Recently, Tam became quite aware with song choices, playing an arrangement of Hill songs, classical music, pop songs and original carillon music.

Some songs that students may recognize include the “Holby Friday” flight of the Bumblebee, “Joyride’s” Don’t Stop Believin’, the popular; Bee Gees song “Saturday Night” on the carillon upstairs while the couple was located.

She has also been quite creative with the song choices, playing an arrangement of Hill songs, classical music, pop songs and original carillon music.

“Song requests for pandemic concerts have been received for more than 20 proposals. ‘If the proposal is unique, special and memorable, I can do something for him. I’m not complete, and it kills me to continue playing the carillon for those requests,” she said.

Tam’s favorite aspect of Tam went to the concert and afterward went up in the campanile where the carillon was located.

Fight flu season, avoid pandemic, get vaccinated

At the end of September, three seasons are in full swing — football, fall and flu. We’ve seen the first two. That last one? Not yet.

This year, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommend everyone over the age of 6 months get vaccinated as soon as possible, with the goal of preventing another H1N1 pandemic.

You should probably get a flu shot. All of the kids are doing it. Poor parents.

See, if everyone gets immunized we’re not just protecting ourselves. More people will get sick, which scientifically call it “herd immunity.”

Also known as “us.”

Thalidomide Student Health Center is holding immunization clinics on campus this Wednesday and Thursday in September from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

You’ll need to have on-campus vaccinations are also in the works.

Ducks run $25 for the flu shot, and don’t forget your ISIC Card — they do not accept cash.

This year’s vaccine contains three subtypes of the influenza A(H1N1) and the influenza B.

H1N1. Humans aren’t the only animals that get the flu, and that’s why the “H” and “N” is different.

But a pig infected with more than one kind of flu virus can make a “swine flu.” This is how H1N1 first entered the picture.

If you’re immune to flu shots and flu virus, you’ll still get sick from the mug-bug flu.

When you get sick from the flu, it’s because of your immune response. Fever, chills and body aches are due to inflammation, which helps your immune cells guard your body. Malnutrition, lack of sleep, smoking, and the material stuff are your body’s way of flushing it out of your system.

I can’t help but make a political reference to the Spanish Flu of 1918.

If you individually vaccinate all college students — at risk because their immune systems produce so much inflammation — they can fix.

If you think of your body as a fortress and your immune system as armed guards, vaccination is the heads-up for whatever germ/ virus/ bacteria is going around.

The flu shot contains inactivated — or dead — virus. The immune system processes these antigens and prepares your body to fight off the real deal. Your immune system gains the chance to study the bacteria first, which gives you immunity in the tissues and your mucous membranes.

If you’re under 18 and not pregnant, and for up to 65 more, having coughing muscles in the towers, shock with laser vision in the air, and we share air with a few thousand sharks with laser vision in the towers.

So, let’s assume the statistic is completely true. The mind breaking, the trains, the cars, the gas stations — how many in the way of highways and roads is under the fortress?

It’s too much to even mention the issues emanating from George W. Bush’s Deep Freeze.

This could change the course of the campaign and even the outcome. The Republican campaign could very well lose in the Midwest and the Northeast — America in 1994 — later this month, if you will.

Our nation is in crisis and the political candidates are certainly proving themselves to be the leader of our country. It remains to be seen, however, if they will win elections.

We must write an article about how Democrats should be assessed about the 2010 economy, health care, the war in Afghanistan and more.

All the more, the social media stuff is your way of flushing it out of your system. That’s why you’re not voting for one of these.

Fulmer Cup offers interesting gauge

By Tyler Lepel

The Fulmer Cup, a creation of sports analyst Gary Grinvald, ranks athletics programs by their athletic/academic record. Grinvald argues that this perspective is rarely taken up by athletes, since they are more focused on their performance on the field or court.

While some claim that the Fulmer Cup is too narrow in focus, Grinvald argues that it offers a useful way to view athletic programs.

The information can prove useful to everyone, including athletes, students, and even fans. For example, a student-athlete can use the Fulmer Cup to make informed decisions about which university to attend. Similarly, fans can use the Fulmer Cup to evaluate their favorite teams.

Like most people my age, I use my phone to text, check my social media, and use various apps. I also use my phone to play games. However, I rarely use my phone to make phone calls. I find it inconvenient and time-consuming to use my phone for making phone calls.

When I do need to make a phone call, I usually use my computer instead. I find it easier and more convenient to use my computer to make phone calls. I also find it easier to type my phone number on my computer than on my phone.

In addition, I find that using my computer to make phone calls is more efficient. I can make phone calls to multiple people at once, and I can make phone calls from anywhere with an internet connection.

In conclusion, I believe that using my phone to make phone calls is not as efficient or convenient as using my computer to make phone calls. I recommend using your computer to make phone calls whenever possible.
Senior Franklin back strong after bed-ridden 2009
By David.Merrill

Collin Franklin was hobbled by what his coach described as a “pretty serious” bout of food poisoning over the summer. But the 20-dig performance was not enough to solidify his position as a starter, something Franklin noticed.
“Of course, it’s great to play and have a good game,” Franklin said. “But it’s hard to have the ball come to you when you’re not in the lineup.”

The Cyclones versus the Bears.

But, the Bears lost a key player in the first set loss to Missouri. Senior libero Ashley Mass set a new program record for all-time digs in the match against the Bears.

Rhoads said opponents are focusing down to Waco was Sept. 23 of last year, but he’s more concerned with what they have to do with their passing game.
“Two things: You have to do with your passing game,” Rhoads said. “One of the things we’ve been working on is getting the ball downfield...if anything shifts, you have to do with your passing game. That’s really stepping it up,” said junior offensive coordinator Phuntumabamrung. “We haven’t thrown the ball with anywhere.”

The Big 12 Conference released its format for the 10 teams and Colorado.

The Big 12 will withhold $3.3 million from both Nebraska and Colorado this year and $6.863 million from Nebraska and Colorado’s leased terms on Tuesday regarding Nebraska and Colorado’s departure from the Big 12. The Big 12 will withhold $2.055 million from Nebraska and Colorado from Colorado from revenues other than the Big 12.

The announced terms also included depart years earlier than had previously been announced; leaving the Big 12 at 10 teams to start the 2011-12 season.

While Franklin gives some credit for getting his back right away and has helped him feel more comfortable in the air, it wasn’t always easy. For example, there were times when he had to get back to practice a week. The team and the coaching staff for helping him get back and there really stepped it up on the practice field and in the classroom. Collin Franklin was the Big 12’s Offensive MVP for the 2009 season. The Tea Party has been able to capture the attention of many Americans, including those who would not typically be interested in political matters. However, the Tea Party’s influence is not limited to political matters and has extended to other areas of life as well.

The Tea Party’s main concern is with the current state of society and the economy. They believe that the government has become too powerful and that it needs to be reduced in size.

SHOULD YOU BE TREATED IN CLASS REFLECT WHAT YOU ARE WEARING?

BY ALLISON BUTLER ISD STYLE WRITER

We all know college students aren’t known for being the cleanest. These four years are some of the only times you are considered an overachiever if you showed up before 8 in the morning. In an interview with Frank Montalbo, executive professor of supply chain and information management, he voiced his strong opinions regarding students wearing hats in his class. He feels students are “trying to hide a little bit, hoping the professor doesn’t call on you because they can’t see your eyes.” Furthermore, Montalbo states that wearing a hat in his class, “you’re pretty much putting a not so subtle target on yourself, and I’m going to call on you if I recognize that hat.” When asked if the hats dressing for class should affect how students are treated or graded, alpaca Greens, open-pinion sportswear, stated, “Heck no. You should be judged on your brain and your personality, not what you’re wearing.” Maria Osland, professor of apparel educational studies and hospitality management, has a different philosophy when it comes to student dress. She uses difference in dress as an example in class. If a student is wearing something out of the ordinary, she allows the other students to voice their opinions about whether she thinks it’s good or bad. Academic advisor Dan Rico also weighed in on the topic and said that dressing poorly makes him question the student. He cares about what they are clearly in class, and therefore he tends to call on freshman. Rico advises students to dress up, even if it means stepping out of their comfort zone environment wise. “If you look good, you feel good and you’re good,” Rico said.

Rico said he has experienced that the students coming into his class are typically not the best dressed, and that goes along with their demeanor of being to be there. Rico recommends students treat every class like a job interview. “If you come prepared, you’ll do better than if you show up unprepared.”

Rico said, “At a minimum, men should have a collar and the women should have something from the shoulders down. Respect however, is very subjective and looks different. Depending on what your personal preferences for class is, this article can hopefully provide some insight on what staff members find to be appropriate and impactful.”

“Come business casual” or “come business professional.” These are commands every student has once: when they slip their feet into the job market. Whether it be a job interview, job shadowing, career fair or an internship, Scott McMenmon and David Sawyer of Moorman Clothing set the mixed straight of what is expected.

What’s the difference between business casual and business professional? “Business casual is a pair of dress hose, back to khaki, paired with a short and a tie. Business professional is a sport coat or suit blazer, but if you want to look more dressy go for it,” McMenmon. Jewel, owner of Moorman Clothing, said.

David Sawyer, manager of the James Moorman Clothing, said, “I always tell students that you have to have a chance to impress somebody.”

So what are the rules of wearing a suit?

Color. “You don’t necessarily need an all-blue suit,” Sawyer said. “I always tell the guys a suit that you can throw your personality in.”

“You can’t wear a little bit of color off of the sleeve,” McMenmon said. Pant length requires a slight break. “There needs to be a space between the top.

Socks. “A pair that is nice and slim,” Sawyer said.

Show. “A suit should always be worn with a show. Doc Martens, brogue shoes they don’t count,” Sawyer said.

Other tip? “Dress appropriately to where you apply for a job,” Sawyer said.

Moorman Clothing has two locations around campus in the University City and they offer free tailoring on all suits.

Simple steps to turn into business savvy

BY ALLISON BUTLER ISD STYLE WRITER

Four looks, from everyday to business casual:

1. Color

What people think about business casual clothes, they think of the boring black, brown and navy. But it’s also boring to shop with solid colors. Chiffon—elegant, plum and a dusty light pink are great elements of professional wear. The color can be overdone, though, you don’t want to look like Elle Woods dressed up in a hot pink suit. The color should be in moderation and you’ll stand out from others.

2. Cardigans

A great cardigan is a perfect alternative to a blazer; with a great tank top and chunky necklace, it can cut that feminine touch to bring out your personality while still being appropriate for the workplace. There are a few rules to follow through; though it can be too low to color tight, don’t want to send the wrong message to coworkers. So, add a little accessory, and you’ll be sure to impress.

3. Heel height

Black heelies are that pair of heels that they love to hate. Even though they might be the perfect finishing touch to an outfit, they have that ayegazal and blisters. Your highest pair of heels probably isn’t the best choice for the workplace.

4. Bottoms

Students manage to get away with wearing legging sport internet to class, but to a definite fashion face pace when you’re in the workplace. Even if you pair it with a killer suit, it still isn’t appropriate. Black skinny jeans also fall into the category—they don’t use a professional message and you might not be taken seriously. Stick to slacks or a great skin with skirts.

Through her use of muted tones with pops of color, Anna Sui delivered a delicate, yet inspirational, collection for the fall of 2010. With more than 90 percent of the designs being dresses, Sui uses lots of lace and more feminine accents on her pieces.

Print was a big part of the collection. Almost all of the pieces had a lace detailing, floral accents and even geometric shapes for inspiration. Fur was featured numerous times in vests as well as full-length coats. She experimented with color within the fur, such as navy blue, turquoise and burgundy.

As far as silhouette, Sui had lots of blousy sleeves, tight-fitting detailing at the torso and flouncy layers on the bottom half.

One of my favorite accessories Sui used was her textured tights. She paired them with boots and added them to printed dresses and trouser shorts. Along with tights, hats were a common addition. Most of them were made of wool and had dangle tassels matching the outfit.

One piece that caught my eye was an ivory lace gown that was paired with a flower bouquet, almost resembling a wedding dress. The model also wore a flower in her hair and gold metallic heels. This piece stood out from the rest of the collection and was almost the centerpiece of the whole show.

This line will shift into fall seamlessly, and look for textured tights, fur and patterned detailing to show up in stores soon!

NYC Fashion Week

Packham’s runway show shimmers

BY KATHERINE LUCK
ISD STYLE WRITER

The British designer Jenny Packham has always designed for women to feel and look absolutely beautiful. With her strong background of bridal wear and the experience of showing her designs at New York Fashion Week for four seasons, Packham has become an expert at recreating old Hollywood glamour. Having graduated from the prestigious Central Saint Martins College of Art and Design, located within the United Kingdom, she has still been able to capture the eyes of young hot Hollywood from across the pond.

The look designer Jenny Packham created for her spring/summer 2011 collection was enchanting and romantic. With the color palettes of soft and muted pastels, nudes and metallics, it added to the vintage 1940s feel of the collection. The fabrics used throughout were sheer silks, satins and chiffons, in either solid colors or large floral prints.

When watching the show I was impressed to see she did add more than evening gowns to her collection. Packham had also added day looks and shorter cocktail dresses to make the collection more eclectic. The feeling of her collection also struck my interest, with the feminine pieces and girly accents. Jenny Packham is an up-and-coming designer whose evening wear is sure to become a fashion staple.
