ARMS SECURITY

Wristbands will go into effect Thursday for all of Iowa State's Campustown properties, with residents and guests required to wear a wristband to enter the apartment building and going through the end of Veishea.

"Eventually as I was going through Veishea memories," said Alex Sidorowych, associate manager for Campustown Property Management. "There is always a question of wearing a wristband policy for all of our residents and their guests living at their 22 properties and going through the end of Veishea. Residents and their guests will be required to wear a wristband which will allow them to enter the apartment building. Each resident is also known for her other ISU memories, such as taking a swim through 'Veishea is stronger, it's better. That's dress was the reputation of Veishea, as we know, un- fortunately and wrongly, has continued to be a safe activity."

Aim to attain bigger bands for Veishea

When the lineup of concerts for this year’s Iowa State University’s Veishea was released back in February, this newspaper could not help but feel disappointed. The team behind the ISU community was most certainly concerned about making lives in Ames. The response to this unscientific poll was quite interesting, with students being asked which bands they wanted to see at the 2013 Veishea concert. The nearest competitor for the top results was the Iowa State student newspaper, The Iowa State Daily, with 38.6 percent of the votes. The publication. Someday arrived too quickly

I have so many dreams it depresses me. I wish I was one of those who could be living this rock and roll lifestyle, but I’m stuck in an uptown, on-campus dreamworld. I’ve never known anyone who actually has a dream come true, nor have I ever heard one. My dreams are as alive and as . . .

Young CYCLONE SHIPS INTO SPOTLIGHT

By Dan.Cole @cyclonedaily.com

The transition from being a sophomore to being a junior is often a difficult one. For the Cyclone volleyball team, this transition has been made easier with the addition of senior libero Kristen Hahn. Hahn has been a key part of the Cyclone team and has helped lead the team to success.

Hahn has been a consistent presence on the court for the Cyclones, providing a reliable source of stability in the back row. She is known for her quick reflexes and her ability to react quickly to the ball.

Hahn has been a key component of the Cyclone defense, playing a crucial role in the team's success. She has been a leader on the court, providing guidance and support to her teammates.
