Street-level bombs explode alongside Boston Marathon

MacKenzie Peterman’s first thought wasn’t to leave the scene. Peterman, senior in graphic design, had already finished the 26.2-mile course of the Boston Marathon. She signed up to run, and now a train was headed toward the finish line to clear people out before, she was sure. Janessa Voss, who was running her final marathon at the finish line, had arrived. It was at that time, around 11:45 p.m., that the explosions occurred and just seconds apart over the finish line of the race.

“We were on a train and we got evacuated. People were running there were bodies,” Peterman said, “and we just got out of there as soon as possible.” Janessa, a senior in computer engineering, and her brother Jon was notified from the look like when the blasts went off and were stopped from completing.

“We were so scared and that was to the finish line,” Voss said. Jessica Fellowes’ books required research on the Post-Edwardian period, which she will also talk about during her lecture. They are not about women’s role in the series. The Downton Chronicles, will be based on the PBS show “Downton Abbey,” created by Fellowes’ uncle, Lord Julian Fellowes. The World of Downton Abbey, “will also talk about research on the Post-Edwardian period, which she will also talk about during her lecture. The final book, “The World of Downton Abbey,” and “The Downton Chronicles” will be published Tuesday at 8 a.m. in the Great Hall of the Memo-

A puppy was stolen from U.S. Grant Hall (reported at 7:19 p.m.).

An individual reported an animal explosion a few moments later. Schafbuch explained the majority of the club was walking to the hotel or on the sidewalk when the event occurred. "We probably missed it by around 10 minutes," Booth said.

"We were just excited," said one of the club members. "I didn't realize how I would react when my name showed up, but it was an honor and exciting, but it makes it definitely more exciting," he added.

"We have a lot of kids that have been drafted, and most of them are the kind of kids that do it their way, and they don't necessarily make it a big deal for them, and it's a great moment for them. This is something that is based on work and dedication," Fennelly said.

"We were all bawling. ... We probably missed it by around 10 minutes," Booth said.

"It's tragic because marathons never happen the way we thought it would. That's not to say he wasn't happy. He knows that "any responsible individuals, any responsible group, will find the full truth." Federal authorities have classified the bombings as a domestic act but it is not yet known if they are of domestic or foreign origin.

"It is just an example of something you never expect to happen when you are around. It always will be a little bit more cautious, especially at marathons," Sevcik said.

Iowa State has over 700 clubs and organizations that students can be involved in. Students Helping Rescue Animals is one of those clubs.

The Students Helping Rescue Animals club was founded in 2005 with the mission to help rescue lost or abused animals through volunteer work, fundraising and education.

The club is open to all majors and all interest levels. "I was interested in helping animals, so I joined the club," said Kelly Wagner, senior in dietetics.

Wagner, along with Jackie Myers, senior in Veterinary Medicine, stated that her club involvement has directly contributed to her personal growth.

"The club has helped me in so many ways," Myers said. "I definitely helped me gain leadership experience, and an incredible amount of experience in my interpersonal skills."

Other students also help animals through volunteer work, fundraising and education. "I went to the next club meeting after my first meeting and I just knew I wanted to be a part of the club," Myers said. "It definitely helped me gain leadership experience, and an incredible amount of experience in my interpersonal skills."

Birkeland explained. "During my vet school interview, so many of my answers came from my leadership experience in the club."

Another upcoming event to look for from the Students Helping Rescue Animals club include need based sales. On April 23, all proceeds from food based sales purchased at Memorial Union food court go directly to the local animal shelters.

"The club also helps in the community through volunteer work, fundraising and education. "We bring in three to four adoptable dogs to our booth on Central Campus from loss or abused animals."

"We are open to anybody, whether they have animal experience or not."

Nate McCoy was the ideal golfer to lead Iowa State into the future. He played college golf for four years with his final two years being the most successful in the history of the sport.

McCoy's career was rife with success both on and off the course. He won numerous individual and team championships, and he also excelled academically, eventually earning his degree in business administration.

McCoy was a big part of the Cyclone golf team, and he always had the right way — he always did the right things on and off the course.

As a golfer, McCoy was a leader for his team and he was a role model for his younger teammates. He was always willing to help out and share his knowledge with others.

As a person, McCoy was a great friend and a great teammate. He was always there for his teammates when they needed him, and he was always there to lend a helping hand.

McCoy's impact on the program will be felt for years to come. He was a key part of the Cyclone golf team that won the 2010 NCAA Championship, and he was a big part of the Cyclone golf team that won the 2011 NCAA Championship.

McCoy was a great athlete, but he was also a great person. He was a great leader, and he was a great friend. He will be missed by all who knew him.

McCoy's career at Iowa State will be remembered for a long time. He was a great golfer, and he was a great person. He will be missed.

Grant, loan options available to students

By Zoe Woods

Funding a college education is an issue that many students have to deal with. The FAFSA form is one of the most crucial documents for students. For this reason, there are many different options for students to receive financial aid.

For students who have filled a FAFSA by March 1, there will be additional options for to consider for Federal Student Aid as well. The Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant, Federal Work-Study, and Federal Perkins Loan are all options students can consider.

However, if a student is looking to use a Federal Direct Stafford Loan, the promissory note needs to be submitted prior to the last day of classes, Johnson said. Students do have the option to not pay their government subsidized loans, but if the loan is not paid, the student will also be required to pay interest on the loan.

"Typically, parents loans can have significantly lower interest rates but usually students with strong enough scores can receive them," Johnson said. Even though private loans are available, "students should always take advantage of the federal loan options," Johnson stressed.

Federal loan options give a broad spectrum of students a chance to pay off their debts. There are seven different repayment options for the student. The Federal Direct Stafford Loan is supplemented by the Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant, Federal Work-Study, and Federal Perkins Loan.

The Financial Aid Office strongly encourages students to file a FAFSA form as federal funding is available to everyone.

The Federal Direct Stafford Loan is the most attractive because it does not have interest while the student is in school, Johnson said. Once the student graduates, the interest will be calculated on the amount of money available for the student to receive, Johnson said.

Federal options are still available to students through the FAFSA form in the Federal Grants and the Federal Direct Stafford Loan. The FAFSA form is available online or at the Student Financial Aid Office.
