Inked out personal expression

Artists draw on advice on finding that personal fit

Artists draw on personal expression

Inked out personal expression

Tattoos can be a form of expression, remembrance and individuality, but with social networking sites like Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn, local tattoo artists argue that being original with body art is rare among customers.

Some tattoo artists in Campustown offered a few of their suggestions.

Jared Angel owner, Bob Parr, said tattoos in stents are fine but don’t overdose.

“Big quotes on your side- corodies” Parr said. “Nobody wants to stand around reading your body images are much more interesting.”

Daniel Forrester, Lasting Impressions tattoo artist, believes tattoo artists have a responsibility to their clients that don’t know how to look for a tattoo artist and a lot of shops offer jobs on them by taking their money and giving them a tattoo they may not want.

Parr said “When a job could be something a lot cooler, instead of taking the time to reason what’s possible and what’s not possible in the hurna minimizes.”

Forrester understands what celebrity tattoos will always be more enticing, but the likelihood is they won’t look the way they should.

“People want to see what the new celebrity just got and so no one wants to think for themselves,” Parr said. “For example, right now we’re doing a rash of infinity signs with words and lettering, you probably have five people that have that tattoo.”

Parr admitted that although he has been guilty of just giving people the tattoo they want, he finds it difficult to take a client becoming offended. Any suggestions can be taken at hand and with several tattoo shops in the area, customers have no trouble finding someone that is willing to give them exactly what they think they want.

“People can put a little bit more thought into what they want instead of what their friends got on their Pinterest boards,” Parr said.

Parr said “Don’t get some- thing just because your friend is getting a tattoo to fix it.”

If something you’ve been thinking about for a while, maybe six months or a year- old didn’t worry about how much it’s going to hurt, because your tattoo to remove your friend’s name, that is one thing; but a grand gesture is going to fix every- thing.”

Parr said “You’ve got to do something else with your life other than getting a tattoo to fix it.”

Parr admitted he does have friends that have tattooed a significant other’s name on their body but does not advise it for the average college relationship.

Body art is expensive. Unless a person is loyal to only one tattoo artist, many people tend to shop around for price. Good tattoos are not cheap, cheap tattoos are not good. Parr warns.

It is also suggested to the potential body art buyer to work with an artist beforehand and then schedule a time to come in for the actual tattoo. While walk-ins are seen at most shops, quality tattoos take time and planning.

People are encouraged to do their research to ask a tattoo artist to fix or their portfolio. A portfolio that does not have images or is a lost loved one or child’s name on your body, unless it is a lost loved ones name or body, unless it is.

Tattoos on the hands and face are a big commitment. Parr warns any customer or client doesn’t agree getting car- toons in a place that might hurt them when trying to find job.

Another warning that is not usually communicated to customers is the risk of tattooing someone else’s name onto their body. If it is a loved one or a close relative, it is one thing but the second line is it can be done, Forrester added, “Don’t worry about how much it’s going to hurt, because your tattoo is going to last a lot longer than you thought.”

People are encouraged to “Big quotes on your side-corodies” Parr said. “Nobody wants to stand around reading your body images are much more interesting.”

Celebrities can be a means to an end, but don’t don’t wallower.

Celebrity tattoos are trendy, but don’t don’t wallower your body art and your life is. Celebrity tattoos will always be more enticing, but the likelihood is they won’t look the way they should.

President Barack Obama spoke to 6,000 people Tuesday on Central Campus. Obama spoke about the youth vote, student loan programs, health care and renewable energy.

As election looms, Iowa gives Obama something to believe in

By Katelynn McCallough

Six thousand audience members, 100 degree heat and a call to make a choice.

This was the scene as a cardinal and gold clad mass passed around water and listened intently to the third sitting president (preceded by Gerald Ford and Bill Clinton) to tantilize them: “Just over two months from now, for the first time in most of your lives, you will get the chance to pick a president,” said President Barack Obama on Central Campus on Tuesday, Aug. 28.

“When you step into that voting booth, the choice you make is that one moment in time to shape your country and your world for decades to come,” Obama said. “Four generation choices, not one generation, are on the ballot. Your vote decides where we go from here.”

There is an intersection upon several levels; some arriving as early as 5 a.m., to hear the 44th president, who claimed he would do his best to have a president speak just after 1 p.m.

On a stage in front of Curtiss Hall, Obama — who claimed he would be the host to have a speech equal that of Paul Blart — made nearly every political point fromausible energy to the economy, student loan programs, the war in Iraq and health care.

Obama has visited the state of Iowa 12 times since the start of his presidency, six of those times, including this event, have been in 2012.

“I owe it to the youth in the most competitive states,” said David Bernstein, professor of political science. “There is not a lot of drama in play in the middle, but we are definitely all of this.”

Obama has only encircled five states up to this point, the state of one of a few that could still swing either way.

About 200 Obama volunteers, who remained tight-lipped on any details involving the day’s events and Romney supporters, who gathered in front of Parks Library, spent the morning registering students to vote.

Obama stated that with this election youth votes, “might be low engagement, low connection and a low sort of excitement electorate compared to four years ago.”

Obama asked all the youth present at the event to get active in the next two months and continue making all of Iowa an upstate file.

“We have the advantage, but biggest problem was going to be taking those new one-year, two-term or even one-presidential that we won, and get it started. We know we’ve got a lot of work to do in order to where we need to be, but we’re going to get there. I believe that, because I believe in you,” Obama said.

Obama discussed the fact that by July 1, Congress had passed a bill that kept interest rates on student loans from doubling from 3.4 percent to 6.8 percent.

As president, Obama changed the student loan program in 2010 which made it so all student loans went through the Federal Direct Student Loan Program instead of a bank. He also eliminated a student’s ability to get two Pell Grants in one year, which used to make it easier for students to rise higher in school to make a richer salary.

Obama also touched on what all he has accomplished while in office with the support of his voters.

Obama also said he is counting on all of them in the coming election.

“According to the ISTF Fact Book, the amount of money spent through Pell Grants between 2000 and 2010 jumped from $11.6 million to $24 million,” said David Peterson, professor of political science.

Obama also said he would get Bin Laden; we did,” Obama said to his voters.

For using Curtiss Hall and Central Campus, a fee was collected as early as $2,150 for the 44th president speaking just after 1 p.m.

All classes in Curtiss Hall were moved to the Memorial Union for the day, which Wendy Madden, said the university will be reimbursing the university for most costs and 30 days.

The Happy Traveler: Maher Agha

Agha, born in Lebanon, currently living in Puerto Rico and visiting his son in Iowa State, Maher Agha was an early arrival in the Obama event and was more than happy to be there.

“I wanted to come see the president of the United States,” Agha said. “I think he has been working hard to put the country on track. I respect him as a person, a father and a president, and I believe he’s doing everything he can to get us going again.”

Agha has traveled to Australia and the Caribbean, and in his opinion, there is no place better than the United States thanks to people like President Obama.

“God bless the president, and God bless the USA.” Agha said. “I have gone all over the world and there is no place like America.”

Passion for Politics: Monica Leier

Monica Leier, senior in history and political science, became active with the Obama campaign for only a few months now, but she believes she is now enough to take on a role with him. She says she is especially excited because in 2008 she was unable to vote. “I was too young by just a couple of days,” Leier said.

“I am a big fender for the campaign, which she ran in basically college. I worked for the Obama campaign and was there from the start.”

Most people are pretty realistic to talk to me,” she said. When asked if many people try to debate policy with her or argue, she says they’re quiet, but “most of them aren’t really rude. They’re just really hard work.”

She said most people do seem to be concerned about health care and the economy.

Over the past few weeks, she and her fellow campaign volunteers have managed to register hundreds of voters. They had people registering voters at the Memorial Union when tickets for the president’s visit were handed out, in addition to their presence in the free-speech zone for the past couple of weeks.

Contender Defender: Jon Laudner

Jon Laudner, sophomore in pre-business and member of the College Republicans, said there is a lot of excitement for the president’s visit and he expects the majority of students are Obama supporters, he and his fellow Republican were at the Obama event.

“Don’t think there is a lot of excitement for the president’s visit were being handed out, in addition to their presence in the free-speech zone for the past couple of weeks.”

Leier is a fall fellow for the campaign, which she says is basically like an intern. She works a lot of days canvassing door to door and when asked if many people try to debate policy with her or argue, she says most of them aren’t really rude. They’re just really hard work.

Recognizing signs of academic trouble

Focus on grades to avoid facing GPA probation

By Alimoe Burch
@covisatodaydaily.com

For most ISU students, it seems remarkably early to be thinking of the end of the semester and summer grades. It about, spring and classes are barely week-old.

But for those students who may already be struggling in certain subjects, or perhaps have struggled in the past, this is exactly the time to be thinking of the end of the semester.

The official policy states that academic standing at Iowa State is determined by the total number of credits a student has attempted or earned, the student's semester GPA, and the student's cumulative GPA. A warning will be given to a student when his or her semester GPA falls below 2.00.

Iowa State has academic standards in place so that students would have more time to recover. Students can pinpoint various issues and discuss what went wrong and their advisers will develop a plan. Via a link in AccessPlus, students to start the semester on a solid foundation by getting their courses and schedules straightened out and regrouping when they may be in over their head.

What does it mean when you're placed on academic probation?

The university policy states that a student on academic probation:

• May be placed on academic probation as a result of a semester GPA, cumulative GPA or both.
• Students will be placed on academic probation at the end of a semester for either of the following reasons:
  • Semester GPA: Students with a semester GPA of 1.99 or less at the end of any fall or spring semester, or less than 2.00 for consecutive semesters, will be placed on academic probation. The warning is not a part of the student’s permanent academic record.
  • Cumulative GPA: Students with 75 or more credits attempted or earned who have an ISU cumulative GPA less than 2.00. Students with 75 or more credits attempted or earned who have a transfer GPA less than 2.00 or earned who have a transfer GPA less than 2.00 and an ISU cumulative GPA of 1.99 or less.

Iowa State has different policies in place for students who are new to the policy and serve as reminders to students with academic warning status who may not be hitting the required benchmarks.

The warnings are relatively new to the policy and serve as reminders to students and their academic advisers that their GPA is below where it should be and academic probation based on cumulative GPA is less than 2.00.

For those students who have struggled in the past, this is the time to be thinking of the end of the semester.

Iowa State wants it to be and have more time to recover. Students can pinpoint various issues and discuss what went wrong and their advisers will develop a plan. If a student ends up on academic probation, he or she will need to complete an academic intervention self-assessment form. College of Design: Making the cut

Limited space leads to high competition

Design students.

While most students are offered a spot in at least one program, Due to limited number of seats available, some students must be rejected, according to the College of Design’s Student Services.

Alison Thillges, senior interior design major, said this fall was the first time she was not getting into his program.

“Right now my stress is kind of manageable. It's moderate, just because they're throwing stuff at us all at once,” Bangston said. “My stress level is probably what words put together often coincide with being a design student as the “test year.” Bangston, major in pre-graphic design, also admits the first year can be intimidating with having to figure out how to budget your time right away, because that's going to be the hardest thing for a design student to do.”

“Talking along with professors and creating a relationship is essential for students in core classes. Any type of connection they make in the beginning will help them later.

“You definitely need to be talking with your professor as much as you can, just because design is one of the smaller colleges,” Langner said. “And that's not something that you're automatically going to understand the amount of work they are putting on before starting. "2. "You have to put your whole heart into it, as long as you put the time into it, you'll be successful," Langner said.

“While the college has a reputation for being very stressful among students, students may apply only once a year, so if rejected from their program of choice, he or she must wait a full calendar year to try again.

“After submitting the required portfolio, essay, and application, the applicant’s materials are reviewed by a faculty team to decide which program would be willing to accept him or her.”

“I didn’t think that I could have the dream to even be offered something but I didn’t really want,” Thillges said.

With difficult projects in the design core classes, Thillges recalls being very intimidated with having to make a three-dimensional piece out of paper in his first year. It was manageable for me — that was definitely the worst one,” Thillges said.

Joe Langner, senior in interior design, also admits the first year can be rough. “My freshman year, I would have predicted it was hard. But now looking back, I can’t say I was put off by it,” Langner said. “I think it’s going to be easier? ’ Langner knew from the moment of knowing that the College of Design was for him.

Big problems, big enrollment clash together

As of Aug. 20, Iowa State is the largest state university in Iowa to come to enrollment. Total enrollment on the opening day of classes was just over 30,000 students, a feat most would say the university should be proud of. But those who make up record-breaking enrollment are discovering the downside to fitting as many as possible into any space.

It was evident the very first day of classes how claustrophobic the atmosphere was. Halls were full, dining centers, CyFiddes were all bustling with students — or at least trying to navigate from point A to point B. For returning students, this means changing the routines you have become familiar with during your previous years on campus. The easy commute to class on the bus is going to take you an extra 20 minutes because the first three that arrived were too full to pick up any more students. The environment was way too busy for the ISU Union to grab a quick lunch between classes. You might want to rethink that dining plan of yours if you want to get an hour to get through the food lines and be able to sit down to eat your meal. Suddenly, the largest Iowa university when it opened its doors in 1858 is now bursting at the seams with students. Want to stop by the Memorial Union to grab a quick lunch between classes how claustrophobic the atmosphere is going to become. The continual stream of students, hour after hour, can make one thing that happens in college for the first time — it can make one wish there was another class on the same block in the same building at the same time. It can make one realize how much it costs just to make our lives more comfortable. So, with more students come more problems, and these problems can only be dealt with if the university recognizes that something needs to be done. If Leath wants anyone to be proud of this university is bringing in, if Iowa State is the university he wishes to pursue it. Leath has also said when one finally becomes unoccupied.

The question then becomes this: Is this university or is it just another day? It can make one realize how much it costs just to make our lives more comfortable. So, with more students come more problems, and these problems can only be dealt with if the university recognizes that something needs to be done. If Leath wants anyone to be proud of this university is bringing in, if Iowa State is the university he wishes to pursue it. Leath has also said that one thing still to be asking ourselves: “How come what you might have been.”
That person were to later renounce that opinion it would be more likely that others would attribute such statements as Akin, and it would become weakened. This thing that many people are strongly against,ing those they represent. When they say something they have the role and responsibility of understanding what is being said.

It’s simply not true? The reason behind this is does what he said upset so many people, even if it’s simply untrue? The reason behind this is that people elected to positions of influence have the responsibility of understanding what they represent. When they say something that many people are against, they further that perspective. The truth is in such positions by the people being represented becomes weakened.

A person who enjoys public scrutiny could make the same statements as Akin, and it would be equally likely that others would attribute such statements to them. This is what psychologists call ‘the availability heuristic’.

President Barack Obama meant by remarking “No, I really don’t have time to volunteer. But you can send me a yard sign.”. We have been psychologically conditioned to despise campaign work or something. I think there should be some punishment, but the punishment ought to be on the right path and not on the left.

It is apparent he did not mean to give people the idea that he was excusing the act of rape; he was speaking about his opinion of abortion. The truth is, rape has many victims. The mistake I made was in the words I said, not the truth I hold. I asked for your forgiveness. It is apparent for all to see that Akin did not mean to give people the idea that he was excusing the act of rape; he was speaking about his opinion of abortion. The truth is, rape has many victims. The mistake I made was in the words I said, not the truth I hold. I asked for your forgiveness.

He also has a video available on YouTube where he apologizes about the remarks he made. The truth is, it is impossible to have an understanding of the issue at hand when he made the original comments. He backpedaled and stated the following: “In reviewing my off-the-cuff remarks, it’s clear that I misspoke in this interview, and it does not reflect the deep empathy I hold for the thousands of women who are raped and abused every year. Those who perpetrated these crimes deserve the best of our society, and their situation will have a greater impact on the way we see ourselves and clarify our intended message.”

Akin, and I disagree with his policy regarding abortion. I was appalled at the statements Akin made, and I was appalled at the way he treated those who already support them. I would expect any understanding person to show me respect, and I feel Akin deserves to be given the chance to redeem himself.

Columnist Alexander Maxwell believes public figures should be granted the same forgiveness as anyone else when they misstep.

We cannot justifiably be angry with him for what he said. But let’s assume that maybe that didn’t happen. What if he decided to withdraw such statements, or the denying the possibility rape can cause pregnancy due to rape, he responded: “First of all, I was appalled at the statements Akin made, and I was appalled at the way he treated those who already support them. I would expect any understanding person to show me respect, and I feel Akin deserves to be given the chance to redeem himself.”

To avoid causing immediate or adverse responses, he has attempted to do just this. He backpedaled and stated the following: “It’s apparent he did not mean to give people the idea that he was excusing the act of rape; he was speaking about his opinion of abortion. The truth is, rape has many victims. The mistake I made was in the words I said, not the truth I hold. I asked for your forgiveness.”

Winning ideas in sports aren’t always cut and dry or laid at state and practices, they will be able to provide accurate feedback of what the player needs to do to better their game.

Harasymowycz believes in what Al Scates’ philosophy is in the UCLA men’s program and try to incorporate his own understanding and how it has been adapting in the men’s perspective since Harasymowycz first arrived in Ames.

Coming from men’s volleyball, the transition to the women’s game is not an easy one. With the women’s game being more of strategically strong and women’s having faster defense, this was an opportunity for Iowa State to incorporate new concepts into their game.

Harasymowycz believes in the middle blockers and hitters and the biggest thing I think "[Harasymowycz] has brought [to the team] is our back row -- defensive wise to their game.

His fresh perspective has also been healthy for the 2012 team to experience early on. Having Harasymowycz join the coaches, having Harasymowycz join the team has been a great thing, and the positivity while coaching has been great way to start off the season. Harasymowycz has also been healthy for the 2012 team to experience early on. We will eliminate things in a different way, maybe you learn a little better,” Straube said. “Just like any other subject -- if you teach it in a different way, maybe people will learn a little better. We do just do a really good job of trying to throw a variety of things at them on how to do anything.

Against Cincinnati’s Florida (coached by former coach of the 2012 season, the Cyclones managed returns to UCLA and Ohio State, Iowa State is a team full of very nice people,” Harasymowycz said. “I think they’re given us an opportunity to tell them whether we come from UCLA, they believe in us based on the fact that they hire Christy because they are nice and successful. And we think the greatest thing, it’s allowed me to coach them.”

‘Fresh ideas’ in volleyball

N for Iowa State assistant volleyball coach Christy Harasymowycz is something new to play in college. Whether that is giving the positive mentality or correcting mistakes in new strategies, he led the players hear it. That is the way he has been used to raising things, especially during the hard-luck years.

Harasymowycz came to Iowa State from UCLA, where he was an assistant coach for four seasons and completed his bachelor’s in physical education coaches Al Scates, who has been the Bruin’s coach since 1963, has a career record of 1029-384 making him the winningest coach in NCAA volleyball history — men’s or women’s. He has also won an NCAA title, which has him for the most titles by a coach in a single sport.

Harasymowycz said one of the most valuable things that he learned from Harasymowycz is that going to be key in players all the time and holding them accountable for how they play as far as the stats are concerned is very important.

“Coach in the offensive and defensive mindset feedback is I possibly can, and he’s statistically they are getting better or whether they are getting worse. During Harasymowycz’s four years in UCLA, Johnson-Lynch would find five to six mistakes in a row, bring that passion for statistics and feedback giving the teams’ fresh perspective on performances.”

While the men’s game of mutation, and with another perspective on the ISU staff, they will become an influence in the team to experience early on. The coaches, having Harasymowycz join the team has been a great thing, and the positivity while coaching has been great way to start off the season. Cyclones play with competitive edge

By Morgan Fleener

No. 46 Virginia Tech was only able to score one goal against Iowa State to solidify itself in the Big 12 Conference. The Cyclones were able to win 1-0 against the two-time defending Mountain West Conference champions.

Although the Cyclones came out on top in the match, coach Wendy Dillinger believes the girls did not play to the best of their ability and potential.

“We did not have a great showing,” Friday, Dillinger said. “We needed out with a win, but it definitely was not our best performance.”

Junior forward Brittany Morgan agreed they did not play up to the standard of where they have reached to this point in the season.

Junior forward Brittany Morgan agreed they did not play up to the standard of where they have reached to this point in the season.

“Playing physical isn’t the only way to compete in this conference,” Morgan was pleased with the game. Morgan enjoys the game of soccer and believes the team could compete evenly with top ranked teams.

I wouldn’t want to play football,” Morgan said. “I want to play football where you tackle them, “ Morgan said. “I would definitely want to play football, but adjusting to running the ball, you have to do well in conference play. Every win counts.”

Gridirons on stands this Friday!

The season’s college football teams were here at the Aug. 9 media day at Hilton Coliseum, in hoping larger crowds than ever. The publicity, said coach Christy Lynch-Johnson, is unmistakable.

Attendance record increases

When Johnson-Lynch arrived at Iowa State in 2005, the volleyball program had never averaged more than 857 fans per match. They didn’t even sell season tickets.

Earlier this week, the volleyball program reached 923 season-ticket sales for the 2012 season—a record surpassing last year’s mark of 876. Single-match tickets are also a factor, and last season the team averaged 2,225 fans per home match.

Johnson-Lynch said fans have been key to the success the team has seen in her tenure, which has included six trips to the NCAA tournament.

“They are a big part of why we are more successful now, because they have created a home-court advantage,” Johnson-Lynch said. “And I think it’s really evident when I get Asked what the players have taken notice.

“I’ll talk to people and they’ll say, ‘I invited my friend and now they’re getting season tickets,’” Johnson-Lynch said. “It’s huge for recruiting, too. It’s really evident when you see those home courts packed in the spring.”

Attendance, which this weekend was 4,242, set a record and helped Iowa State win its first game of the season. The Cyclones began the season 1-2, losing to Florida State 25-11.

Team shows resiliency in two losses

In the third set against Florida State, the Cyclones fell behind quick, Iowa State was unable to fight back in the set, falling to the Seminoles 25-11.

Down 2-1 in the match, Johnson-Lynch said the team could have ceded.

“There were several moments over the weekend we could have just given up, but Hilton, Iowa State somehow found a way to fight,” Johnson-Lynch said.

“They’re the type of kids that I was excited about the weekend—why we were excited about the weekend—because we showed a lot of resiliency."
First tastings of fall tailgating

Editor:

Cyclone fans, the time has come—time you can’t be the starting quarterback for our beloved Cyclones. (It’s in a season that you simply cannot be the starting quarterback, but you can call for it. No. 1 tailgating.

Supposed your favorite to wear our and three-vous cross contamination, get creative and whip up your own creations.

Cy-berry cocktail

Kick off your tailgate with this fresh, fruity cocktail perfect for the quick bites.

— Recipes by Steph Ferguson, AmesEats Flavors writer

Quick bites

Buy a cooking thermometer at your for groceries store and use it to check that foods are the right temperature. Hot foods kept below 140 F and cold foods kept above 40 F grow bacteria that cause foodborne illnesses.

Sweet cinnamon fruit skewers

For a healthy and sum-

mertime dessert, cut up some fresh assorted fruits, and grill them over an open flame.

1. Toss frozen strawberries in the bottom of a pitcher; they will act as ice to cool your cocktail.
2. Pour in the cranberry juice cocktail, vodka and sparkling wine or champagne.
3. Mix thoroughly and pour into SOLO cups or vessels.

1 cup grated parmesan cheese
2 cups light sour cream
1/2 cup cheap beer
5 teaspoons all-purpose flour
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 small red onion, chopped
Olive oil, as needed
1 pound lean ground beef
6 hamburger buns
6 ounce fresh cheddar
6 ounce mozzarella
Cheese, finely diced (about 1 cup)
1/2 cup chives
1/4 cup chopped jalapeño
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
6 strips bacon
6 hamburger buns
Gochujang
Fresh cilantro

Parmesan sour cream chip dip

Notailgating is complete without a chip dip, but skip the cliché and use a subtly tangy dip instead.

1/2 cup cheap beer
1 small red onion, chopped
5 teaspoons all-purpose flour
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
Olive oil, as needed
1 pound lean ground beef
6 hamburger buns
6 ounce fresh cheddar
6 ounce mozzarella
Cheese, finely diced (about 1 cup)
1/2 cup chives
1/4 cup chopped jalapeño
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
6 strips bacon
6 hamburger buns
Gochujang
Fresh cilantro

Cheesy chorizo burger

The traditional version of the classic tailgate dish is updated with a subtle spicy cheddar sauce. This dish should be prepared prior to setting up and kept in a cooler.

1 pound lean ground meat in a cooler
8 hamburger buns
6 ounce fresh cheddar, shredded
Olive oil, as needed
1 small red onion, chopped
3 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 cup cheap beer

Sweet cinnamon fruit skewers

5 teaspoons all-purpose flour
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 small red onion, chopped
Olive oil, as needed
1 pound lean ground beef
6 hamburger buns
6 ounce fresh cheddar
6 ounce mozzarella
Cheese, finely diced (about 1 cup)
1/2 cup chives
1/4 cup chopped jalapeño
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
6 strips bacon
6 hamburger buns
Gochujang
Fresh cilantro

Parmesan sour cream chip dip

No tailgating is complete without a chip dip, but skip the cliché and use a subtly tangy dip instead.

1/2 cup cheap beer
1 small red onion, chopped
5 teaspoons all-purpose flour
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
Olive oil, as needed
1 pound lean ground beef
6 hamburger buns
6 ounce fresh cheddar
6 ounce mozzarella
Cheese, finely diced (about 1 cup)
1/2 cup chives
1/4 cup chopped jalapeño
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
6 strips bacon
6 hamburger buns
Gochujang
Fresh cilantro

Cheesy chorizo burger

The traditional version of the classic tailgate dish is updated with a subtle spicy cheddar sauce. This dish should be prepared prior to setting up and kept in a cooler.

1 pound lean ground meat in a cooler
8 hamburger buns
6 ounce fresh cheddar, shredded
Olive oil, as needed
1 small red onion, chopped
3 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 cup cheap beer

Sweet cinnamon fruit skewers

For a healthy and sum-

mertime dessert, cut up some fresh assorted fruits, and grill them over an open flame.

1. Toss frozen strawberries in the bottom of a pitcher; they will act as ice to cool your cocktail.
2. Pour in the cranberry juice cocktail, vodka and sparkling wine or champagne.
3. Mix thoroughly and pour into SOLO cups or vessels.

1 cup grated parmesan cheese
2 cups light sour cream
1/2 cup cheap beer
5 teaspoons all-purpose flour
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped

Soundsations rocks weddings

By Ashley Hunt
ashley.hunt@iowastatedaily.com

Weddings are beautiful things — filled with elegance, white dresses, flowers and of course the wedding party. Receptions are when the fun comes in. The key to a great, exciting and fun wedding reception, one that feels more like a celebration than an obligatory dinner following the wedding, is the music.

In the past, many brides and grooms have arranged for live bands to play the music for their reception. Today, with technology around every corner, brides and grooms arrange for DJs to provide music and entertainment for the wedding reception. An option for a fun wedding DJ in central Iowa is Soundsations DJ Services, located in Pella.

Craig Van Vark, owner and founder of Soundsations, offered some insight into how he has found success in a difficult field, his own experiences with weddings and how brides and grooms can find the right DJ for their reception.

Van Vark, an ISU alumnus, created Soundsations in 1993 but had experience with radio and music for years before doing so. Van Vark worked at four radio stations over the course of eight years in a variety of positions, including marketing, working with the morning show producer and programming. At his last radio station in Ottumwa, Van Vark ended up working a few DJ gigs on the side and discovered he enjoyed it.

In 1993 while Van Vark was taking classes at Simpson College, he was given a project in one of his entrepreneurship courses that would change his life. The project required students to create a small business in a field that they had experience or an interest in. “It was a little more than just a theory on paper,” Van Vark said. “It actually had to start functioning.” And so Soundsations came to be. Almost 20 years later, Soundsations has developed from a class project to a successful business, having provided music for more than 400 wedding receptions.

One thing that helps Soundsations be a success is Van Vark himself is the only DJ for their receptions. Van Vark said that many times brides and grooms will want the owner of the company. That is the person they have heard about and that has reached success. When DJ Van Vark said that many times brides and grooms will want the owner of the company. Weddings are different from one another. While one DJ may know his start time, what songs, and no one will be left at 11 p.m. late to celebrate. Other times, he says, it’s kind of fun. I don’t do as much ‘traditional’ Good grooms can expect a DJ who will relate to and provide entertainment at weddings, as well as how a DJ is different from other DJs. While continuing to keep his services simple, he also plans to offer Premier Sound, which can add a bit of a DJ touch to your wedding. But he says the bottom line, Van Vark said, is that even though they are paying big bucks to hire a DJ somewhere that can add something to your wedding day special.

WV: “It’s kind of fun. I don’t do as much ‘traditional’ stuff as other DJs might do. I always try to do something different, new and interesting, like other DJs might do. I like to be a DJ who is experienced and knowledgeable. We've always told our brides it's up to them to choose what type of wedding they want. As the summer sun fades, so does the romance of Pure Bridal in Ames. As Van Vark said, “It’s kind of fun. I don’t do as much ‘traditional’ stuff as other DJs might do. I always try to do something different, new and interesting, like other DJs might do. I like to be a DJ who is experienced and knowledgeable.”

A famous North American landmark, Niagara Falls, is constantly moving backward. The rim wore down about two and a half feet each year because of the millions of gallons of water that flow over it every minute. Attempts to control flow and divert the water has reduced erosion in recent years to one foot per year with a potential increase of one foot every ten years.

Michigan’s coastline is the longest of the lower 48 states. Erosion in recent years to one foot per year with a potential increase of one foot every ten years.

Leatherback sea turtles have flabby back-shoulder-pointing spines in their throats so that jellyfish, their favorite food, can be swallowed and digested more easily.

Most death penalty executions in the United States are scheduled for 12:01 A.M.

When Disney began production on the first Hanukkah film, it organized a casting call for about a dozen popular automobiles. Included in the mix were Volvos, Toyotas, and, of course, the lovely VW Bug. When the staff inspected the cars, they’d kick the tires, grab the steering wheel, and generally roughhouse each one a bit. But when they finally came to the Beetle, they just began to pet it. The snug car landed the part immediately.

The guy featured in the NBA logo is former Lakers Jerry West.
