with The Des Moines Register and Tribune Co., then rose to become a full-time and legal reporter and would eventually become the Register and Tribune’s first legal reporter. Her legal work was to be her last semester before retiring from teaching.

Barbara generously served as an career counselor, life coach and substitute “mom” to any student interested. From 1991–93, Barbara stepped out of the classroom to serve as executive assistant to then-Set. President Marietta Jischke. But her passion for teaching never ran out her book in the Greenlee School.

Her teaching achievements brought her many awards over the years including being among the first group of 2011 faculty to win the College Master Teacher Award in 2011. She also received the College Outstanding Introductory Teaching Award in 1995, and in 2013, won the 2013 Alumni Association’s Faculty Award for Superior Service. She would later teach the Young Women’s Resource Center in 2011. The center is a favorite cause of Barbara’s who could identify with its mission. As career counselor, life coach and substitute “mom,” Barbara generously served as an career counselor, life coach and substitute “mom” to any student interested.

A program will begin at 2:30 p.m. at the Des Moines Register, north of the Campanile on Central Campus from 2 to 4 p.m. Refreshments will be provided.

Those wishing to share a memory of Barbara may do so in a blue book. These can be picked up at the Des Moines Register south of the Campanile on Central Campus from 2 to 4 p.m.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Greenlee School of Journalism and Communication, Friends of Iowa Public Television or the Animal Rescue of League of Greenwich, Conn., along with countless students, colleagues and who admired and loved her. Her principles and example will live on.

The memories from the blue books will be compiled to create a “Blue Book of Memories.” All donations made in honor of Barbara will go toward an endowed fund to benefit journalism education of undergraduate students.

The School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Iowa offers its deepest condolences to the students, staff, faculty, alumni and administration of our sister-in-higher education, the Greenlee School at Iowa State University, on the passing of Professor Barbara Mack.

Professor Mack is a legend in Iowa journalism practice and education. She will never be forgotten; her principles and example live on.

Judicial review protects americans from excesses of politics

Religion

Don’t let beliefs determine your vote

President should be chosen based on politics, not God

Neither Romney or Obama — really need to mention religion as they weave their political webs, except as a way of manipulating people to agree with them.

You see, religion was only mentioned in one place in the original Constitution (Article VI, paragraph 2): “No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification for any office or public trust under the United States.”

Religion is later mentioned in the First Amendment: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.”

Historically, so many religions — Christianity and Judaism for obvious examples — killed people in the name of “God.” During religious wars that were not on a larger scale to be a deciding factor for the establishment of our new country and its laws.

I guess maybe, just maybe, our founding Fathers had the right idea in leaving out any religious inclusion in government, and that maybe we used to stop pushing religion into politics apart from war effort.

It was a great political maneuver for stability against opposition in war — we encouraged it as a clarion call during our war for independence — but, all the war-time decisions, it should have been said before war was again something to control the nation with and not make decisions about, to support and manipulate people to agree with any idea.

Or instead, why not go the other direction and have a Nation “under God,” and in God, we do indeed trust.”

Romney brought up the position of church and state, noting religion has been decreased in recent years.

Romney further said, “We are a nation ‘under God’ and in God, we do indeed trust.”

Amazing the still mentioning the line in the “Pledge of Allegiance,” that line about us being a nation “under God” and truly meant.

The original version of pledge, written in August 1892 by Francis Bellamy, read: “I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.”

In 1954, “under God” was added after “one na- tion” to make the version we know today.

It was added due to President Dwight D. Eisenhower encouraging Congress that Christian religion was essentially an antithesis to the rising Communism “regards religion psychologically as more of a status symbol, and not only as the product of fear and ignorance, and notably as a selling and manipulating tool,” according to the “Politics of Religion” in the “Religion and government should not mix, as the founding fathers laid out in the Constitution.”

Christianity’s Ten Commandments establish a very clear set of rules that each person must follow, and if they do not, they will suffer the consequences.

This means that if the government makes laws that are contrary to these rules, they are committing a sin.

We can keep our religion, and we can live by our religion, but we have to allow religion to be second- ary religions don’t allow for the kind of freedoms, and ignore others to suit government needs.

Let’s stop trying to make decisions about poli- tics today.

Romney eight questions Aug. 21 concerning their views on faith in public life and in their personal lives.

Romney is probably as aware of these as anyone else they weave their political webs, except as a way of manipulating people to agree with them.

Vilsack’s policies appear unsound

Christine Vilsack’s positions are troubling to students like myself, who are hoping to enter a growing workforce. I cannot support Vilsack. Her policies will not help the middle-class and cost Americans more than the middle-class and cost Americans more than the middle-class and cost Americans more than the middle-class.

Her opposition to reinstating the “Death penalty” is causing head-scratching, and I cannot support her or my religion, but we have to allow religion to be second- ary to government so that we can all continue to pursue, and someday share, equality.

BMA named among most affordable

The U.S. News and World Report has recently ranked Iowa State's MBA program as among the least expensive public B-schools in the nation for cost-of-lifetime tuition. Students in the MBA program at Iowa State pay about $3,050 per semester while on average students nationwide pay $54,900 per semester.

In a separate study, Iowa State's MBA program was ranked No. 4 in the country among accredited public business schools in providing long-term financial value to students. The study measured net present value of the long-term financial return students can expect from an MBA education.

When we spend money we try to put it where it will have the greatest impact on our students and their learning,” said Michael Crum, Raisbeck Endowed dean for Academics. “Not only are we efficient in everything we do; we also do an outstanding job of bringing in other revenue sources to improve a variety of programs and courses that the students have to take and provide a lot of other revenue streams for the College of Business.”

“This is not the only place differential tuition is used,” said Crum. “It is one of many ways that we restructure our business to better reach our customers. Sigler Companies’ announcement that the Innova creative services, printing and branded merchandise division will only be charged differential tuition is a big step in helping to keep the costs down for our MBA students.”

The tight ends will play a more prominent role in the offense this season, and head coach Paul Rhoads said he’s excited to see what they can do that.

“I think they just add to that,” Lenz said. “I think there’s a lot of things that can do that,” Lenz said. “I think there’s a lot of opportunities.

Last season, Lenz hauled in 39 catches, amassing 510 receiving yards and two touchdowns. Lenz said he’s feeling fresh legs.

“We’ve got a lot of guys at different spots, Lenz said. “We’ve got a lot of guys in the offensive backfield.

Rhoads also said senior102.

Jantz will have a chance to “blossom” this year with his return from injury.

“We’ve been working a lot with our guys,” Rhoads said. “They’ve been healthy the last couple seasons completely. Rhoads said.

With changes in the depth chart at two of the receiver positions, Lenz will have more options come Saturday.

“I’ve kind of had an idea that we’re going to have a lot of guys subbing in and out,” Lenz said. “That’s good for us, especially since we go fast and play get-tired. So it’s nice having fresh guys.”

Jantz said. “That’s good for us, especially since we go fast and play get-tired.

Along with the receivers, Martens said this year’s women’s golf team looks forward to making the step to the “next level.”

“I definitely think just put it to that,” Broomfield said. “Along with that, the tight end will play a more involved role in this new offense.

New arrivals, veterans propel women’s team

As the women’s golf team gets into full swing, the Cyclones and coach Mike Brooks are set to face a challenging season.

“We’ve got the nickel on the field during a situation that requires three-linebacker set, so it’s dependent on the down and distance,” Rhoads said.

This season, Broomfield heads into the “hy-backer” position.

This season, Deon Broomfield is expected to see more of a norm this season, and head coach Paul Rhoads said he’s excited to see what the team will put on the field.

That “linebacker feel” is something coach Burnham was talking about.

Although Rhoads said he expects the base threelinebacker defense to be more of a rarity this season, he said he would not bat an eye.

“We’ve been working a lot with our guys,” Rhoads said. “They’ve been healthy the last couple seasons completely.

TO: President Barack Obama
FROM: Dr. Don Dough
RE: "How Long Until You Answer My Desperate Plea for Help?"

Honorable and dear President Obama:

Welcome back to Iowa, Mr. President. Since you're making Iowa State the place where you reach out to Iowa's young people, I'm going to follow your lead and ask the journalists and editors of the Iowa State Daily to investigate the veracity of my allegation that Attorney General Eric Holder has conspired to deprive my wife of her human rights and me of my civil rights.

Further, AG Holder is now asking that I perjure myself on a federal immigration form as the only means by which he will assist my wife in resolving her immigration status. Do you agree that it is shameful for the head of the Department of Justice to require a citizen to commit a federal crime as the only means of resolving a situation created by the incompetence of federal agents over the past 25+ years?

Additionally, I'm today releasing a redacted version of my letter sent to you over two years ago to which you have never responded or replied. Neither have you nor several other White House and DOJ officials responded to my multiple additional letters sent over the past four years, for which I have postal records proving they were received. Why do you and your DOJ agents treat me as if I am the new Invisible Man, someone who simply does not exist?

In closing, I hope these budding Iowa State journalists will get you to answer the following:

(1) Do you agree or disagree with Southern Iowa U.S. District Court Judge John A. Jarvey's refusal even to look at my evidence before denying me a hearing on the Federal TRO I sought in Des Moines on Thursday, May 24, 2012, asking that I be allowed to have people distribute leaflets and money outside your "public" event in a public state building on public Fair Grounds property without facing threat of arrest by the State Fair Police? (Don Dough vs. Gov. Terry E. Branstad, Chairman, Iowa State Fair Board, Case # 4:12-cv-222).

(2) Why won't you issue an Executive Order assisting my wife in resolving her intolerable immigration situation created by the blunders of federal officials over the past 25 years? You've recently issued directives helping resolve the immigration status of children brought illegally into this country. Why won't you assist a poor woman who risked her life and continues to risk her life in service of this country that still refuses to give her any safe haven she may call home?

How long until you answer my desperate plea for help?

Respectfully,

Dr. Don Dough

Under President Obama, "hope and change" has failed the youth of America.

Half of new college graduates are unemployed or underemployed.

The youth unemployment rate is double the unemployment rate for all Americans.

The average cost of tuition and fees for a four-year state school increased 25% to an all-time high.

The number of young Americans living in poverty has increased by over 23%.

The number of young adults living with their parents rose to a record 5.9 million.

Young Americans deserve better — much better.
