From idea to law: lifecycle of bills

Friday is the first ‘funneling’ deadline to stop bottlingchance in Iowa House, Senate

The Ways and Means and Appropriations Committees are not required to adhere to the funnel deadlines. For example, House File 4, which addresses the legality of late-term abortions, was sent to an oversight committee, a committee containing members from both chambers, by House Speaker Kris Fadala. If it passes, it will be subject to the funnel deadlines. After the approved file is sent to the floor, it will be up for discussion and debate in House and Senate standing committees.

Committee for Geoff Wood was always a social benefit of attending state meetings. Wood, in his 25-year tenure of Iowa House District 8A, ran the House Executive Committee, was an executive director of the student activities program, president of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity and graduated with a bachelor’s degree in economics and an MBA from Iowa State.

The committee is one of three where House members are assigned their departments. The committee meets weekly and is chaired by Rep. Mark Smith, R-Clintonville, and Rep. Bill Hemmer, R-Dubuque.

position and how much you might benefit from the deal.

Reynolds began by saying how great it got started. In high school, Reynolds does not know many different activities she could.

"Opportunities sometimes when you get ar- rivaled" Reynolds said. "Any time you have to get out of a comfort zone, even when it’s weird, I think that’s when you grow as a kid." Reynolds says she graduated from college, although she attended Northeastern Mississippi State University. Reynolds said this has always been something she feels comfortable talking about.

"You’re setting up classes right now, it’s a lot for me I think," Reynolds said. "Something I’ve always wanted to do some bad week,"

Reynolds started her career as a clerk in the Clarke County Treasurer’s Office before being hired as Clarke County Treasurer in 2014. Reynolds held that position and was elected as the Clarke County Treasurer in 2015 in June. Reynolds completed her first term in early 2017.

Reynolds said she feels very much like herself. "I think I’m a very driven person who needs structure," Reynolds said.

"I was actually interested in the concept that has been rumored and the information about the current government," Reynolds said. "I’m very interested in the future of our government and the current government." Reynolds says she has always been a strong advocate for the credit and the election process.

Reynolds also said she’s very much for right now.

"Most people start out in the public because they want to make a difference," Reynolds said. "We really see our representatives in the government try to let someone else do it for you."
The Multicultural Greek Council strives to make a name for itself on the Student Union Board (SUB), Iowa State University's student government. The council, represented by Executive Vice President Cynthia Salas Salgado, focuses on multicultural events and activities, including student leadership training and community service projects.

During the council's recent meeting, members discussed the need for greater visibility and representation. They noted that while the council has been active in planning events, it has struggled to gain recognition from other student groups and administration.

The council's goal is to increase its profile on campus by hosting more events and engaging with students from diverse backgrounds. They are particularly interested in collaborating with other student organizations to create a more inclusive campus environment.

Salas Salgado highlighted the importance of multicultural representation, stating, "We need to show that being multicultural isn't just about wearing different clothes or eating different foods. It's about understanding the experiences and values of others and finding ways to connect with them."

The council is looking for new members who are passionate about multiculturalism and are willing to put in the time and effort to bring their ideas to life. Interested students are encouraged to attend upcoming meetings or contact the council via email for more information.

For more information, visit the council's website at www.multiculturalgreekcouncil.org.

Vote Hoben/Knight for GSB

Government of the Student Body elections are coming up quickly, and it is time to think about student leadership on campus as the 2013-2014 year is here.

Within the student community, there are many political candidates vying for the student body president and vice president positions. All are currently running with their respective parties, hoping to be elected to positions that best serve the students. This is the most significant position of leadership on campus, and candidates are fighting fiercely for votes. To support the candidates, please campaign on the square and attend their forums. These are all easy running errands or going to a seminar and what I want to support.

Dakota Hoben and Jared Keebler are two great leaders who will be excellent candidates, as they have been working with a variety of students for years. As president and vice president, they will work to ensure that everyone on campus feels safe as well as comfortable and our voices are heard. Dakota and Jared have a vision of building and investing students at ISU.

Personally, personally, Dakota and Jared because they are both very involved on campus, inside and outside of GSB. Dakota and Jared are leaders with a mission.

Through these leadership opportunities, both Dakota and Jared have been able to develop a strong personal relationship with all the students on campus by building strong networks with students. They are both very involved in the campus and inside and outside of the ISU Student Senate.

The tall, brawny Hoben-Knight ticket is in the ceiling; this ticket is not a running errand, as we encourage you to do so in the same way as we in better Iowa State.

Makeup-free Mondays

I wake up at the dawning of a new Monday with Jodie Pidcock, a student leader and a sophomore at Iowa State University. As a student leader, Jodie has a lot on her plate. From being a member of the Student Senate, a leader of her sorority, and an active member of the Iowa State University Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Caucus, Jodie is always busy with her responsibilities.

I asked Jodie what being a student leader is like, and she replied, “It can be overwhelming at times, but I love it.”

Jodie explained that being a student leader is not just about managing her time, but also about prioritizing her responsibilities. “It’s important to prioritize your time, and make sure you’re taking care of yourself,” Jodie said.

Jodie also mentioned that being a student leader can be challenging at times, but it’s also incredibly rewarding. “I love seeing the impact I can make on my campus and my community, and knowing that I’m making a difference,” she said.

Jodie’s advice for anyone interested in becoming a student leader is to start small and work your way up. “Don’t be afraid to take on new responsibilities or try something new,” she said.

I asked Jodie what advice she would give to someone who is considering becoming a student leader, and she replied, “Take advantage of all the opportunities you can, and be willing to put in the work.”

Jodie also emphasized the importance of being a good role model for others. “I believe that being a good role model is crucial when you’re a student leader,” she said. “It’s important to set a good example for others, and to model the behaviors that you want to see in your community.”

Jodie concluded by saying, “I love being a student leader, and I’m excited to see where the future takes me.”

When Elaine Garrett, John Andrus, Dave Mitchell and Jenelle Vanderbrugge walk off the floor Friday night, whether that win or loss, their time to play at the Light and Oxygen Arena will be over.

All four seniors have taken really different paths to get to their final home game in their careers.

But they will all line up today as integral final pieces to the Hilton girls’ basketball team.

“All those girls will be raised tomorrow,” said J.D. Holberg. “People talk about the group of guys we’ve got sitting up, but we’re going to miss those four girls.”

Garrett has played all four years on the team.

Andrus, Vanderbrugge and Mitchell will miss another season.

The team lost three seniors and battled through injuries to show off their smooth strides. Andrus just arrived this season from Northern Illinois and made an immediate (and impressive) impact on the court to bring some much-needed guidance and additional depth.

Seniors State seeks revenge at home

Iowa State may only be three games in the Big 12, but the Cyclones have made an impact on all standings from Colorado to Kansas, but when the two teams meet at Hilton Coliseum on Wednesday afternoon (2 p.m.), the impact will be on full display.

The Cyclones (14-3, 4-2) are riding a three-game win streak against the Buffaloes (16-7, 3-5) and now have momentum on their side after coming off a big win over the Sooners in Norman. The Cyclones have scored at least 70 points in each of their last three games and will feel confident entering this final game for the season, but Colorado State has been a beast on offense and defense, so the Cyclones will need to be on their A-game.

“We know they’re going to come in here on a mission. We’ve got to come in here, play and extremely hard right from the jump,” Holberg said. “We’ve got to play well and the backcourt needs to have a big game.”

Famous films strike a hit with everyday fashion

BY ELIZABETH KRUHNER
ISD STYLE WRITER

Throughout the decade there have been many films that have sparked notorious fashion trends that consume our world today.

Just think of it! Almost every film that has hit the silver screen since the 1980s has featured films with a style that has been imitated by many women of all ages. From the 1983 movie “Breakfast at Tiffany’s” in which Audrey Hepburn donned the classic little black dress with over-sized sunglasses to today’s popular film “The Devil Wears Prada,” the trend of classic black dresses with over-sized sunglasses is still widely popular today.

A classic trendsetting film from the 1980s that every high school girl loved was “Clueless.” The tight little dress with black heels and plaid skirts became the must-have outfit for school. The knee-highs and platform shoes were used to complete the look and still is an easy style for today’s modern women.

Stay clear of a fashion faux paws.

If you’re lucky enough to have a little extra, just add a few more stylish accessories. As long as you think what you’re after, you’ll look fabulous, come what may. Purr-fectly pictured, cost from $9.95 – $34.95.

All products are available online at the websites of the distributors. These four films will help streamline your Friday night look and have you strutting through town.
