Serpentine Caceres has the passion.

Caceres, pastor in elementary education, is part of a new club on campus that hopes to inspire others to be accepting of mariachi tunes and see the world differently.

The idea started two years ago with these marianas-infected students. It wasn't until now that they got the courage actually to start getting other students involved.

For Caceres, the club is a continuation from her high school days. The college formation started with memories of a mariachi band that her mom used to form.

"I'm seeing something in the communication chair for the student organization," said Caceres. "It looked quite interesting. I finally thought, I'm seeing where that warmth comes from. All the mariachi members are part of the organization."}

"The band is a perfect example of our student leaders," said Deanna Donner, senior in chemical engineering, the executive vice president for ROTC. "Some people think, you know, sexual harassment is and how to prevent it. But everybody works together, man and woman."

"Hopefully it starts with an impact," Demer said. "In some cases they can turn to other guys they meet and it becomes something that people want to do together."

New emergency alert system

By Matthew Rose

wastatedaily.com

Story County isimplementing a new mass notification system for Ames capable of alerting all citizens and emergency responders in Story County.

The new system goes into effect March 1, replacing CodeRED, the former emergency notification system. The Story County Iowa Alert system is designed to provide important, time critical emergency information, but we need you to take a few minutes to register so we can reach you when necessary.

Story County Iowa Alert is open for public sign up for Ames residents.

During an emergency, the system delivers voice, text and email messages to registered phones and email addresses.

The system allows emergency management agencies to notify the entire county or specific geographic areas of an evacuation, flood, fire, lost, missing person or other type of public safety threat.

People without landlines must register multiple preferred phone types for emergency notification. If you do not have email, you can still register for the system.

ISU student charged with sexual abuse

By Matthew Rose

wastatedaily.com

ISU freshman Byad Ziar, 19, has been arrested and charged with sexual abuse by third degree.

According to the filing complaint, a man was invited to the 19-year-old victim’s room in Willow Hall between 5 and 6 p.m. on Jan. 19. The man and the victim participated in “consensual sexual behavior” before the man

“the defendant repeatedly raped the victim” before assaulting her, and “the victim repeatedly told the defendant to stop, but he refused to do so.”

Third-degree sexual abuse, a class C felony, carries a 1,000 to 10,000 year imprisonment.

That is being held in the Story County Jail on a $10,000 bond.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Friday.

Thefts are down but still evident

By Isabel Gottlieb

Thefts have decreased on campus, according to the ISU Police Department, but there are still more to be aware of.

“I think the biggest thing is maintaining security of your belongings,” said Laura Underwood, ISU College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. Underwood suggested students have the opportunity to speak with employers relating to agriculture and life sciences.

Agricultural industry is a wide open field

Summer internships are an integral part of student experiences, according to Cathy Bliss, ISU career fair coordinator. In the past three years, 80 percent of students have had internships or work experience prior to graduation.

Laura Underwood, communications specialist at Farmers Cooperative Conference, says the importance of connections, especially in the agricultural field.

“I actually do have an agricultural background. I know of the importance of connections, especially in the agricultural field,” Underwood said.

It’s all about who you know. Internships provide great contacts for students, especially when looking for jobs.

In order to maintain an internship without previous intern experience, Birchard said, students should look around here and see what is going on; the more experiences you have the better.

“Problems that challenge me the most of what is going on right now in agriculture right now, is that we don’t have a mature workforce. People are getting older,” Birchard said.

The announcement comes just more than a month after Cedar Rapids City Council Member Monica Vernon, who ran unsuccessfully for Lieutenant Governor with her future son, Jack Hatch in the 2014 gubernatorial elections, announced she would run for the seat if he did not.

The Ag and Life Sciences Career Fair was held Oct. 15, 2013 at the Lied Rec Center. From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., students had the opportunity to meet with over fifty employers relating to agriculture and life sciences.

Preparations are set in place for winter road repair, safety

By Anshe Kirsch

Even after the city of Ames clears muddy roads and all winter snow, the city must deal with the damage to paved streets from the ice and snow.

Public Works for the city of Ames goes to the extra effort and time to complete projects with a capital improvement plan to improve the worst of the city streets.

“We come back with a proposed street location for repair or reconstruction within our budget,” said Randy Brouwer, civil engineer for the city of Ames.

In order to prepare for the winter conditions, “We come back with the historical data in the city, the drainage inspection of the street, gulp and discussion with our maintenance crew about what they say seems three for issues,” Kaiser said.

LINEUP CHANGE TO BE TESTED IN COMING WEEK

By Max Dible
@iowastatedaily.com
By Ryan Young

If there were ever a test for ISU women's basketball head coach Fred Hoiberg, this would be it.

Only five regular-season games remain for the Cyclones' basketball team and each one is becoming more and more important.

The team will try to stretch its three-game winning streak when it plays Oklahoma State on Saturday at 2 p.m. in Stillwater, Okla., the first of the Cyclones' four remaining road games this season. By Max Dible Dejean-Jones' play has fluctuated as much as the Cyclones' results during the previous week and a half. His points and rebounding numbers have risen, but his assist numbers have fallen. And while he has contributed significantly to the defense in the last two games, four of those rebounds were reduced to roughly 15 in the span of two games.

"It's a challenge," said Fred Hoiberg about the move. "But Long of Dejean-Jones' move from fifth on the court to wing. It is perhaps harder to adapt the coaching message on the bench, but also, particularly when two of those three contests have come on the road, where Iowa State has been in this season. Iowa State's upcoming week features matches at No. 22 Oklahoma State and at Texas, and should help clear up what the team will look like moving forward with Dejean-Jones as the sixth man, which felt like a trade of offense for defense when he was shuffled into the starting rotation.

Dejean-Jones, who has averaged 10 scoring points for much of the year utilizing his size advantage at the guard position, has seen his rebounding numbers cut in half from stats through the season. Yet, those numbers too have not necessarily turned out that way.

Dejean-Jones speaks rank and honestly about the change in his role. But Hoiberg said that outside of the on-court results, he believes with the progress he has witnessed in the mindset of the overall guard.

"It's different for Bryce," said Ryan Young. "It's a lot of possibilities for a lot of teams. It's a lot of possibilities for us, but you have to figure out the best way to do it. Everyone wants an opportunity, and we have those five last games.

The Cyclones have faced the Sooners once before this season, however, they lost by nine points on the road. While the team couldn't add a mark to the win column, the two teams remain even around the Sooners' senior guard Nicki M一次性s dropped a shoulder-high 19 points.

Since then, Mosity has struggled. The Cyclones have averaged more than 17 points and nearly eight assists through the last nine games, which has helped the Cyclones win three consecutive contests. On Tuesday, Iowa State defeated West Virginia by 16 points.

"We just have to execute our game plan," said senior guard Nicole "Kidd" Blaskowsky. "We just have to stay locked in and do what we know how to do and just play our game."
