By Emily Eppens
Ames, ISU PD to take over rooftop for charity

The governors running for president. The governors are not doing pretty well. Donald Trump appears to have taken a lot of potential supporters away from Perry, along with the long list of other candidates. The governors are not doing pretty well. Donald Trump appears to have taken a lot of potential supporters away from Perry, along with the long list of other candidates. The governors are not doing pretty well. Donald Trump appears to have taken a lot of potential supporters away from Perry, along with the long list of other candidates.

As Republican presidential candidates gathered in California on Thursday, CNN’s undercard debate was missing one familiar face scheduled to be on stage among the former or near-candidate for Rick Perry. Perry, the former Texas governor, suspended his presidential campaign last Friday after low poll numbers and more of his campaign being tight on cash, despite having the backing of a Super PAC with millionaire cash, despite having the backing of a Super PAC with millionaire cash.
Police Blotter

- John Chiokhin, 19, of 140 Lynch Avenue, Ames, was cited for underage possession of alcohol at Gable Lane and Gray Avenue (reported at 5:37 a.m.).
- Nicole Leitner, 18, of 306 Wilrose Hall, Ames, was cited for underage possession of alcohol at Sunset and Gray Avenue (reported at 4:57 p.m.).
- A student was arrested and charged with participating in a felony at 119 Stanton Avenue (reported at 2:03 a.m.).

Education

- After last weekend’s hectic day of politics in Ames at the 36-hour Iowa Caucus (report at 11:55 a.m.), future presidential candidates will be back in Iowa this weekend to campaign.
- The Faith and Freedom Coalition will host its 13th Annual Fall Family Dinner on Saturday at the Iowa State Fairgrounds in Des Moines. Doors open at 4:30 p.m., dinner will be served at 5:30 p.m. and the program begins at 6:30 p.m.
- Several Republican candidates have confirmed they will attend the event, including businessman Donald Trump, Texas Sen. Ted Cruz, South Carolina Sen. Lindsey Graham, former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal, former Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Corbett, former New York Gov. George Pataki and Wyoming Gov. Scott Walker. All eyes will be on Trump following his performance in Wednesday night’s debate and his continuing dominance in polls. Many will also be watching Walker, who was once considered a possible third-party candidate. Walker has been polling. Walker due to the top following a passionate speech at Janes’ Iowa Freedom Summit. "He’s a double-digit poll number has been reduced to single digits since Trump’s entrance," she said. "Several candidates will need a big blowstop at the state."
- Graham will appear in Ames on Saturday. Graham and Trump are to make multiple speeches at an event at Urbandale High School, take part in a government class invited by Urbandale High School science students. Follow the Daily’s coverage of Saturday’s event on our website, and follow our twitter, facebook, and newsletter links for more updates. The basketball team will be back in Iowa this weekend to campaign."

Objectives

- The event will also feature a discussion of the marriage of the Baileys, the concept of complete physical activity, improve safety and better classroom environment.
- The event will also feature yoga, zumba and scavenger hunts. The event will be free and no reservations will be necessary for biking or socializing.
- The event will also feature yoga, zumba and scavenger hunts throughout the afternoon.
- The event will also feature yoga, zumba and scavenger hunts throughout the afternoon.
- The event will also feature yoga, zumba and scavenger hunts throughout the afternoon.

Healthcare

- Republicans gather in central Iowa

Weather

- The second candidate for the 13th Student Senate director position will be on campus on Thursday night to introduce what she said on the website.

Special Olympics

- The Student Senate has confirmed that it will hold a special event to introduce her decision to the student body.

Politics

- The second candidate for the Father Student Senate director position will be on campus on Thursday night to introduce what she said on the website.

Healthcare

- The second candidate for the Father Student Senate director position will be on campus on Thursday night to introduce what she said on the website.

Sports

- The second candidate for the Father Student Senate director position will be on campus on Thursday night to introduce what she said on the website.

Corrections

- The Iowa State Daily welcomes comments and suggestions on material and features that warrant correction. To submit a correction, please contact our editor at 515-294-8107 or e-mail at editor@iowastatedaily.com.
Students in the College of Business will start planning for its annual Business Week on Wednesday. The week will feature a series of workshops and networking events, and increasing opportunities will also be provided for students to attend.

David Spalding, dean of the College of Business, encourages all business students to attend the Business Week events.

“This is really an opportunity to help our students focus on the future and help them think about what happens after Iowa State,” Spalding said. “It’s a great reminder that college isn’t just about getting papers done, it’s about developing sets of skills that are important in the areas of study, so you’ll be supported in the areas students want to work in.”

The majority of presentations will provide more intricate networking opportunities than the culminating career fair, and will be given by industry professionals.

Michael Bonima, senior facet of a career team dealing with small student businesses, said the career fair is about developing a set of skills that will help alumni in their careers. “We have a career fair that is fun and that is great,” Business said. “It allows former students and networking opportunities. We also want to make sure that whatever it takes to build their image, build their character and get to know each other.”

Spalding said the internships and exper- iences gained from internship programs can help students make personal decisions. “I’ve seen people who have to make the field they’re going to be in,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services. “We’ve come up with a variety of events this year. The majority of presentations will provide more intricate networking opportunities than the culminating career fair, and will be given by industry professionals.”

“I think students need to get involved in Business Week because it’s a great way to see what it means to be a business student,” said David Jiles, director of administration in the College of Business. “This is really an opportunity to help our students focus on the future and help them think about what happens after Iowa State,” Spalding said. “It’s a great reminder that college isn’t just about getting papers done, it’s about developing sets of skills that are important in the areas of study, so you’ll be supported in the areas students want to work in.”

Spalding said those opportunities are going to be either life-changing or life-affirming for you.”

Business Week had been entirely stu- dent-organized in past years, but this year a collaborative team of student and staff members are helping organize a more extensive set of events this year.

“We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services. “We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers.”

“We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services.

Students in the College of Business will start planning for its annual Business Week on Wednesday. The week will feature a series of workshops and networking events, and increasing opportunities will also be provided for students to attend.

David Spalding, dean of the College of Business, encourages all business students to attend the Business Week events.

“This is really an opportunity to help our students focus on the future and help them think about what happens after Iowa State,” Spalding said. “It’s a great reminder that college isn’t just about getting papers done, it’s about developing sets of skills that are important in the areas of study, so you’ll be supported in the areas students want to work in.”

The majority of presentations will provide more intricate networking opportunities than the culminating career fair, and will be given by industry professionals.

Michael Bonima, senior facet of a career team dealing with small student businesses, said the career fair is about developing a set of skills that will help alumni in their careers. “We have a career fair that is fun and that is great,” Business said. “It allows former students and networking opportunities. We also want to make sure that whatever it takes to build their image, build their character and get to know each other.”

Spalding said the internships and exper- iences gained from internship programs can help students make personal decisions. “I’ve seen people who have to make the field they’re going to be in,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services. “We’ve come up with a variety of events this year. The majority of presentations will provide more intricate networking opportunities than the culminating career fair, and will be given by industry professionals.”

“I think students need to get involved in Business Week because it’s a great way to see what it means to be a business student,” said David Jiles, director of administration in the College of Business. “This is really an opportunity to help our students focus on the future and help them think about what happens after Iowa State,” Spalding said. “It’s a great reminder that college isn’t just about getting papers done, it’s about developing sets of skills that are important in the areas of study, so you’ll be supported in the areas students want to work in.”

Spalding said those opportunities are going to be either life-changing or life-affirming for you.”

Business Week had been entirely stu- dent-organized in past years, but this year a collaborative team of student and staff members are helping organize a more extensive set of events this year.

“We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services. “We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers.”

“We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services. “We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers.”

“We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers,” said Michele Appelgate, director of Business career services. “We’ve come up with a variety of events that will help food students and give them some real skills that will help them in their careers.”
There will be a total of 12 different displays and hall will include international student organizations such as the Association of Malaysian Students at Iowa State, Antakya and the Ontan Students Association. All booths will have unique features such as costumes,ダンス, and table settings.

Other organizations participating in the expo include ISU Outreach, the Ames Public Library and Worldly Youth.

Another goal of the Peace Walk is to raise funds for the different programs the organization has to offer, such as the VIP program and the world learning participant training program. Students are encouraged to provide various journal workshop programs.

Human Max Vol, senior in journalism, said about the event, “You sort of learn about the passion of another. It's a lot easier to advance, to transform. The your financial situation, but you've been promised. Don't impossible only took a little longer. Don't provide information. Cash could threaten assumptions. Threatens deeper and deeper. Make a statement. Your work is all been promised. Use what you've been told. Don't do what you have to do. It's easier to win the foothills or mountains. Launch new projects. Take a hike in the foothills or mountains. Increase your security. Stay home keep you active and hopping. The more we can express ourselves, the more we can learn about each other, the better we can understand each other,” Christensen said.

A Electoral College, sometimes referred to as the unit ballot or the sovereign state system, is a component of presidential electoral systems in countries that choose their president through a system known as the electoral college. The College is a key component of the United States presidential election process, and is also used in other countries, such as the United Kingdom and Canada.

The electoral college was adopted by the Congress of the United States as part of the ratification of the United States Constitution in 1788. It is a system of political representation in the United States, in which a state is represented by a number of electors equal to the number of members of its House of Representatives and Senate. The total number of electors in the United States is 538, representing all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The electoral college is used to determine the president and vice president of the United States. The president is the candidate who receives the most electoral votes, while the vice president is the candidate who receives the second-highest number of electoral votes.

The electoral college was adopted by the Congress of the United States as part of the ratification of the United States Constitution in 1788. It is a system of political representation in the United States, in which a state is represented by a number of electors equal to the number of members of its House of Representatives and Senate. The total number of electors in the United States is 538, representing all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The electoral college is used to determine the president and vice president of the United States. The president is the candidate who receives the most electoral votes, while the vice president is the candidate who receives the second-highest number of electoral votes.
Part-time jobs provide many benefits. But it's not only about the money; being flexible and adapting to new work environments can be the highlight of a part-time job. If we're considering getting a part-time job, it's important to assess your own needs and workloads. Different people can handle different work environments. Don't be afraid of trying new things, especially if they are related to your future career aspirations. A well-prepared resume and a solid networking strategy can also help you stand out from the crowd. Remember, part-time jobs do provide many benefits; it's just about using them wisely.
By Luke Manderfeld
@iowastatedaily.com

The Iowa State football team played its first road game of the season this weekend, loss- ing to Toledo 19-37. The Cyclones are now 1-1 for the season after their win over Northern Iowa this past weekend.

Although the team is only one game into the season, they realize they will need to improve if they want to perform well throughout the rest of the season.

Iowa State has played three against in-state rivals within its first two games of the season. One win was against Iowa State's in-state rival Drake and the other was against the University of Northern Iowa. Saturday's loss to Toledo was the Cyclones' first road loss.

The Cyclones have a chance to make a statement on the road again next weekend when they travel to play Northern Illinois.

By Chris Wolff
@iowastatedaily.com

The Iowa State-Drake rivalry started back in 2010, but the Cedar Falls native is hungry to prove that they can play with the Cyclones.

Minatta said, "It's back to reality, and [they] need to put in the necessary work with the same determination and confidence level that we did with [Pepperdine] to prove who we are as a team, and that we are capable of being a quality team in the Big 12."
Cyclones aim to repeat historic Husker win
By Garrett Krueger
@iowastatedaily.com

The last time the Ne-braska Cyclones traveled to Hilton Coliseum to play a regular season matchup against the 25-9 Nebraska Cornhuskers, it was September 18, 2004. The Cornhuskers were ranked No. 11 in the nation at the time and the end result of the match wound up as 3-0 in ISU history.

The Cyclones pulled off the biggest win in program history. It was one of the cru- cial games of my career and we were a freshman who was a freshman at the time.

Nebraska came into the match as a four-time national champion and the top-ranked team in the Big 12. At the end of the match, Iowa State pulled off the biggest win in program history.

“Everybody’s trying to find their rhythm and what you’re going to get out of this,” said junior Joel Kelm.

“Just do your best. Everybody’s trying to find out their roles. I heard they are a [Division] II team, so it’ll still be a good test; we still got to come out. We got a lot of good players and we have a good test. Every time when we play or step on the court against the Cornhuskers it’s a little bit of pressure because we know how good they are. So far this season, Nebraska is averaging a 31-4 record and ranked eighth in the nation. So this is a huge challenge for the Cyclones, but I’m very excited for this game. We need to step up and play well and come out with a win. We want to show Nebraska and the rest of the nation that we can compete with them.”

The last time Nebraska and Iowa State met, Iowa State was hitting well, having won three straight matches including a sweep at Hilton Coliseum. The Cornhuskers are currently ranked fourth in the nation.

“Last time we played Nebraska, neither one was hitting well,” said Johnson-Lynch.

When the Cyclones last played the Cornhuskers at Hilton, they hit Nebraska with 15 kills and 50 errors. During this year’s match, the Cornhuskers’ offensive ability is expected to produce better results. So far this season, Nebraska is hitting .296 and averaging 11.9 kills per set.

“We need to play well against Nebraska and step up as a team. Everybody needs to do their job.”

“Last time we played Nebraska, neither one was hitting well,” said Johnson-Lynch.

When the Cyclones last played the Cornhuskers at Hilton, they hit Nebraska with 15 kills and 50 errors. During this year’s match, the Cornhuskers’ offensive ability is expected to produce better results. So far this season, Nebraska is hitting .296 and averaging 11.9 kills per set.

“The last time the Nebraska Cornhuskers hit the ball during Iowa State’s loss to Nebraska in 2014. The Cyclones play the Huskers at 4 p.m. Saturday in Ames.

The Cyclones have held opponents to a .186 attacking percentage and 11.9 kills per set this season. "Our defense has got to be at a whole different level, as Nebraska is a very physical team," Johnson-Lynch said.

"When we played at Nebraska last year in a round-robin format, we were good, but once that happened, it was a little extra motivation this weekend against the top-ranked opponent."

"That game has been one of the biggest that we have played. "It’s always exciting when we get to play against the Cornhuskers."
positions require a commitment for at least a semester. Some students leave and break that commitment and many factors affect the turnover rate for campus jobs at Iowa State.

“We don’t have the exact number of students working, per se,” said Hunt. “But I think the main program manager for the Office of Student Employment, Becky Baldwin, tracks the numbers with the help of the Human Resources office.”

The Office of Student Finance and Aid does keep track of jobs filled because departments are not re-quired to report the number of positions. The number of jobs posted last year was 2,320, 240 of whom were student jobs.

“The number of students is skewed,” Westman said. “That is only the number of jobs posted, which can range anywhere from 1,500 to 3,000, the number of students doing a job at any time.”

This is the case with departments like ISU Dining, which have a large number of student positions.

ISU Dining is the largest student employment program on campus. In Iowa State has 21,000 students, or about 2,100 staff, so the turnover rate is quite high.

“Student turnover varies widely by location,” Buchanan said. “Dining has a large number of students, so they’re utilizing 20,000 to 25,000 people each semester. They’re going to turn over a lot of people. ISU Dining has a lot of turnover.”

At the beginning of the semester, 20 percent of positions are filled because departments are not required to report the number of positions. The number of jobs posted last year was 2,320, 240 of whom were student jobs.

“We want to create a department to connect students with professional counseling services on campus,” Baldwin said. “Then we can have an easier time connecting them to the health center. That’s where the majority of our students go.”

“Students run everything,” Nichols said. “The students are the ones who have to do the work, they’re the ones who have to worry about the money.”

One of those students is Colton Kennedy, a junior in mechanical engineering. Kennedy has worked for Recreation Services for two years and is a head building supervisor.

“The building supervisor has a lot of different roles,” Kennedy said. “I have to manage the staff, I have to manage the students, I have to manage the rooms, I have to manage the equipment, I have to manage the money.”

“I love being involved with students,” Kennedy said. “I love the atmosphere, the customers, the hours, the money.”

Frank works at the circulation desk, where he sells books, audios, and magazines.

“I love it because he can get the job done in one hour,” said Hunt. “Frank believes the turnover rate is more important than the average.”

“A list of people who have worked here before is a great help,” Hunt said. “The library currently employs 50 students and turnover is the beginning of the semester, especially the spring semester. The library employs at least 200 students per semester. This would put the average turnover rate at about 10 percent.”

“We could say the most common reasons for leaving are graduation, going home for the holidays, family obligations, or in-between jobs,” Hunt said. “It’s easy to do short-term contracts and have those positions filled when necessary.”

The Super Star we’re looking for will possess the following:

• A winning smile, great attitude and customer focused skills.
• Reliable transportation as well as valid license, registration and insurance.
• Sorority & Fraternity
• AA/EOE
• References • Insured & Bonded • 27 Years Experience • Gift Cards Available

Looking for 3-5 days a week? Tips and mileage paid in cash nightly. $250 hiring bonus after 60 days for the first 12

Thursday, Sept. 17, 20158

Helping hands

Heather Cullen, staff writer in the consumer industries, and Bronn Biller, labor with Campus Dining Services, prepare lunchotti poppy seed bread, ham and cheese sandwiches, potato salad, and borscht soup at the new LMS. Photo taken Monday, Sept. 14, 20158. (Photo by Daniel Ladyan)

One of those students is Cullen. Kennedy, in mechanical engineering. Kennedy has worked for Recreation Services for two years and is a head building supervisor.

“I love being involved with students,” Kennedy said. “I love the atmosphere, the customers, the hours, the money.”

Frank works at the circulation desk, where he sells books, audios, and magazines.

“I love it because he can get the job done in one hour,” said Hunt. “Frank believes the turnover rate is more important than the average.”

“We could say the most common reasons for leaving are graduation, going home for the holidays, family obligations, or in-between jobs,” Hunt said. “It’s easy to do short-term contracts and have those positions filled when necessary.”

The Super Star we’re looking for will possess the following:

• A winning smile, great attitude and customer focused skills.
• Reliable transportation as well as valid license, registration and insurance.
• Sorority & Fraternity
• AA/EOE
• References • Insured & Bonded • 27 Years Experience • Gift Cards Available

Looking for 3-5 days a week? Tips and mileage paid in cash nightly. $250 hiring bonus after 60 days for the first 12

Thursday, Sept. 17, 20158

Helping hands

Heather Cullen, staff writer in the consumer industries, and Bronn Biller, labor with Campus Dining Services, prepare lunchotti poppy seed bread, ham and cheese sandwiches, potato salad, and borscht soup at the new LMS. Photo taken Monday, Sept. 14, 20158. (Photo by Daniel Ladyan)